ATOMIC ENERGY

Commissariat à l'Energie Atomique (Atomic Energy Commissariat) 29-33 rue de la Fédération, Paris 15^e; f. 1945; High Commr. FRANCIS PERRIN; Admin-Gen. (Government Delegate) ROBERT HIRSCH; Dir. of the Cabinet of the High Commission ANDRÉ GAUVENET.

The Commissariat is under the direct authority of the Prime Minister. A minister is Chargé des Affaires Atomiques; ALAIN PEYREFITTE holds this post. It is a public corporation with administrative and financial independence from the Government, with responsibilities in scientific research, technical development and industry.

Under the second five-year atomic energy plan (1957-61), it was arranged that the Commissariat should cease to have sole responsibility for atomic energy in France. It is now divided between the Commissariat and other government agencies and public corporations, led by Electricité de France, together with some of the leading industrial firms.

Administration is in the hands of a ten-member Comité de l'Energie Atomique (Atomic Energy Committee), consisting of government officials and representatives of science and industry.

Advisory Agencies to the Commissariat

Scientific Council: Pres. LOUIS DE BROGLIE
Mines Committee: Pres. Prof MARCEL ROUBAULT.

ANDORRA

The Franco-Spanish Seigneurie of Andorra is situated in the Eastern Pyrenees.

Area, Location, Language, Population, Capital

The small principality of Andorra consists of 465 square kilometres in the Eastern Pyrenees, bounded by France and Spain, and lying about half way between Barcelona and Toulouse. The official language is Catalan. The population numbers about 13,850 of whom nearly 4,000 are Andorrans. The national colours are blue, yellow and red. The capital is Andorra la Vella.

Constitution

Andorra is a principality, under the suzerainty of France and the Spanish Bishop of Urgel. The valleys pay a bi-annual tax to France and to the Bishop of Urgel. France is represented in Andorra by the Viguier de France, and the Bishop by the Viguier Episcopal. Each co-ruler has set up a permanent delegation for Andorran Affairs. The Prefect of the East Pyrenees is the Permanent Delegate of the French Co-Prince.

Government

Episcopal Co-Prince: H.E. Dr. RAMÓN IGLESIAS NAVARRI, Bishop of Urgel.

French Co-Prince: H.E. General CHARLES DE GAULLE.

General Council of the Valleys

This council submits motions and proposals to the permanent delegation. The twenty-four members represent the parishes of Andorra and are elected for four years, half the Council being renewed every two years. All citizens of the age of 21 and over may vote. The Council nominates the First Syndic (Syndic Procureur Général) and the Second Syndic, who must not be members of the Council.

First Syndic: JULIAN REIG.

Second Syndic: JOSEF BARÓ.

The Legal System

Civil Law: judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by two civil judges (Bayles), one appointed by the Viguier de France and the other by the Viguier Episcopal. There is a Judge of Appeal appointed alternatively by France and Spain, and in the third instance (Tercera Sala) cases are heard in the Supreme Court of Andorra at Perpignan or in the court at Urgel.

Criminal Law: is administered by Tribunal des Corts, consisting of the two Viguiers, the Judge of Appeal, the two Bayles and two members of the Council General.

Economic Affairs

Andorra's products are mainly agricultural, cereals, potatoes, tobacco and vegetables being the principal crops. Livestock is raised and there are approximately 25,000 sheep, 3,000 cattle and 1,000 horses. There is a milk farm outside the capital. Andorra la Vella is a great market for all European goods as there are no customs. Many Catalonians and other foreigners trade in the principality.

Religion

The population is entirely Catholic and the territory is included in the Spanish Suffragan Sec of Urgel; Mgr. RAMÓN IGLESIAS NAVARRI.

Radio

Radio-Andorra: Roc des Ancellets, Andorra La Vella; Gen. Man. M. DEGOY; privately owned, broadcasts neither news nor political comment; publ. La Voz de Radio Andorra (monthly), Bulletin d'Information (weekly).

Radio des Vallées d'Andorre: 7 ave. Meritxell, Andorre La Vella; Pres M. BARBET; Dir. CLAUDE DELEPINE; daily transmissions on short and medium wave-lengths.

Finance

French and Spanish currencies are in use. There is a 3 per cent levy on alcohol and motor fuels. There is no income tax, death duty or customs.

Banks

Banc Agricol i Comercial d'Andorra: B.P. 21, Andorra La Vella; f. 1930; Chair. M. CERQUEDA.

Banca Cassany: 41 Avinguda Meritxell, Andorra La Vella; f. 1958; Dir. R. PARRAMON; Deputy Dir. R. MORESGUI.

Banca Coma: Dir. E. BORRÀS.

Crèdit Andorrà: Man. Dir. M. J. BANSSELL.

Banca Mora: Chair. B. MORA.

Societat de Banca Andorrana: Man. Dir. J. PERELLO.

Banca Reig: Chair. S. REIG.

Production

Andorra produces iron, lead, alum, stone and timber. Sheep raising and tourism are important industries.

Transport

A good road connects the French and Spanish frontiers (7,800 feet). There are about 4,600 automobiles in Andorra. There is a motor bus service between Andorra La Vella and Seo de Urgel in Spain, Barcelona-Bourg-Modane and Perpignan in France.

Tourism

Sindicat d'Initiativa de les valls d'Andorra: Andorra la Vella.

Andorra is much visited by tourists, winter and summer. In winter many slopes are used for skiing and in summer the high fields are occupied by campers. There are about 800,000 visitors a year.

THE FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY AND BERLIN (WEST)

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Federal Republic of Germany lies in the heart of Europe between 47° and 55° north latitude and 6° and 23° east longitude. Its neighbours to the west are the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and France, to the south Switzerland and Austria, to the east Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic, and to the north Denmark. Its climate is temperate, with an average annual temperature of 48°F, although there are considerable variations between the North German lowlands and the Bavarian Alps. The language is German. Approximately half the population belongs to the Evangelical Church, 45 per cent to the Roman Catholic Church, and the remainder to smaller religious groups. The flag consists of three horizontal stripes—black, red and gold. The capital is Bonn.

Recent History

After the military defeat of the Third Reich in 1945, the Allied Powers drew up the Potsdam Agreement whereby Germany was divided into four zones of occupation. In 1949 the Federal Republic of Germany was formed from the American, British and French zones. In 1957 the Saarland was added to the Federal Republic.

By 1965 the Federal Government of Germany had paid DM 28,500 million in restitution to individual persons and countries which suffered under Nazi persecution. In May 1965 diplomatic relations were established with Israel.

Since 1949, under the Chancellorship of Dr. Konrad Adenauer and the economic leadership of Dr. Erhard, Germany has recovered dramatically from the war, becoming one of the richest countries in Europe. Dr. Erhard succeeded Dr. Adenauer as Chancellor in October 1963, and retained this position following the General Election of September 1965, which resulted in victory for the ruling CDU/CSU Party.

Germany has played a leading part in developing the European Economic Community (the Common Market) and in other moves towards unifying Western Europe. In June, 1963, Dr. Adenauer and General de Gaulle signed the Franco-German Pact and in August, 1963, the Federal Republic signed the nuclear test ban treaty proposed and signed by the U.S.S.R., the United States and the United Kingdom.

Government

The Federal Republic comprises ten states (Länder). The legislative organ is the Bundestag, which is elected for four years by universal suffrage. The Länder are represented in the legislature by the Bundesrat, whose members are appointed and recalled by the Länder themselves. In addition to the ten Länder West Berlin is represented in the Bundestag and in the Bundesrat in a consultative capacity.

The Federal Government, which is headed by a Chancellor elected by an absolute majority of the Bundestag, is responsible for the foreign affairs and defence of the Republic and for such matters as citizenship, migration, currency, customs, railways, posts and telecommunications.

Each of the Länder has its own parliament, which has the right to pass laws except in such matters as are the exclusive right of the Federation. Both education and police are in the control of the Länder.

Local responsibility for the execution of Federal and State Laws is undertaken by the Gemeinden (communes) and Landkreise (counties).

Defence

As a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) and the Western European Union since 1954, Federal Germany undertook to supply twelve divisions, and formation of these was completed in 1964. Conscription has been in force since 1957 and lasts for a period of eighteen months. By 1965 the strength of the Armed Forces stood at 438,000 (Army 278,000, Air Force 97,000, Navy 35,000, Territorial Army 28,000). Defence estimates for 1966 total 17,500 million DM. France and Great Britain co-operate with Federal Germany in combined training schemes and military exercises.

Economic Affairs

Since the currency reform of 1948 the Federal Republic of Germany has entirely reconstructed its economy and is today the second largest trading nation in the world. Between 1950 and 1960 industrial production was more than doubled—a rate of growth surpassing that of any other European country. Manufacturing, mining and building are the largest sectors and have expanded most; next in importance come trade, transport and services. Agriculture, forestry and fishing have expanded less rapidly and some farming practices remain surprisingly backward. Federal Germany has virtually full employment and in 1965 imported 1,164,000 workers from abroad, chiefly from Southern Europe. The heavy initial flow of labour from East Germany has come to an end.

The Federal Republic supplies much economic aid and technical assistance to underdeveloped countries and has contributed large sums to international development agencies.

Transport and Communications

The Federal Republic has a highly developed system of transport by rail, inland waterways, road and air. Over £5,000 million pounds were invested in the field of transport and communications between 1949 and 1960. Under a 10-year road-building plan 7,000 miles of Federal roads are to be repaired or enlarged by 1967, and 620 miles constructed. In the same period over a thousand miles will be added to the motor highway system. The railways have been modernised and the shipping fleet redeveloped after the run-down of the war and the immediate post-war years. The canals linking the rivers Rhine, Main and Danube are being widened and deepened to form a trading route linking the North Sea with the Black Sea.

FEDERAL GERMANY—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

Social Welfare

Social legislation in the Federal Republic, tracing its origins back to 1881, provides insurance for health, accident, old-age, disability, and unemployment. The schemes for disability, old-age and unemployment insurance are compulsory for all employees, and over 80 per cent of the population is covered by national health insurance. More than 28 per cent of the expenditure of the Federal Budget goes to social security contributions.

Education

Education is compulsory from the end of the sixth to the eighteenth year, and eight years must be full-time. Attendance at the basic school (Grundschule) is obligatory for all children during the first four years of their school life, after which they may continue in the elementary school, as do 80 per cent of the pupils, or proceed to the intermediate or high school. Attendance at elementary schools is free and increasingly so at other schools.

There are in the Federal Republic twenty-eight universities and technical colleges, as well as a number of colleges specialising in individual subjects. In 1964 there were 209,273 students at Universities.

Tourism

Germany's tourist attractions—spas, summer and winter resorts, mountains, the Rhineland, mediæval towns and villages—are too well-known to need description. In 1964 over six million people visited Germany. 1.2 million beds are available in hotels, guest houses and private houses.

Receipts from tourism totalled $688 million in 1964; and expenditure totalled $1,282.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Afghanistan, Andorra, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Central African Republic, Ceylon, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Congo (Brazzaville), Costa Rica, Cyprus, Dahomey, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Ghana, Greece, Guadeloupe, Guam, Guinea, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Laos, Liberia, Libya, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Martinique, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, The Netherlands, New Caledonia, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Puerto Rico, Rwanda, San Marino, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tanzania, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, U.S.A., Upper Volta, Uruguay, Venezuela and Zambia.

Sport

Sport in the Federal Republic is highly organised. There are in 1964 33,000 sports clubs with a membership of 5.7 million; 14,000 football clubs, 65,000 teams and two million members; 8,000 gymnastic clubs with 1½ million members. Other popular sports are athletics, shooting, handball, swimming, table tennis and tennis.

Public Holidays

The main public holidays are January 1 (New Year's Day), Easter Monday, Whit Monday, June 17 (East Berlin Rising), Buss-und-Betttag (Day of Atonement, movable feast in November), December 25, 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The principal currency unit is the Deutsche Mark (DM), which is divided into 100 pfennigs.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10 and 50 pfennigs; 1, 2, and 5 Deutsche Mark.

Notes: 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 Deutsche Mark.

Exchange rate: 11.20 DM = £1 sterling
4 DM = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE Basic Law of 1949 was and is intended as a provisional Constitution to serve until a permanent one for Germany as a whole can be drawn up. The Parliamentary Council which framed it set out to continue the tradition of the Constitution read out in the Paulskirche, in Frankfurt/Main, during the revolution of 1848-49, and to preserve some continuity with subsequent German constitutions (with Bismarck's Constitution of 1871, and with the Weimar Constitution of 1919) while avoiding the mistakes of the past. It contains 146 articles, divided into 11 sections, and introduced by a short preamble:

I. Basic Rights

The opening articles of the Constitution guarantee the dignity of man, the free development of his personality, the equality of all men before the law, and freedom of faith and conscience. Men and women shall have equal rights, and no one may be prejudiced because of sex, descent, race, language, homeland and origin, faith, or religious or political opinion.

No one may be compelled against his conscience to perform war service as a combatant (Art. 4). All Germans have the right to assemble peacefully and unarmed and to form associations and societies. Everyone has the right freely to express and to disseminate his opinion through speech, writing or pictures. Freedom of the press and freedom of reporting by radio and motion pictures are guaranteed (Art. 5). Censorship is not permitted.

The State shall protect marriage and the family, property and the right of inheritance. The care and upbringing of children is the natural right of parents. Illegitimate children shall be given the same conditions for their development and their position in society as legitimate children. Schools are under the supervision of the State. Religion forms part of the curriculum in the State schools, but parents have the right to decide whether the child shall receive religious instruction (Art. 7).

A man's dwelling is inviolable; house searches may be made only by Court Order. No German may be deprived of his citizenship if he would thereby become stateless. The politically persecuted enjoy the right of asylum (Art. 16).

II. The Federation and the Länder

Article 20 describes the Federal Republic (Bundesrepublik Deutschland) as a democratic and social federal state. The colours of the Federal Republic are to be black-red-gold, the same as those of the Weimar Republic. Each Land within the Federal Republic has its own Constitution, which must, however, conform to the principles laid down in the basic law. All Länder, districts and parishes must have a representative assembly resulting from universal, direct, free, equal and secret elections (Art. 28). The exercise of the power of state is the concern of the Länder, in so far as the Basic Law does not otherwise prescribe. Where there is incompatibility, Federal Law supersedes Land Law (Art. 31). Every German has in each Land the same civil rights and duties.

Political parties may be freely formed in all the states of the Federal Republic, but their internal organisation must conform to democratic principles, and they must publicly account for the sources of their funds. Parties which seek to impair or abolish the free and democratic basic order or to jeopardise the existence of the Federal Republic of Germany are unconstitutional (Art. 21). So are activities tending to disturb the peaceful relations between nations, and, especially, preparations for aggressive war, but the Federation may join a system of mutual collective security in order to preserve peace. The rules of International Law shall form part of Federal Law and take precedence over it and create rights and duties directly for the inhabitants of the Federal territory (Art. 25).

The territorial composition of the Länder shall be reorganised with due regard to regional unity, territorial and cultural connections, economic expediency and social structure.

III. The Bundestag

The deputies of the Lower House or Bundestag shall be elected by the people in universal, free, equal, direct and secret elections, for a term of four years.* Any person who has reached the age of 21 is eligible to vote and any person who has reached the age of 25 is eligible for election (Art. 38). A deputy may be arrested for a punishable offence only with the permission of the Bundestag, unless he be apprehended in the act or during the following day.

The Bundestag elects its President and draws up its Standing Orders. Most decisions of the House require a majority vote. Its meetings are public, but the public may be excluded by the decision of a two-thirds majority. Upon the motion of one-quarter of its members the Bundestag is obliged to set up an investigation committee.

IV. The Bundesrat

The Federal Council or Bundesrat is the Upper House through which the Länder participate in the legislation and the administration of the Federation. The Bundesrat consists of members of the Land governments, which can appoint and recall them (Art. 51). Each Land has at least three votes; Länder with more than two million inhabitants have four, and those with more than six million inhabitants have five. The votes of each Land may only be given as a block vote. The Bundesrat elects its President for one year. Its decisions are taken by simple majority vote. Meetings are in public, but the public may be excluded. The members of the Federal Government have the right, and, on demand, the obligation, to participate in the debates of the Bundesrat.

V. The Bundespräsident

The Federal President or Bundespräsident is elected by the Federal Convention (Bundesversammlung), consisting of the members of the Bundestag and an equal number of members elected by the Länder Parliaments (Art. 54). Every German eligible to vote in elections for the Bundestag and over 40 years of age is eligible for election. The candidate who obtains an absolute majority of votes is elected, but if such majority is not achieved by any candidate in two ballots, whoever receives most votes in a

* The elections of 1949 were carried out on the basis of direct election. But in January 1953 the draft of a new electoral law was completed by the Federal Government and passed shortly before the dissolution. The new law represents a compromise between direct election and proportional representation, and is designed to discourage the rise of many small parties.

further ballot becomes President. The President's term of office is five years. Immediate re-election is admissible only once. The Federal President must not be a member of the Government or of any legislative body or hold any salaried office. Orders and instructions of the President require the counter-signature of the Federal Chancellor or competent Minister, except for the appointment or dismissal of the Chancellor or the dissolution of the Bundesstag.

The President represents the Federation in International Law and accredits and receives envoys. The Bundesstag or the Bundesrat may impeach the President before the Federal Constitutional Court on account of wilful violation of the Basic Law or of any other Federal Law (Art. 61).

VI. The Bundesregierung

The Federal Government (Bundesregierung) consists of the Federal Chancellor (Bundeskanzler) and the Federal Ministers (Bundesminister). The Chancellor is elected by an absolute majority of the Bundesstag on the proposal of the Federal President (Art. 63). Ministers are appointed and dismissed by the President upon the proposal of the Chancellor. Neither he nor his Ministers may hold any other salaried office. The Chancellor determines general policy and assumes responsibility for it, but within these limits each Minister directs his department individually and on his own responsibility. The Bundesstag may express its lack of confidence in the Chancellor only by electing a successor with the majority of its members; the President must then appoint the person elected (Art. 67). If a motion of the Chancellor for a vote of confidence does not obtain the support of the majority of the Bundesstag, the President may, upon the proposal of the Chancellor, dissolve the House within twenty-one days, unless it elects another Chancellor within this time (Art. 68).

VII. The Legislation of the Federation

The right of legislation lies with the Länder in so far as the Basic Law does not specifically accord legislative powers to the Federation. Distinction is made between fields of exclusive legislation of the Federation and fields of concurrent legislation of Bund and Länder. In the field of concurrent legislation the Länder may legislate so long and so far as the Federation makes no use of its legislative right. The Federation has this right only in so far as a matter cannot be effectively regulated by Land legislation, or the regulation by Land Law would prejudice other Länder, or if the preservation of legal or economic unity demands regulation by Federal Law. Exclusive legislation of the Federation is strictly limited to such matters as foreign affairs, citizenship, migration, currency, copyrights, customs, railways, post and telecommunications. In most other fields, as enumerated (Art. 74), concurrent legislation exists.

The legislative organ of the Federation is the Bundesstag, into which Bills are introduced by the Government, by members of the Bundesstag or by the Bundesrat (Art. 76). After their adoption they must be submitted to the Bundesrat, which may demand, within two weeks, that a committee of members of both houses be convened to consider the Bill (Art. 77). In so far as its express approval is not needed, the Bundesrat may veto a law within one week.

An alteration of the Basic Law requires a majority of two-thirds in both houses, but an amendment by which the division of the Federation into Länder and the basic principles contained in Articles 1 and 20 would be affected, is inadmissible (Art. 79).

The Federal Government or the Länder Governments may be authorised by law to issue ordinances. A state of legislative emergency for a Bill can be declared by the President on the request of the Government with the approval of the Bundesrat. If then the Bundesstag again rejects the Bill, it may be deemed adopted nevertheless in so far as the Bundesrat approves it. An emergency must not last longer than six months and may not be declared more than once during the term of office of any one Government (Art. 81).

VIII. The Execution of Federal Laws and the Federal Administration

The Länder execute the Federal Laws as their own concern in so far as the Basic Law does not otherwise determine. In doing so, they regulate the establishment of the authorities and the administrative procedure, but the Federal Government exercises supervision in order to ensure that the Länder execute the Federal Laws in an appropriate manner. For this purpose the Federal Government may send commissioners to the Land authorities (Art. 84). Direct Federal administration is foreseen for the Foreign Service, Federal finance, Federal railways, postal services, Federal waterways and shipping.

In order to avert imminent danger to the existence of the democratic order, a Land may call in the police forces of other Länder; and if the Land in which the danger is imminent is itself not willing or able to fight the danger, the Federal Government may place the police in the Land, or the police forces in other Länder, under its instructions (Art. 91).

IX. The Administration of Justice

Judicial authority is invested in independent judges, who are subject only to the law and who may not be dismissed or transferred against their will (Art. 97).

Justice is exercised by the Federal Constitutional Court, by the Supreme Federal Court, by the Federal Courts and by the Courts of the Länder. The Federal Constitutional Court decides on the interpretation of the Basic Law in cases of doubt on the compatibility of Federal Law or Land Law with the Basic Law, and on disputes between the Federation and the Länder or between different Länder. The Supreme Federal Court decides in cases where the decision is of importance for the uniformity of the administration of justice of the Higher Federal Courts. Higher Federal Courts are to be established for the spheres of ordinary, administrative, finance, labour and social jurisdiction. Extraordinary courts are inadmissible.

The freedom of the individual may be restricted only on the basis of a law. No one may be prevented from appearing before his lawful judge (Art. 101). Detained persons may be subjected neither to physical nor to mental ill-treatment. The police may hold no one in custody longer than the end of the day following the arrest without the decision of a court. Any person temporarily detained must be brought before a judge who shall inform him of the reasons of his arrest, at the latest on the following day. A person enjoying the confidence of the detainee must be notified forthwith of any continued duration of a deprivation of liberty. An act may be punished only if it was punishable by law before the act was committed, and no one may be punished more than once on account of the same criminal act. The death sentence shall be abolished.

X. Finance

The Federation has the right of exclusive legislation only on customs and financial monopolies; on most other taxes, especially on income, property and inheritance, it has concurrent legislation rights with the Länder (see VII above).

Customs, financial monopolies, excise taxes (with exception of the beer tax), the transportation tax, the turnover tax and property dues serving non-recurrent purposes are administered by Federal finance authorities, and the revenues thereof accrue to the Federation. The remaining taxes are administered, as a rule, by the Länder and the Gemeinden to which they accrue. The Federation and the Länder shall be self-supporting and independent of each other in their budget economy (Art. 109). In order to ensure the working efficiency of the Länder with low revenues and to equalise the differing burden of expenditure of the Länder, the Federation may, however, make grants, and take the necessary funds from specific taxes accruing to the Länder. All revenues and expenditures of the Federation must be estimated for each fiscal year and included in the budget, which must be established by law before the beginning of the fiscal year. Decisions of the Bundestag or the Bundesrat which increase the budget expenditure proposed by the Federal Government require its approval (Art. 113).

FEDERAL GERMANY—(THE CONSTITUTION)

XI. Transitional and Concluding Provisions

The Articles 116–146 regulate a number of disconnected matters of detail, such as the relation between the old Reich and the Federation, the Federal Government and Allied High Commission, the expenses for occupation costs which have to be borne by the Federation, and the status of former German nationals who now may regain their citizenship. Article 143 contains the threat of severe punishment to those who attempt to change by force the constitutional order of the Federation or of a Land, or to prevent the Federal President by force or the threat of danger from exercising his powers.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

Between July 1952, when legislation for the ratification of the E.D.C. Treaty was first put before the Bundestag, and March 1954, when the process of ratification was completed, the Federal Government had at intervals referred to the Constitutional Court to determine whether an amendment of the Constitution would be necessary.

On March 7th, 1953, in response to the Government's application, the Constitutional Court announced that it could give no ruling as to the constitutional legality or otherwise of the legislation until this had been passed by Parliament. Accordingly, the two Bills, one for the ratification of the E.D.C. and one for the ratification of the Bonn Conventions, were given their third reading in the Bundestag on March 9th, 1953, and both were ratified. On May 15th the ratification Bills were passed by the Bundesrat. The elections of September 1953 gave Dr. Adenauer's Government the majority necessary to make changes in the Federal Constitution, and an amending Bill was presented to the Bundestag in February 1954. This received its second and third readings on February 26th, 1954, and was passed by 334 votes to 144, the Government majority of 190 being 9 more than the two-thirds necessary to make constitutional changes.

This Bill:

- (1) Laid down under an amendment to Article 73 of the Basic Law that the Federal Parliament had full powers to legislate in all matters relating to national defence "including obligatory national service for men over 18 years of age".
- (2) Introduced a new article (142A) which declared that "the treaties signed in Bonn and Paris on May 26th and 27th, 1952 (i.e. the Bonn Conventions and E.D.C. Treaty) were not contrary to the Federal Constitution".

The effect of the amendment was to empower the Federal Government to raise forces for the E.D.C. or for any similar organisation which might come into being, to avoid continual recourse to the Constitutional Court.

Since these Amendments to the Constitution were adopted, the treaties concerned (the Bonn Conventions and the E.D.C.) have themselves lapsed, but the Amendments would apply equally to the new instruments drawn up as a result of the London Conference of September 1954.

SOVEREIGNTY AND RESPONSIBILITY

Until September 1954 the operation of the Basic Law was conditioned by two further instruments: the first, the Occupation Statute of 1949 (with subsequent amendments) defining the rights and obligations of the United States, Great Britain and France with respect to Germany, and the second, the Bonn Conventions, designed to replace the Occupation Statute and to grant almost full sovereignty to the German people. There was unforeseen delay in putting the Bonn Conventions into force, simply because they were linked with the European Defence Community Treaty (that is to say the two were bound to come into force simultaneously), and this E.D.C. Treaty had not been ratified by France. The position from May 1952 until September 1954 was therefore that the Occupation Statute (with Amendments) was still the ultimate legal basis for Germany's relations with the western Allies, and for her position in international law, whereas the Bonn Conventions provided the psychological atmosphere in which these relations developed, and in which the Federal Republic gradually took its place as a positive factor in European politics. The Bonn Conventions are important, for this reason, and also because, pruned and revised and divorced from the E.D.C., they were used as the basis for the new instruments of sovereignty, drawn up after the London Conference of September 1954. (See below)

The Bonn Conventions

At the Brussels Conference in December 1950 the governments of the United States, Great Britain and France declared themselves ready and willing to enter into contractual negotiations with the Federal Republic of Germany, and thereby to complete agreements which would supersede the Occupation Statute of 1949 and restore to Germany the maximum degree of sovereignty possible in the light of the international situation. The Allied governments made it clear from the outset that they did not wish this move to abolish in their entirety the Four-Power agreements of 1945, which were the remaining link between East and West Germany and which could still be the basis for settlement of the German problem by negotiation; but that they considered that the powers of the Federal Government could not be curtailed indefinitely or pending such settlement. The resulting Conventions are a product of the unique political situation which has developed in Germany since 1945, and cannot in themselves do away with the division of Germany, nor overcome the facts that foreign troops will undoubtedly remain on German soil until international tension has eased, and that the final Peace Treaty continues to be deferred; and as they are linked with the European Defence Community Treaty they cannot without new decisions come into force without it.

The negotiations which led to the Bonn Conventions began in May 1951, and the Conventions were signed in Bonn by the Foreign Ministers of the United States, Great Britain and France on the one hand, and the Foreign Minister of the Federal Republic of Germany on the other, on May 26th, 1952. Under the Conventions:

(1) The Occupation Statute is abolished, and the Federal Government inherits full freedom in so far as the international situation permits

(2) Allied forces in Germany are no longer occupation

forces, but part of "the defence of the free world, of which the Federal Republic and West Berlin form a part".

(3) A number of problems which would normally be settled by a Peace Treaty are resolved; the Conventions are in effect a provisional treaty to end the war between the Federal Republic and the Three Powers, pending a final treaty between the whole of Germany and the Four. Under this heading the following provisions are made:

- (a) The Federal Republic will have full control over its internal and foreign affairs and relations with the Three Powers will be conducted through ambassadors.
- (b) Only because of the international situation will the Three Powers claim their rights regarding the stationing of armed forces on German soil, matters concerning Berlin, the re-unification of Germany and the final Peace Treaty.
- (c) The Federal Republic undertakes to conduct its policy according to the principles of the United Nations.
- (d) In their negotiations with states with which the Federal Republic has no relations, the Three Powers will consult with the Federal Government.
- (e) The Federal Republic will participate in the European Defence Community.
- (f) The Three Powers and the Federal Republic are agreed that a freely negotiated peace settlement for the whole of Germany is their common aim, and that determination of the final boundaries of Germany must await such a treaty.

The Conventions also include supplementary contractual agreements concerning the rights and obligations of foreign troops in Germany, taxation of the armed forces, a Finance Convention, and a Convention on the settlement of matters arising out of the war and the occupation.

The London and Paris Agreements

On August 30th, 1954, the E.D.C. Treaty was finally debated and defeated in the French National Assembly, and with it the corner stone of western policy over the previous two years was swept away. The need to fill the void was urgent; and it was generally realised that some means must be found to restore German sovereignty, and to allow for its corollary, a German contribution to western defence, in a manner which would be acceptable to France.

For this purpose a conference was held in London at the end of September, at which the Foreign Ministers of Belgium, Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States took part. This conference opened on September 28th, and on October 3rd the Final Act was signed after intense negotiation. By this it was agreed that Germany and Italy should enter an expanded Brussels Treaty Organisation; that German sovereignty should be restored and that she should, on agreed terms, enter N.A.T.O.; and that an Agency for the control of armaments on the continent of Europe should be set up. Instructions were then given for the drafting of the various instruments which would be necessary to give effect to these decisions, and it was agreed that a further meeting should be held at the earliest possible opportunity to endorse them in their detailed form.

On October 20th, 1954, a conference began in Paris to complete the work of the London Conference. It was again attended by the Foreign Ministers of Belgium, Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States; and as in London the Governments of The United States, Great Britain and France, dealt with the aspects of German sovereignty for which they have special responsibilities.

It was announced on October 21st that full agreement had been reached on the outstanding issues concerning German sovereignty, and that details for the expansion of the Brussels Treaty Organisation, both in scope and functions and in size, to include both Germany and Italy, had also been agreed; the expanded organisation is known as Western European Union.

German Sovereignty and Western European Union

On May 5th, 1955, with the depositing of the instruments of ratification of the London and Paris Agreements, the German Federal Republic attained its sovereignty. The three-power status continues for the time being in West Berlin, but is modified by a declaration by the American, French and British Commandants. The ratification also brought into being the newly constituted Western European Union, and the Federal Republic simultaneously became a member of it and of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

HAMBURG

The Constitution of the "Free and Hanseatic City of Hamburg" was passed in June 1952. As in the time of the Empire and the Weimar Republic, Hamburg once more combines the status of a German Land with that of a municipality: there is complete identity between the Town Assembly and the Land Diet on the one hand and between the Mayor and the President of State on the other.

FEDERAL GERMANY—(THE LAND GOVERNMENTS)

The Senat (Senat). The members of the Senat are elected by the City Council (Bürgerschaft) of the city. The Senat, in turn, elects the President (Erster Bürgermeister) and his deputy (Zweiter Bürgermeister) from its own ranks. The President remains in office for one year, but may offer himself for re-election. The administration consists of specialist departments, each of which is supervised by a senator.

President of Senat and First Bürgermeister: Prof. Dr. HERBERT WEICHMANN (S.P.D.).

Deputy President of the Senat and Second Bürgermeister: EDGAR ENGELHARD (F.D.P.).

Department of Finance: GERHARD BRANDES (S.P.D.).

Department of Education: Dr. WILHELM DREXELIGS (S.P.D.).

Departments of Labour and Social Welfare: ERNST WEISS (S.P.D.).

Department of Youth Welfare: IRMA KEILHACK (S.P.D.).

Department of Health: WALTER SCHMEDEMANN (S.P.D.).

Department of Building and Housing: PETER-HEINZ MÜLLER-LINK (F.D.P.); RUDOLF BÜCH (S.P.D.).

Department of Food and Agriculture: IRMA KEILHACK (S.P.D.).

Department of Interior: HEINZ RICHMANN (S.P.D.).

Representative to Federal Government: GERHARD KRAMER (S.P.D.).

President: HERBERT DAU (S.P.D.).

S.P.D. (Social Democratic Party)	72	seats
C.D.U. (Christian Democratic Union)	37	"
F.D.P. (Free Democratic Party)	11	"

BAVARIA

The Constitution of Bavaria (Freistaat Bayern) allows for a two-chamber Parliament and a Constitutional Court (Verfassungsgerichtshof). Provision is also made for a popular referendum.

The State Government (Staatsregierung). The Minister-President is elected by the Diet for four years. He appoints the Ministers and Secretaries of State with the consent of the Landtag.

Minister-President: ALFONS GOPPEL (C.S.U.).

Deputy Minister-President and Minister of Food, Agriculture and Forests: Dr. ALOIS HUNDHAMMER (C.S.U.).

Minister of Finance: Dr. KONRAD PÖHNER (C.S.U.).

Minister of the Interior: HEINRICH JUNKER (C.S.U.).

Minister of Justice: Dr. HANS EHARD (C.S.U.).

Minister for Education and Culture: Dr. LUDWIG HUBER (C.S.U.).

Minister for Economics and Transport: Dr. OTTO SCHEDL (C.S.U.).

Minister for Federal Affairs: Dr. FRANZ HEUBL (C.S.U.).

The composition of the Diet (Landtag), as the result of elections held on November 25th, 1962, is as follows:

President of Diet: RUDOLF HANAUER (C.S.U.).

C.S.U. (Christian Social Union)	108	seats
S.P.D. (Social Democratic Party)	79	"
B.P. (Bavarian Party)	8	"
F.D.P. (Free Democratic Party)	9	"

An election is to be held on November 2nd, 1966

The Senat, or second chamber, consists of sixty members divided into ten groups representing professional interests, e.g. agriculture, industry, trade, free professions and religious communities. Every two years one-third of the Senat is replaced by elections.

President of the Senat: Dr. JOSEF SINGER.

The Constitutional Court (Verfassungsgerichtshof) consists of a President and a number of professional judges elected by the Landtag for six years.

Bavaria is divided into seven districts or Regierungsbezirke: Mittelfranken, Oberfranken, Unterfranken, Schwaben, Niederbayern, Oberpfalz and Oberbayern. Each Regierungsbezirk is subdivided into a number of urban and rural districts (Landkreise).

HESSE

The Constitution of this Land dates from December 11th, 1946.

The Land Government (Landesregierung). The Minister-President is elected by the Landtag; he appoints and dismisses his Ministers with its consent. The Government needs explicit confidence on the part of the Landtag, which by a vote of non-confidence can force the resignation of the whole Ministry.

Minister of Agriculture and Forestry: GUSTAV HACKER (G.D.P.).

Minister of Labour, Public Welfare and Health: HEINRICH HEMSATH (S.P.D.).

The Diet (Landtag), elected on November 11th, 1962, is composed as follows:

President of Diet: FRANZ FUCHS.

S.P.D. (Social Democratic Party)	51	seats
C.D.U. (Christian Democratic Union)	28	"
F.D.P. (Free Democratic Party)	11	"
G.D.P. (All-German Party)	6	"

The Constitutional Court (Staatsgerichtshof) consists of five judges and six other members elected by the Landtag.

Hesse is divided into three governmental districts (Regierungsbezirke): Kassel, Wiesbaden, Darmstadt. The districts are divided into urban and rural districts (Stadtkreise and Landkreise).

BREMEN

The Constitution of the Free Hanseatic City of Bremen was sanctioned by referendum of the people on October 12th, 1947. Its salient feature is a strict separation of constitutional powers to the detriment of the parliamentary system. All changes in constitutional law not voted unanimously by Parliament have to be decided by popular referendum. Bremen, like Hamburg, has the status of a Land of the Federal Republic. The main constitutional organs are the City Council (Bürgerschaft), which corresponds to the Landtag, the Senat and the Constitutional Court.

The Senat is the executive organ, the government of the Land. It is elected by the Bürgerschaft for the duration of its own tenure of office. The Senat elects from its own ranks two Bürgermeister, one of whom becomes President of the Senat. The senators cannot be simultaneously members of parliament. A vote of non-confidence can only be given under special conditions. Decisions of the Bürgerschaft are subject to the delaying veto of the Senat.

President of the Senat: WILLY DEHNKAMP (S P D).

Second Bürgermeister and Senator for the Interior: HANS KOSCHNICK. (S P.D.)

Senator for Harbours, Shipping and Transport: Dr. GEORG BORTSCHELLER (F.D.P.).

Senator for Justice, Constitutional and Religious Affairs: Dr. ULRICH GRAF (F.D.P.).

Senator for Education: MORITZ THAPE (S P.D)

Senator for Building: WILHELM BLASE (S P.D.).

Senator for Trade and Industry: KARL EGGERS (S P.D.).

Senator for Labour, Welfare and Public Health: KARL WESSLING (S P.D.).

Senator for Welfare and Youth Affairs: Frau ANNEMARIE MEVISSSEN (S.P.D.).

The Bürgerschaft consists of 100 members elected for four years. The election of September 29th, 1963, resulted in the following composition:

President of the Bürgerschaft: AUGUST HAGEDORN (S.P.D.).

S P.D. (Social Democratic Party) . . . 57 seats

C.D.U. (Christian Democratic Union) . . . 31 "

D P. (German Party) . . . 4 "

The Constitutional Court consists of the President of the State High Court and of six members elected by the Bürgerschaft.

RHINELAND-PALATINATE

The three chief agencies of the Constitution of this Land are the Diet (Landtag), the Government (Landesregierung) and the Constitutional Court (Verfassungsgerichtshof).

The Land Government (Landesregierung) is composed of the Minister-President and his Ministers, whom he appoints and dismisses with the consent of the Landtag. The Government is dependent on the confidence of the Landtag.

Minister-President and Minister of Economics and Transport: Dr h.c. PETER ALTMEIER (C.D.U.).

WEST BERLIN

On August 4th, 1950, the Berlin City Assembly passed a Constitution defining its special position under technical three-power control. Under German Constitutional Law Berlin is a Land of the Federal Republic but this law is at present suspended by three-power reservations. Nevertheless West Berlin sends representatives to the Bundesrat and Bundesrat in Bonn but these representatives have no vote in the plenary sessions of either House. To be valid in West Berlin, Federal Law has to be specially adopted there. The Constitution came into force on October 1st, 1950.

The House of Representatives (Abgeordnetenhaus) is the legislative body, and has 140 members. The executive agency is the Senate, which is composed of the Governing Mayor (Regierender Bürgermeister), his deputy, and at the most sixteen Senators. The Governing Mayor is elected by a majority of the House of Representatives. The Senate is responsible to the House of Representatives and dependent on its confidence.

Regierender Bürgermeister: WILLY BRANDT (S.P.D.).

Bürgermeister: HEINRICH ALBERTZ (S.P.D.).

By the Law of July 26th, 1957 the former Land Central Banks and the Berlin Central Bank were merged with the Bank deutscher Länder to form the Deutsche Bundesbank. The functions of the Deutsche Bundesbank are to issue bank notes, to regulate note and coin circulation and supply of credit, and to ensure due execution by banks of both internal and external payments.

The organs of the Deutsche Bundesbank are the Central Bank Council (Zentralbankrat), the Directorate (Direktorium) and the Boards of Management of the Land Central Banks. The Central Bank Council consists of the President and Vice-President of the Deutsche Bundesbank, the other members of the Directorate and the Presidents of the Land Central Banks. Its general function is to determine money and credit policies, to lay down business and administrative directives, and to state the responsibilities of the Directorate and Boards of Management. The Directorate consists of the President and the Vice-President of the Deutsche Bundesbank and of not more than eight further members. It must implement decisions taken by the Central Bank Council and manage and administer the Bank, except in matters coming within the competence of the Land Central Banks' Boards of Management. The Directorate controls Federal, foreign exchange and open market transactions.

The Deutsche Bundesbank maintains Head Offices (Hauptverwaltungen) in each Land, known as Landeszentralbanken. The Boards of Management of each of these Land Central Banks, normally consisting of the President and Vice-President, are responsible for all transactions and administrative business within the Land.

The Deutsche Bundesbank is bound, as far as is consistent with its functions, to support Government economic policy, although it is independent of instructions from the Government. The Bank may advise on important monetary policy, and members of the Federal Government may take part in the deliberations of the Central Bank Council but may not vote.

2 THE COMMERCIAL BANKS

During the banking reform of 1946-47 the three large private banking houses of Germany, the Deutsche Bank, the Dresdner Bank and the Commerzbank (known as the D-Banks), were decentralised into thirty small successor institutions, none of which might have branches outside its own Land. This arrangement was superseded in 1952 by a further reorganisation; at this stage the three D-Banks formally transferred their business to nine successor institutes, and the three Berlin successors to the D-Banks were brought into the scheme. The successors to the Deutsche Bank were the Norddeutsche Bank of Hamburg, the Deutsche Bank Aktiengesellschaft West of Düsseldorf, and the Süddeutsche Bank of Munich; those of the Dresdner Bank were the Hamburg Kreditbank, the Rhein-Main Bank of Frankfurt am Main, and the Rhein-Ruhr Bank of Düsseldorf, and those of the Commerzbank, the Commerzbank Bankverein of Düsseldorf, the Commerz- und Kreditbank of Frankfurt am Main, and the Commerz- und Discontobank of Hamburg. The three Berlin successors of the D-Banks were the Berliner Disconto Bank, the Bank für Handel und Industrie, and the Berliner Commerzbank.

By a further agreement reached in April 1957 the process of decentralisation was reversed to a large extent and both the Deutsche Bank and the Dresdner Bank reabsorbed their successor institutions, with the exception of their Berlin successors, the Berliner Disconto Bank and the Bank für Handel und Industrie which continue as separate subsidiary concerns of the Deutsche Bank and the Dresdner Bank respectively. This agreement did not affect the previous arrangement of 1952 with regard to the successor institutes of the Commerzbank, which still functioned as independent organisations.

A final reorganisation took place in November 1958, by which the three successor institutions to the Commerzbank were merged into one organisation, the Commerzbank A.G., the Berlin successor institute, the Berliner Commerzbank A.G., continues to exist as a separate institute.

Bundesministerium für Atomkernenergie (Federal Ministry of Nuclear Energy): 5320 Bad Godesberg, Luisenstrasse 46; f 1955, Minister Dr GERHARD STOLTENBERG.

The Ministry has no nuclear installations of its own. It is divided into four sections, the first dealing with legislation and economic matters, administration and international co-operation in the field of nuclear energy, the second with the promotion of scientific research, the third with nuclear research, engineering and radiation protection, and the fourth with outer space research. The management of the German Atomic Energy Commission (see below) is associated with the second section.

Deutsche Atomkommission (German Atomic Energy Advisory Commission): Bad Godesberg, Luisenstrasse 46; f. 1955; Chair Bundesminister Dr GERHARD STOLTENBERG, Deputy Chair Staatssekretär Prof. Dipl.-Ing. LEO BRANDT, Prof Dr OTTO HAHN, Prof. Dipl.-Ing. KARL WINNACKER

The Commission is at present composed of 26 members, representing science, industry, the trade unions and public life. Attached to it are a number of expert committees and working groups, with a total membership of approximately 220. The Commission has no executive powers, its function being to advise the Federal Ministry for Scientific Research on all important matters of nuclear research, engineering and economy.

Atomic energy is developed chiefly by private industries. The state aids this development but refrains from subsidising where possible.

Nuclear research is carried out in universities and technical colleges in co-operation with the Max Planck Societies and in the following research centres:

- 1 Karlsruhe Research Centre.
- 2 Jülich Research Centre, Nordrhein-Westfalen.
- 3 The Geesthacht Reactor Station of the Society for the Use of Nuclear Energy in Shipping, Hamburg.
- 4 Institute for Plasmaphysics, Garching, near Munich.
- 5 German Electron-Synchrotron, Hamburg-Bahrenfeld.
- 6 Hahn-Meitner Institute for Nuclear Research, Berlin

There is a reactor at Kahl and a second reactor at Jülich was due to open in 1965

GERMAN DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC AND EAST BERLIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The German Democratic Republic is bounded to the north by the Baltic Sea, to the west, south-west and south by the Federal Republic of Germany, to the south-east by Czechoslovakia and to the east by Poland along the line of the rivers Oder and Neisse. The climate is warm in summer with cold winters. The language is German. About 80 per cent of the population are Protestant and 10 per cent Roman Catholic. There are about 3,500 Jews. The flag carries three horizontal bands of black, red and gold. Pending final settlement by a peace treaty, the capital is in East Berlin.

Recent History

On the defeat of Germany in 1945, the central and western parts of the country were divided into four zones of occupation. The German Democratic Republic came into being in 1949 and comprises the same territory as the former Soviet-occupied zone. It has not been recognised as a sovereign state by the Western powers.

Government

The government is that of a people's democracy on the Soviet pattern. All citizens of 18 years and over have the right to vote representatives to the Volkskammer (People's Chamber) who in turn elect the Council of State and its President, the Head of State. Executive power is vested in the Council of Ministers nominated by the President with the approval of the Volkskammer.

Defence

A National People's Army, comprising land, sea and air forces, was created out of the People's Police in 1956. Total strength is 112,000 comprising Army 80,000, Navy 17,000, Air Force 15,000. Military service lasts eighteen months. The state adhered to the Warsaw Pact in 1956. There are also frontier, transport and stand-by police as well as Workers' Fighting Squads totalling about 400,000. Defence estimates for 1965 totalled 2,800 million Ost Marks.

Economic Affairs

The Republic has been a member of COMECON (Council for Mutual Economic Aid) since 1949, and the economy of the country is therefore closely linked with that of the Soviet Union and other member countries. Increasing emphasis is placed on industry. Before the division of Germany, the territory was primarily agricultural. It now ranks as the fifth state of Europe in gross industrial output. The largest branches of industry are engineering, chemicals and textiles. The Leipzig spring and autumn trade fairs are the most important centres of East-West trade. All farmers are members of agricultural production groups. The Democratic Republic is not agriculturally self-supporting.

Transport and Communications

There is a comprehensive transport system by rail, road, waterway and air. The principal port Rostock is being developed to carry more of East Europe's trade with the rest of the world.

Social Welfare

Medical treatment is free and provision is made for sick leave pay. Youth services and sport receive large State subventions.

Education

Elementary and secondary schools were abolished in 1959 and replaced by General and Polytechnic High Schools. Attendance is now compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 16. Older pupils spend one day a week in practical work outside school. There are seven universities and a number of technological institutes.

Tourism

Tourism is fostered by the state travel bureau. The island of Rügen off the Baltic coast has considerable tourist traffic. The mountains of Thuringia and the Erzgebirge on the Czech frontier are much visited both in summer and winter.

Sport

Sport in all its forms is actively encouraged by the State. The Society for Sport and Technics, one of the mass organisations of the Republic, is particularly concerned with the training of youth.

Public Holidays

The main public holidays are January 1 (New Year's Day), May 8 (Liberation Day), October 7 (Republic Day), December 25 and 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The basic unit is the Mark der Deutschen Notenbank (MDN—Ost Mark). The currency is not recognised by the International Monetary Fund. Currency of the German Democratic Republic is not ordinarily convertible with the £ sterling or the $US abroad. In the Democratic Republic the West German Deutsche Mark (DM) is converted with the East German Mark der Deutschen Notenbank at par and other currencies are converted at a similar rate.

1 mark—100 pfennig.

Notes MDN 100, 50, 10, 5, 1; Pfennig 50.

Coins MDN 2, 1; Pfennig 50, 10, 5, 1.

THE CONSTITUTION

ON OCTOBER 5TH, 1949, the Soviet-sponsored People's Council, meeting in Berlin under the Chairmanship of the Communist leader, Wilhelm Pieck, announced that a German Democratic Republic would be set up in the Soviet-occupied area of Germany. On October 7th the People's Council was converted by its own proclamation into the Provisorische Volkshammer (Provisional People's Chamber) and was granted a Constitution based on the Weimar Constitution of 1919.

The following is a summary of this Constitution:

1. Foundations of State Power

(Articles 1-5)

Germany is an indivisible Democratic Republic founded on the Bezirke. The Republic decides all questions vital to the people; all other questions are decided independently by the Bezirke. The colours of the Republic are Black-Red-Gold. The capital is Berlin. Power derives from the people and must promote their well-being, freedom and democratic progress.

2. Limits of State Power

(a) Rights of citizens (Articles 6-18). All citizens are equal before the law. Actions contrary to this principle are crimes. Men and women have equal rights. Personal freedom, the inviolability of the home, the secrecy of the post and freedom of speech and assembly are assured. Press censorship is forbidden. No citizen may be handed over to a foreign power but all have the right to emigrate. Citizens may form societies provided their aims are not contrary to criminal law.

Associations with democratic aims may present candidates for local elections. Candidates for the Volkshammer may be put up only by organisations whose activities extend over the whole Democratic Republic

Everyone has the right to join associations to advance working conditions and Trade Unions have the right to strike. The right to work or maintenance, holidays with pay, and care in sickness and age, are guaranteed.

Questions of production and working conditions are decided in consultation with workers' representatives. There shall be equal pay for equal work. The employment of children is forbidden.

(b) Economic Life (Articles 19-26). Economic life must be organised on principles of social justice. The right to private property may be limited only in the interest of the community. The misuse of property is punishable by confiscation. Private estates of more than 100 hectares are to be broken up without compensation. After this reform the right of farmers to their land is guaranteed.

All mining, iron, steel and power undertakings are to be socialised.

Private economic undertakings may be taken into public ownership by law, or may be legally amalgamated to ensure the co-operation of producing elements of the people according to socialist principles.

(c) Family and Motherhood (Articles 30-33). The family is the basis of social life and is under state protection. The bringing up of children to be useful citizens is the right and duty of parents. Mothers deserve the special protection of the State.

(d) Education (Articles 34-40). Every citizen has the right to free education and the free choice of profession. Children must stay at school until the end of their eighteenth year. Universities are open to all. Religious education is the province of the religious community.

(e) Religion (Articles 41-48). Every citizen enjoys freedom of belief and conscience. There is no State Church.

GERMANY (D.D.R.)—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

3. Structure of State Power

(a) Representation of the People (Articles 50-70). The highest organ of the Republic is the Volkshammer which consists of representatives of the people elected for four years in general, equal, direct and secret elections. All citizens over 18 may vote and all over 21 are eligible for election.

The Volkshammer has 434 members. It must meet within thirty days of election. Elections must take place within sixty days of the end of the period for which the last Volkshammer was elected, or within forty days of its dissolution. It may be dissolved by a decision of more than half its members.

At its first meeting the Volkshammer elects its Presiding Committee on which all groups with more than forty members shall be represented.

The following matters are within its competence: designation and execution of the principles of the Government's policies, confirmation supervision and dismissal of government; initiation of legislation; approval of the budget and the economic plan, and the ratification of treaties; election of the States Council, and of members of the Supreme Court; and constitutional questions.

(b) Legislation (Articles 81-90). Laws are made either by the Volkshammer or directly through plebiscites. The Constitution can be altered by law, but two-thirds of the Chamber must be present and two-thirds of those present must be in favour. If a change is decided by plebiscite there must be an affirmative majority of those entitled to vote.

(c) Government of the Republic (Articles 91-100). The strongest group in the Volkshammer nominates the Minister-President who forms a government. All groups with at least forty members are represented by Ministers or State Secretaries according to their strength. State Secretaries have an advisory capacity. Members of the Government who have lost the confidence of the Volkshammer must resign.

(d) States Council (Articles 101-108). The States Council is elected for four years by the Volkshammer, and consists of a Chairman, six Vice-Chairmen, 16 Members and a Secretary. The Chairman of the States Council convenes the Volkshammer, represents the Republic in international law, signs treaties, accredits and receives envoys, and awards all State honours and titles.

(e) The States of the Republic (Articles 109-116). Deals with relations between the Central and the Länder governments, and is now out of date.

(f) Administration of the Republic (Articles 117-125). Customs and revenue provisions, the State responsibility for post, telegraph service, wireless and transport.

(g) Administration of Justice (Articles 126-138). Justice is exercised by the Supreme Court and by State Courts. Judges are independent, subject to the Constitution and the law. The State is responsible for legal training facilities. Lay judges are elected by appropriate bodies at the suggestion of the political parties and mass organisations. Judges of the Supreme Court and the Supreme Law Department are elected by the Volkshammer.

(h) Articles 139-143 deal with local self-government responsibilities and are now out of date.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The legal system of the German Democratic Republic was reorganised after 1945, at first under four-power direction; and the principles on which the judicial system is to function are embodied in the Constitution. In October 1952 the Volkskammer passed the law on Criminal Procedure and in 1963 the new Courts Constitution Law, which covers the appointment and recall of judges. Judges are elected for four years on all levels, from the Kreistag, Bezirksrat, and the Volkskammer. A judge can be recalled only if he has committed a breach of the law, grossly neglected his duties or been convicted by a court. The same applies to Supreme Court judges, who are appointed for five years and may be recalled only by the Volkskammer.

Ordinary jurisdiction is exercised by the Supreme Court of the Republic and by the courts of the Bezirke.

Lay judges are elected by the appropriate local authorities after nomination by democratic parties and organisations. Supreme Court Judges and the Supreme State Prosecutor of the Republic are elected by the People's Chamber after nomination by the Government of the Republic.

The Justice Committee consists of the Chairman of the Law Committee of the People's Chamber, three members of the Chamber, two members of the Supreme Court, and one member of the Supreme Prosecutor's Department. The other members are elected by the Chamber for the duration of its life.

Oberster Gericht der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik (Supreme Court of the German Democratic Republic): Berlin N.4, Scharnhorststr. 37; Pres. Dr. HEINRICH TORPLITZ.

RELIGION

This section covers both parts of Germany, since there is no division from the religions point of view and the Churches strive to be a unifying force in a divided country.

THE PROTESTANT CHURCH

German Protestantism is mainly of Lutheran origin with strong Calvinistic elements in some areas, and three main confessional groups—the Evangelical-Lutheran, the Evangelical-Reformed, and the United Confessional—have emerged among the Protestant population. In spite of confessional differences, these Churches have similar constitutional structures: the smallest community is the parish, with its church council and parson (Pfarrer or Pastor). Several parishes form a church district headed by a Dean (Dekan), a Provost (Propst), or a Superintendent, the districts are united in the Territorial Church (Landeskirche), whose governing organs are the Synod, the Bishop or Church President (Kirchenpräsident) and the Church Council (Landeskirchenrat) or the Church Office (Landeskirchenamt). The episcopal office is of primarily administrative importance and does not imply that the Bishop receives a higher form of ordination than the parson.

At the Conference of Eisenach (Thuringia) in 1948 the twenty-seven Protestant Territorial Churches and the Evangelical Church of the Union gave themselves a new constitution, by which the Evangelische Kirche in Deutschland was established as a federation of Churches. The Federation is estimated to number about 43 million adherents, of whom about 27 million live in the Federal Republic.

Outside the EKD are numerous small Evangelical Free Churches, such as the Baptists, Methodists, Mennonites and the Lutheran Free Church, with a membership of approximately 600,000 in all.

EVANGELISCHE KIRCHE IN DEUTSCHLAND

(The Evangelical Church in Germany)

The governing bodies of the EKD are its Synod of Clergy and lay members which meets at regular intervals, and the Council, composed of twelve elected members. The EKD has an ecclesiastical secretariat of its own (the Evangelical Church Chancellery), and a special office for external relations.

Chairman of the Council: Praeses D. KURT SCHARF (1 Berlin 12, Goethestrasse 87).

Bund Evangelisch-Reformierter Kirchen (Association of Evangelical Reformed Churches). 34 Göttingen, Untere Karspüle 11

Chairman: Praeses P. TIBBE

Herrnhuter Brüdergemeine or Europäisch-Festländische Brüder-Unität (The Moravian Church): The Moravian Church was founded in Moravia in 1457 as one of the earliest of the Reformation movements. After many years of persecution in 1722 the rest of its members found refuge in Herrnhut, Saxony, whence their name. Their schools have a great tradition in Germany, Switzerland and the Netherlands. At present there are 18 congregations in Germany, Switzerland, Denmark and the Netherlands with approximately 11,300 members. The Herrnhut Brethren are in close contact with correspondent churches in Great Britain, U.S.A., East and South Africa and Surinam.

Chairman: Pfr. Dr. H. MOTEL (Bad Boll, Württemberg)

Reformierter Bund (The Reformed League): unites the Reformed territorial Churches and Congregations of Germany. The central body of the Reformed League is the "Moderamen", the elected representation of the various Reformed Congregations. The President of the "Moderamen" is the Moderator.

Moderator: D. WILHELM NIESEL (Schöller bei Dornap, Rhineland).

Bekennende Kirche (The Confessing Church): is not an established Church, but a renaissance movement which arose out of the struggles with the Nazi régime. It has adherents in all Protestant Churches. The Confessing Church is guided by the Council of the Brethren of the EKD and the Council of each territorial church.

Chairman: Rt. Rev. THEODOR DIPPER, Dean, 714 Ludwigsbürg/Württemberg.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

As the Catholic Church ignores territorial changes until after the ratification of international treaties, the number and organisation of dioceses in Germany have remained unaffected by the political events of the last decade.

Today the territories of some of the dioceses are partly or entirely under the administration of foreign countries. These borders were originally fixed shortly after 1815, but there were substantial changes after the 1914-18 war. It is estimated that there are about 26 million Roman Catholics in these dioceses, of whom about 24 million live in the Federal Republic.

The German Bishops meet annually at Fulda for their conference. In addition, there are four regional conferences each year, two for the Bavarian Bishops and two for the Bishops outside of Bavaria.

GIBRALTAR

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag

Gibraltar is a very small British Colony—sometimes called The Rock—on the coast of southern Spain. It is connected by a sandy isthmus about one mile long and half mile wide to Spanish territory. Twenty miles across the Straits is Africa and the Mediterranean lies to the east. The climate is temperate. Both Spanish and English are spoken, English being the official language. Eighty-seven per cent of the population are Roman Catholic, 7 per cent Church of England, and 3 per cent Jewish. The flag bears the Gibraltar Coat of Arms on a background the upper two thirds of which are white and the lower third red.

Recent History

The post-war years have been marked by considerable progress socially and economically through intensive development of the medical, educational, housing and social security services, and by the expansion of business and the encouragement of the tourist. There has also been considerable constitutional development resulting in partial self-government since 1964.

Government

Under the Gibraltar (Constitution) Order in Council, 1964, Gibraltar attained a large measure of internal self-government. Executive authority is vested in the Governor, who is advised by the Gibraltar Council composed of five elected and four ex-officio members. The Council of Ministers is presided over by the Chief Minister, who may appoint to it such additional Ministers as he wishes.

The Legislative Council consists of a Speaker appointed by the Governor, eleven elected members and two ex-officio members. Municipal affairs are controlled by a City Council, presided over by a Mayor.

Defence

There is a local Defence Force—The Gibraltar Regiment—and four months' compulsory military training at the age of 18 with biennial reserve training up to the age of 28. United Kingdom Naval, Army and Air Force Units are stationed at Gibraltar which is also a NATO Sub-Command.

Economic Affairs

Owing to the absence of natural resources the chief factors in the economy are the thriving transit trade and the tourist industry. Most visitors are en route for other places, chiefly for Spain, Morocco, Britain and the Near and Far East.

Transport and Communications

The Port offers good anchorage for ships of all tonnages. There is ample wharf space for the landing of passengers and handling cargo. There is a commercial ship repair yard and dry dock facilities. There are passenger services to the United Kingdom, Australia, East Africa, the U.S.A., Italy, India, Morocco and Israel. There are daily air services to the U.K. and to Tangier in Morocco.

Social Welfare

The Social Security system consists of two contributory schemes covering employment injuries insurance and social insurance and three non-contributory schemes financed from the general revenue and covering unemployment benefits and retirement pensions, family allowances and public assistance. There are special arrangements to cater for blind persons, the aged and discharged prisoners.

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 15. It is provided free in 22 Government schools. There are 3 private schools and a number of nursery schools. Scholarships for university students are provided by the Government and from private sources.

Tourism

The airport and land and sea facilities have made Gibraltar a centre of communications for the Mediterranean and between Europe and Africa. The improvement and expansion of tourist amenities continues. Three new hotels and a casino have been constructed. The Gibraltar Festival of the Arts and the Sea attracts many visitors.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, German Federal Republic, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Monaco, Morocco, The Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, San Marino, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, U.S.A.

Sport

There is a great variety of sport including fishing, swimming, and water-skiing, football, hockey, tennis, athletics, rowing and cricket.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Good Friday, Easter Monday, May 24 (Commonwealth Day), Whit Monday, June 8 (The Queen's Birthday), the first Monday in August, December 25 and 26 (Christmas and Boxing Day).

Weights and Measures

Imperial weights and measures are in use (see Great Britain).

THE CONSTITUTION

Gibraltar is a Crown Colony, and the supreme authority is vested in the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, who is the representative of the Queen. Relations with the British Government are maintained through the Colonial Office.

THE GIBRALTAR COUNCIL

Gibraltar is administered in accordance with the Gibraltar (Constitution) Order, 1964, and the Gibraltar Royal Instructions, 1964, by the Governor acting generally on the advice of the Gibraltar Council consisting of four ex-officio and five elected members who are appointed by the Governor after consultation with the Chief Minister.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS

The Council of Ministers, which is presided over by the Chief Minister discusses policy matters in detail, Heads of Departments and other Government officials appearing before it when required. When agreement has been reached among Ministers their recommendations are submitted to the Gibraltar Council by the Chief Minister for formal approval.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

A Legislative Council, defined by an Order-in-Council of February 3rd, 1950, was inaugurated by H R H. The Duke of Edinburgh on November 23rd, 1950. It established a Legislative Council consisting of the Governor as President, three ex-officio members, two members nominated by the Governor, and five elected members. In 1956 the number of elected members was increased from five to seven and a Speaker was appointed in 1958. In September 1959 the life of the legislature was increased from three to five years. The Gibraltar (Constitution) Orders, 1964, and the Gibraltar Royal Instructions provide for a Legislative Council consisting of a Speaker, eleven elected members and two ex-officio members. Election is by proportional representation, and the franchise is given to all adult British subjects ordinarily resident in Gibraltar for a continuous period of twelve months, though provision is made for the registration of electors who may be resident in neighbouring Spanish territory during part of the qualifying period. At the fifth elections, held in September 1964, 10,342 votes were polled out of a total electorate of 13,564. From the eleven members elected to the Legislative Council, the Governor, after consultation with the Chief Minister, nominated five to serve in the Gibraltar Council. The ex-officio members of the Legislative Council are the Attorney-General and the Financial Secretary. Reserve powers enable the Governor to legislate if he considers it necessary or expedient in the interests of public order, public faith or good government (including defence).

THE CITY COUNCIL

In 1830 the first Charter of Justice was given to the City and a Magistracy established, thus the advantage of civil liberty was accorded to the inhabitants.

On December 1st, 1921, the creation of the City Council gave the inhabitants of Gibraltar a certain representation in the management of municipal affairs. The City Council was re-constituted on August 1st, 1945, when provision was made for an unofficial majority.

GREECE

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Kingdom of Greece is a mountainous peninsula between the Mediterranean and Aegean, bounded to the north by Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria and to the east by Turkey. Numerous Greek islands lie to the south and south-east of which the largest is Crete. The climate is Mediterranean with mild winters and hot summers. The language is modern Greek. The flag consists of blue and white horizontal stripes with a white cross in the top-left corner. The Greek Orthodox Church is the established religion. The capital is Athens.

Recent History

Civil war broke out in Greece in 1945 following the Second World War and lasted until 1949. During the Civil War in Cyprus, Greece supported the Greek-Cypriots in their fight against the British Colonial Government, but since the granting of independence to Cyprus in 1960, Greece has been on friendly terms with Great Britain. In 1961 Greece concluded an Agreement of Association with the European Economic Community.

After four consecutive terms in office since 1955, Mr. Karamanlis resigned as Prime Minister in June 1963 in protest against the Greek Royal visit to Britain, and was succeeded by Mr. Papandreu in the election of November 1963. In December, Mr. Papandreu's minority government resigned after a vote of no confidence and a caretaker cabinet took over. At the elections of February, 1964, the Centre Union Party of Mr. Papandreu was returned to power. Mr. Papandreu was dismissed by King Constantine in July 1965. Two governments were formed in the summer of 1965, both failing to receive parliamentary approval. The Government of Mr. Stephanopoulos took office in September.

Government

Greece is a constitutional monarchy. Legislative power is exercised by the King and the Chamber of Deputies, a unicameral body elected for a four-year term by adult, universal suffrage. Executive power is exercised by the King through his ministers.

Defence

The three arms of the forces are directed by the Ministry of Defence. Military service is compulsory and lasts two years. The Army musters about 119,000 men and the Navy 17,500; Air Force personnel number 23,500. Greece is a member of NATO. Defence estimates totalled 3,700 million drachmae in 1965.

Economic Affairs

Although the pace of industrial expansion has quickened since Greece became an Associate Member of the European Economic Community (the Common Market), the country's chief exports are still the traditional agricultural products: tobacco, olive oil, cotton, citrus fruits and wine. The following mineral deposits are exploited: coal, iron, chromite, zinc, bauxite and silver. Only about a quarter of the land is capable of cultivation, the rest being mountain and marshland. Agriculture provides for about 60 per cent of the country's needs and much food is imported. Most Greek trade is with the German Federal Republic. The United States and the United Kingdom are other important traders. In the last few years hydro-electric power resources are being increasingly developed. Long-term economic and social needs are expected to be met by a five-year plan between 1966 and 1970.

Other substantial sources of income are a large merchant fleet, remittances from Greeks working abroad, and tourism.

Transport and Communications

Railways were almost destroyed by Germany and Italy between 1940 and 1945. They have now been restored. There are about 50,000 km. of roads, 7,000 km. of which are asphalted. The three-mile Corinth Canal shortens the sea journey from the Adriatic to the Piraeus (port of Athens) by 202 miles. Greece has a large mercantile marine of 7,201,940 tons. Important towns and islands are connected by air transport.

Social Welfare

There is a state social insurance scheme for wage-earners. Salaried staff are provided for by voluntary or staff insurances. Everyone is entitled to an old age pension and sickness benefit.

Education

Education is free at all levels, and compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 15. Just under one million children receive primary education and some 290,000 secondary. The illiteracy rate has been reduced from 42 per cent to 10 per cent in the last thirty years. There are three universities, and new ones are to be opened at Ionina and Patras.

Tourism

The sunny climate, the natural beauty of the country and its great history and traditions have made Greece a magnet for tourists. There are numerous islands of archaeological interest. Increased facilities are being provided for tourists in the form of better transport and accommodation. In 1964 over 750,000 people visited Greece.

Receipts from tourism totalled $91 million in 1964, and expenditure was $39 million.

THE CONSTITUTION

CONSTITUTIONAL monarchy was instituted in Greece when the first Constitution was granted by King Otho on September 3rd, 1833. Formerly known as Prince Otto of Bavaria, he ascended the throne at the age of 18 in 1833, three years after Greece achieved her full independence from Turkey. Revolution, reaction, and foreign embroilment shook the country repeatedly. In 1862 Otho was expelled and his place was taken in 1863 by Prince William, the younger son of the King of Denmark, who assumed the title of George I. The dynasty was shaken by the ascent to the throne of his son Constantine in 1913. King George II, who came to the throne when his father, Constantine, abdicated in 1922, was compelled to leave the country on December 19th, 1923. The dethronement of the dynasty was proclaimed by the Papanastasiou Government in 1924, as a result of the crisis brought on by the disastrous termination of the Asia Minor expedition in 1922. A plebiscite held on April 13th, 1924, confirmed the republican régime, and the republican Constitution was formally promulgated in 1927.

On the restoration of the monarchy in the person of King George II in 1935, after a plebiscite, the 1863 Constitution, as amended in 1911, was again adopted, with certain changes, of which the most important was the institution of the Council of State. This supreme administrative tribunal, formed on the French model, examines the validity of decrees and tries cases between the State and private individuals, thus forming an important bulwark against arbitrary State action on the part of Government officials or departments.

Parliamentary government in accordance with the Constitution continued until August 4th, 1936, when certain basic provisions of the Constitution were suspended by the Prime Minister, General Ioannis Metaxas, with the consent of the King. This action had been preceded by a period of political deadlock and internal unrest. The Metaxas Government assumed dictatorial powers, dissolved Parliament, and suspended the main provisions of the Constitution which had hitherto protected the liberties of the Greek people, such as the freedom of the Press, freedom of assembly, parliamentary and municipal elections, habeas corpus, etc.

The dictatorship of General Metaxas lasted until the occupation of Greece by the Axis Powers in 1941. The parliamentary system was restored after the liberation of Greece in 1944. The Constitution was re-established, and the first elections held since January 1936 took place on March 31st, 1946. A revised Constitution was promulgated on January 1st, 1952. This Constitution left the fundamental provisions of the 1911 Constitution intact.

The salient features in the present Constitution are as follows:

THE CONSTITUTION (Promulgated January 1952)

RELIGION

The established religion in Greece is that of the Eastern Orthodox Church of Christ, to which the Orthodox Church of Greece is indissolubly united in doctrine.

All other religions and denominations have freedom of worship, but ministers of all recognised religions are subject to the same superintendence as those of the established church (Articles 1 and 2.)

THE KING

The crown is hereditary, and passes to the legitimate descendants of George I, preference in succession being given to males. The King must profess the religion of the Eastern Orthodox Church of Christ. He is the highest authority of the State. He commands the land and sea forces, declares war, concludes treaties of peace, alliance and commerce, although the latter are not valid without the consent of Parliament. He convokes the Chamber of Deputies annually, and appoints and dismisses his Ministers. No act of the King is valid unless countersigned by the competent Minister. The King's powers are confined to those expressly assigned to him by the Constitution (Articles 29-44.)

FORM OF GOVERNMENT

All powers have their source in the Nation, and are exercised in the manner appointed by the Constitution.

The legislative power is exercised by the King and the Chamber of Deputies. The latter is a unicameral body composed of 300 members elected quadrennially by direct, universal and secret suffrage of all citizens eligible to vote. The right to propose legislation belongs to the Chamber of Deputies and to the King, who exercises it through his Ministers. The executive power belongs to the King and is exercised by his Ministers (Articles 54-81.)

RIGHTS OF GREEK CITIZENS

Greek citizens are guaranteed equality before the law, personal liberty, prompt trial, the right to petition public authorities, the right of peaceful assembly and of association, inviolability of their dwelling, freedom of speech and of the Press, inviolability of correspondence, and inviolability of property with protection from expropriation without indemnification. Slavery is prohibited. Elementary education is at State expense and is compulsory. Punishments are fixed by law, and torture and general confiscation are prohibited. Deprivation of civil rights and death for purely political offences are abolished. (Articles 3-28.)

JUSTICE

Judicial power is exercised by the courts of law, and judicial decisions are executed in the King's name. Members of the Court of Cassation, Courts of Appeal and Courts of First Instance are appointed for life. Sittings of the courts of law are public except when publicity would be injurious to good morals or public order. Judgment must be reached on the merits of each case and pronounced in public sitting. Trial is by jury.

LANGUAGE

The official language of the State is that in which the texts of the Constitution and of Greek legislation are drawn up (Article 107).

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Courts of Law administering justice in Greece are as follows

The Supreme Court. This is the supreme court in the State, having also appellate powers. It consists of four sections, three Civil and one Penal, and adjudicates in quorum.

Courts of Appeal. These are eleven in number. They have jurisdiction in cases of Civil and Penal Law of second degree, and, in exceptional cases, of first degree.

Courts of First Instance. There are fifty-eight Courts of First Instance with jurisdiction in cases of first degree, and, in exceptional cases, of second degree. They are mixed courts, functioning both as Courts of First Instance and as Penal Courts

In towns where Courts of First Instance sit there are also Criminal Courts. Commercial Tribunals do not function in Greece, and all commercial cases are tried by ordinary courts of law.

Courts of the Justice of Peace. There are 360 of these courts throughout the country.

Magistrates' Courts (or simple Police Courts). There are 48.

In all the above courts, except those of the Justice of Peace and the Magistrates' Courts, there are District Attorneys. In Magistrates' Courts the duties of District Attorney are performed by the Public Prosecutor.

The State Council. In addition to the above there is a State Council, with competence over the following cases:

Administrative disputes

Administrative contraventions of law in force.

President of the Supreme Court (Areopagus): STYLIANOS MAVROMICHALIS

President of Athens Court of Appeal: BASIL DIMITRAKAKIS.

RELIGION

The Greek Orthodox Church, the Greek branch of the Holy Eastern Orthodox Church, is the established religion of Greece, to which the majority of Greeks adhere. The Church uses the Nicene Creed without the filioque clause, and administers the seven Sacraments. The Church is administered by a Synod of twelve Metropolitans (Archbishops with sees), elected annually, and representing the Episcopate of 67 Metropolitans. The President of the Synod is the Archbishop of Athens and Primate of Greece Archbishop CHRYSOSTOMOS.

The Roman Catholic Church comprises 7 dioceses: 3 archbishoprics (Athens, Naxos-Tinos and Corfu) and 4 bishoprics (Syra, Santorin, Chio, Crete), and 1 Vicariate Apostolic (Salonica). Archbishop of Athens Most Rev. BENEDICTUS PRINTESS. The Roman Catholic Church has 127 churches.

The Catholic Church of the Greek Rite in Greece has one parish at Athens (Odos Acharnon 246) and another at Jannitsa (Macedonia); Exarch Apostolic Msgr. HYACINTHE GAD, titular Bishop of Gratianopolis, Odos Acharnon 246; the Church, Catholic exarchate of Byzantine rite, has about 3,000 adherents; publ.

Katholiki (weekly), the only Catholic paper in Greece, circ. 2,500.

The Greek Evangelical Church (Presbyterian): Bd. Améhe 50, Athens; f. 1886; comprising 30 organised churches; embraces about 1 per thousand of population; member of World Alliance of Reformed Churches: Moderator Rev. STELIOS KALOTERAKIS; publ. Star of the East (monthly).

Muslims (their status is regulated by Law 2345, "On Minorities"), the law provides as religious head of the Muslims a Chief Mufti; the Muslims in Greece possess a number of mosques and schools.

The Jewish Community: the Jewish population of Greece, estimated in 1943 at 75,000 people, was decimated as a result of the German occupation. In 1964 there were about 6,000 Jews in Greece. The Chief Rabbi of Athens is ISAAC M. GABAY; temple and offices: 5 Melidoni Street, Athens. The officially recognised representative body for the community is the Central Board of the Jewish Communities of Greece, 8 Melidoni str., Athens; f. 1945; Pres ISAAC D. EMMANUEL.

HUNGARY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Hungary is a state in Eastern Europe, bounded to the north by Czechoslovakia, to the east by the U.S.S.R. and Rumania, to the south by Yugoslavia and to the west by Austria. Its climate is Continental with long, dry summers and severe winters. The language is Hungarian (Magyar). Roman Catholics are the largest single religious denomination with over six million adherents. Other groups are the Hungarian Reformed Church, the Lutheran Church, the Hungarian Orthodox Church and a Jewish community numbering about 80,000. The flag consists of three horizontal stripes of red, white and green. The capital is Budapest.

Recent History

In 1946 a republic was declared and this was replaced in 1949 by a people's democracy on the Soviet pattern. Nationalisation of all major industry and the transport and economic systems took place. In 1956 a rising against the regime proved unsuccessful. A new government under the leadership of János Kádár was set up followed by a gradual modification of the totalitarianism associated with the previous government. In June 1965, Gyula Kállai became Prime Minister in succession to János Kádár, who retained his position as First Secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party. Hungary is an original member of the United Nations and aligned with the countries of Eastern Europe through her membership of the Warsaw Defence Pact and the Council for Mutual Economic Aid (COMECON).

Government

The highest organ of state power is Parliament elected every four years by all citizens of 18 years. Parliament elects the Presidential Council consisting of the President, who is the Head of State, two Vice-Presidents and 17 members. The Council exercises power between sessions of Parliament but it is responsible to it. Highest organ of state administration is the Council of Ministers, elected or removed by Parliament at the suggestion of the Presidential Council. The Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party plays an important part in government through its Central and Political Committees.

Defence

Hungary is a member of the Warsaw Pact alliance of East European States. Military service starts at 18 years and lasts for three years. Besides the regular army, which numbers about 100,000, there is a small air force of 9,000 and a fleet of vessels which patrol the Danube. There is also an armed force of 35,000 known as Workers' Guards. Defence estimates for 1965 totalled 5,757 million forints.

Economic Affairs

Industry is publicly owned. The economy is centrally planned and production is directed by five-year plans, a new one was introduced at the end of 1965. Hungary was formerly a predominantly agricultural country but since the war industry is responsible for one half of her total economy. She has become an exporter of engineering products, machine tools, buses, telecommunications and electrical equipment, electronic and other instruments and shipping. She is still a large exporter of meat, fruit and vegetables and half of her exports to Western European countries consists of agricultural produce. Over 95 per cent of the total arable area of the country is collectivised. Vineyards cover 500,000 acres. Chief imports are coal, iron ore, crude oil, coke, cotton and timber.

Transport and Communications

The Hungarian State Railways operate 19,580 kilometres (12,237 miles) of track of which 496 kilometres (310 miles) are electrified. There are 29,040 kilometres of roads. Long-distance bus routes cover about 19,000 kilometres. Navigable inland waterways total some 1,650 kilometres. There is a small merchant fleet using mainly Hungarian-built vessels of an average tonnage of 1,100 tons. These operate from the Danube to Mediterranean ports. The state airline MALEV has a wide internal network as well as a dozen international services.

Social Welfare

There is a comprehensive system of social security and state insurance administered by the trade unions. All costs are borne by employing enterprises and the State. There is a 3 per cent contribution from wages towards retirement pension.

Education

Education is compulsory and free for all children between the ages of 6 and 16. University education is assisted by faculty and State grants. There are nine universities and six technical universities.

Tourism

Tourism is developing rapidly. Lake Balaton is the main holiday centre for boating, bathing and fishing. The cities have great historical and recreational attractions. Budapest has numerous swimming pools watered by thermal springs. In 1964 there were 1,302,351 foreign visitors.

Nationals of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania, U.S.S.R. and Yugoslavia do not require visas to enter Hungary.

Sport

Football is the most popular sport. Swimming, athletics and fencing are also much favoured. Winter sports are popular. Hunting in many parts of the country attracts large numbers of foreign visitors, notably from Germany.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Easter Monday, April 14 (Liberation Day), May 1 (May Day), August 20 (Constitution Day), November 7 (October Revolution Day), December 25 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the forint.
1 forint = 100 fillers

Notes: Forints 100, 50, 20, 10.

Coins: Fillers, 50, 20, 10, 5; Forints: 5, 2, 1.

Exchange rate: 32 87 forints = £1 sterling

(Tourist rate: 65 74)

11 78 forints = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

A new Constitution was adopted in August, 1949. It declares Hungary to be a People's Republic, a State of workers and working peasants. The bulk of the means of production is publicly owned, and the right of the working peasants to their land is guaranteed. At the same time, support is given to producer agricultural co-operatives based on voluntary association and common labour. Property acquired by work is protected.

The National Assembly, the supreme legislative body, is a single-chamber parliament, consisting of one representative for 32,000 constituents. It elects, from 340 deputies to the National Assembly, the Presidential Council. It also elects the Council of Ministers, the Supreme Court, and the Attorney General and confirms the plan of the people's economy and the budget. Parliament has at least two sessions a year. Extraordinary sessions may be convened either by a decision of the Presidential Council or at the written request of at least one-third of the deputies.

The Presidential Council of twenty-one members calls the elections, concludes and ratifies international agreements, appoints and recalls diplomats, appoints senior civil servants, makes proposals to Parliament for the members of the Council of Ministers, grants amnesties, and between two sessions of Parliament, issues decrees that have the force of law.

The highest organ of State Administration is the Council of Ministers, responsible to the National Assembly.

Local organs of State power are the Councils, from whose members Executive Committees are elected.

Elections, both to the National Assembly and to the local Councils, are held every four years by universal suffrage of adults of eighteen years and over.

The Constitution also lays down the fundamental duties of the citizen as being to defend the wealth of the people, to consolidate public property, increase the economic strength of the Hungarian People's Republic, to raise the standard of living of the workers and advance their education, and to strengthen the order of the People's Democracy.

The Constitution guarantees the right to work, leisure, medical services and education.

Citizens are equal before the law, and discrimination on grounds of sex, religion or nationality is punishable. Women have equal rights with men. Minorities have the right to education in their own language.

Liberty of conscience and worship is guaranteed, and the Church is separated from the State. Freedom of the Press, of assembly, of speech, and the right of workers to organise themselves are guaranteed. The freedom of the individual, and the privacy of the home and of correspondence is inviolable.

POLITICAL PARTIES

In Hungary there is no parliamentary opposition. Opposition parties have either been absorbed in the Patriotic People's Front or dissolved.

Magyar Szocialista Munkáspárt (Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party): Szécheny Rakpart 19, Budapest V.; f. November 1956 to replace the Working People's Party (merger of the Communist and Social Democratic Parties). Membership at the end of 1963 was 520,000; First Sec. of the Central Committee JÁNOS KÁDÁR; publ. Népszabadság.

Hazafias Népfőnt (Patriotic People's Front): f. 1954; more a movement than a political party. It is composed of Party and non-Party people, and represents mass organisations such as trade unions, peasants and youth movements. It compiles the lists of candidates, on the basis of nominations from public meetings, for national and local elections. There are over 3,500 local committees; Pres. GYULA KÁLLAI; Sec.-Gen. FERENC ERDEI; publ. Magyar Nemzet.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Hungarian judicial system was established by a law passed in 1954. Jurisdiction is exercised by district and riding courts. Two appeals may be made, the first to county courts and the second to the Supreme Court in Budapest. Special military courts try military offences.

All cases are tried by a stipendiary judge and lay judges, all of whom are elected and subject to recall. The President and judges of the Supreme Court are elected by the National Assembly for periods of five years. District, riding and county court judges are elected by their local councils for three years. Lay judges are elected, from the best factory and agricultural workers, for a term of one month a year.

The Attorney-General, whose office was established in 1953, is independent of the judiciary, and it is his duty to prosecute in all criminal and political actions.

President of the Supreme Court: Dr. JOSZEF SZALAY.

Attorney-General: Dr. GÉZA SZÉNÁSI.

ICELAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Iceland is a volcanic island situated near the Arctic Circle in the North Atlantic. The island lies 155 miles south-east of Greenland, 645 west of Norway and 500 miles north of Scotland. The climate is cold with average temperatures ranging from 10°C (50°F) in summer to 1°C (34°F) in winter. Icelandic is the official language. The Evangelical Lutheran Church is the established church and embraces 96 per cent of the population. The flag is blue with a red cross bordered with white. The capital is Reykjavík.

Recent History

Iceland became independent in 1944 when the Convention linking it with Denmark under the Danish throne was terminated. Iceland is a founder member of the Nordic Council (1953) and has belonged to both NATO and the Council of Europe since 1949. In 1958, as a conservancy measure Iceland extended her territorial waters from 3 to 12 miles off-shore. The United Kingdom challenged the decision and British vessels continued to fish inside the new limits under naval protection. In 1960 they withdrew pending the decision of the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. The Icelandic Government agreed to a six-mile limit for British fishing boats until March, 1964, since when the 12 mile limit has been imposed.

Government

Executive power is vested in the President and the Cabinet consisting of the Prime Minister and six other Ministers. The Althing (Parliament) is divided into an Upper and Lower House. The Lower House is elected by universal suffrage. The Upper House consists of members chosen by the United Althing.

Defence

Iceland has no defence forces of her own but is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). There are units of United States Forces based on the island as part of NATO defence strategy.

Economic Affairs

Iceland's economy is based on fishing which provides almost all of her exports. Only 1 per cent of the land area is cultivated. Farming is mainly sheep-rearing. The principal crops are hay and roots for fodder. Hot-house cultivation using thermal springs produces fruit, flowers and vegetables. Industry is largely based on the fisheries, processing and tinning the catches, and shipbuilding and repairing. The industrial potential of the thermal springs is being investigated. The first development plan, 1963-66, provides for overall economic growth and includes large subsidies for agriculture and fisheries as well as increased investment in hydro-electric power plant.

Transport and Communications

There are no railways. Much of the interior is uninhabited and the main roads follow the coast line. Regular motor coach services link the main settlements. Heavy freight is carried by coastal shipping. The 1963 development plan provides for new roads and harbour installations. There are regular air services between Reykjavík and outlying townships.

Social Welfare

There is a comprehensive system of social security providing a wide range of insurance benefits. Contributions to the scheme are compulsory.

Education

Education is compulsory and free for all children between the ages of 7 and 15 years. There is one university.

Tourism

Iceland's main attraction for tourists lies in the ruggedness of the interior with its geysers and thermal springs. Mountaineering and pony trekking are increasingly popular as well as skiing and the study of bird life.

Visas are not required by nationals of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Canada, Cyprus, Denmark, Finland, France, Gambia, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Kenya, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Monaco, The Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, San Marino, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Spain, Switzerland, Sweden, Tanzania, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, U.K., U.S.A., Yugoslavia, Zambia.

Sport

The national sport is wrestling; but football, athletics and winter sports are universally popular. All children must, by law, learn to swim.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Years' Day), Good Friday, Easter Monday, 1st day of Summer (end of April), May 1 (Labour Day), Whitsun, June 17 (National Day), December 25 and 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The principal unit of currency is the Krónur (Kr), which is divided into 100 Aurar.

Notes: Krónur 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 25, 10, 5, 1.

Coins: Krónur 2, 1; Aurar 25, 10, 5, 2, 1.

Exchange rate. 120.6 Kr. = £1 sterling
43 Kr. = $1 U.S.

ICELAND—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

THE CONSTITUTION

FROM the year 930, when the Icelandic Free State was founded, settlement beginning in 874, until 1264 the land was an Independent Republic. In that year it lost its independence, falling first under Norwegian rule and then in 1380, with Norway, under Danish rule. When in 1814 Norway came under Sweden, Iceland remained with Denmark, and this continued until 1918, when its sovereign status was recognised. Certain subjects were reserved for joint consideration. The Order of Succession of the Crown was the most important. There was a Joint Committee which reviewed important legislation of both States and promoted bills aiming at co-operation. Citizens of both States enjoyed equal rights in the other, but were exempt from military service in the other. The union with Denmark was dissolved and a new Republican Constitution established on June 17th, 1944.

THE GOVERNMENT

The President is elected for four years by universal suffrage.

The Legislative power is jointly vested in the Althing, and the President. The Executive power is exercised by the President and other governmental authorities in accordance with the constitution and other laws of the land.

The Ministry is responsible to a bicameral legislature, the Althing, which has a regular annual session of three or four months.

The Althing is composed of up to 60 members, 49 of whom are elected by 8 proportionately represented constituencies for a period of four years, while 11 supplementary seats are allotted to the parties on a proportional basis. The Althing is divided into two houses, the efri deild, or Upper House, and the neðri deild, or Lower House; but sometimes both Houses work together as a United Althing. The Upper House consists of a third of the members whom the United Althing chooses from amongst the representatives, the remaining two-thirds forming the Lower House. The voting age, both for local administrative bodies and for the Althing, is reached by the electors (men and women) at 21.

The budget must be introduced in the United Althing but other bills may be introduced into either House. A bill which the Althing has already passed, may become law even if the President refuses to sign it, if the Althing passes it again by a two-thirds majority. Ministers may speak in either House, but may vote only in that of which they are members. The Ministers are responsible to the Althing and may be impeached by that body, in which case they are tried by a special Tribunal.

Substitute members are elected at the same time and in the same manner as Althing members, in such electoral districts as elect members by proportional representation. The eleven supplementary members elected at general elections take the seats allotted to the parties for equalisation, intended to achieve as near a really proportional representation with regard to the total of votes gained by each party as possible, without raising the total number of members above 60.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

For purposes of Local Government the country is divided into Provinces, Districts and Municipalities. The 8 Urban Municipalities are governed by Town Councils, which possess considerable autonomy. The Districts also have Councils and are further grouped together to form the Provinces, over each of which a centrally appointed Chief Official presides. The franchise for municipal purposes is universal above 21 years, conducted on a basis of proportional representation.

REPUBLIC OF IRELAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Ireland is an independent state comprising 26 of the 32 counties making up the island. The remaining six counties in the north come under the jurisdiction of the Governments of the United Kingdom and of Northern Ireland. Ireland lies in the Atlantic, 50-100 miles west of Great Britain. The climate is mild and equable. Irish is the official first language, but English is universally spoken. Official documents are printed in English and Irish. Eighty-eight per cent of the population are Roman Catholic and 12 per cent Protestant. The flag consists of three vertical bands of green, white and orange. The capital is Dublin.

Recent History

The Republic remained neutral during the Second World War and has since joined no military alliances. The country has contributed to international affairs in many ways. It is a very active member of the United Nations and has sent military contingents to the Congo and to Cyprus as part of UN peace-keeping activities.

Government

The President is elected by direct adult universal suffrage for a seven-year term. As Head of State he summons or dissolves Parliament which consists of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House of Representatives is elected by universal adult suffrage for a five-year term on the basis of proportional representation. Of the 60 members of the Senate, 49 are elected and 11 nominated by the Prime Minister. Executive functions are exercised by the Government which is responsible to Parliament.

Defence

There is a permanent defence force of 13,000. Recruitment is voluntary. Defence estimates for the year ending March 1966 provide for an expenditure of £11,522,000.

Economic Affairs

The economy is based on agriculture with processed foods, live animals and woollen textiles as the chief exports. Great Britain is the principal foreign customer, and free trade between Ireland and the United Kingdom in all commodities, except certain agricultural goods, is to be established from July 1966. The main industries are food and tobacco manufacture and brewing. An estimated yearly output of 150,000 tons is expected from recently discovered deposits of lead, zinc and copper concentrates at Tynagh. In 1958 the Government published a five-year programme, which has helped the country to achieve a growth rate of 4½ per cent per annum.

Transport and Communications

There are 2,086 miles of railways operated by the State. Diesel and diesel-electric trains have replaced steam locomotives virtually everywhere. Roads extend for 51,000 miles, 9,850 miles of which are main roads. Chief sea ports are Dublin and Dun Laoghaire, Cork and Cobh, Waterford and Galway. There is an international airport on the transatlantic route at Shannon. Air transport is provided by the Irish airline Aer Lingus.

Social Welfare

There is a system of Social Welfare Services which operates on a contributory and non-contributory basis. Health services are free to those in the lower income groups, and maternity and infant care is free to the middle income groups. In other cases fees relate to income.

Education

Free elementary education is given by the State. Secondary education is privately controlled, largely by religious orders. The Irish language is a compulsory subject in all schools. Special colleges provide instruction in agriculture and rural economy to young people. There are two universities.

Tourism

Over eleven million tourists visited Ireland in 1964. Income from tourism amounted to almost £60 million. The country has numerous beauty spots, notably the Killarney Lakes and the West Coast.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa: Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, German Federal Republic, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Iceland, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Mexico, Monaco, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey, U.K. (including Commonwealth countries), U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela.

Sport

Gaelic Football and hurling (a form of hockey) are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

March 17 (St. Patrick's Day), Good Friday, Easter Monday, Whit Monday, August Bank Holiday, December 25, 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The monetary unit is the Irish Pound = 20 Shillings = 240 Pence (at a fixed parity with the Pound Sterling).

Notes: £100, 50, 20, 10, 5, 1; 10 Shillings

Coins: Half Crown, Florin, Shilling, Sixpence, Threepence, Penny, Halfpenny.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE original Constitution of the Irish Free State came into operation on December 6th, 1922. Certain provisions which were regarded as contrary to national sentiments were gradually removed by successive amendments, with the result that by 1937 the text differed considerably from that of the original document. It was superseded by an entirely new Constitution, which was approved by Parliament (Dáil Éireann) on June 14th, 1937, and enacted by the people by means of a plebiscite on July 1st. This new Constitution came into operation on December 29th, 1937.

TITLE OF THE STATE

The title of the State is Éire or, in the English language, Ireland.

NATIONAL STATUS

The Constitution declares that Ireland is a sovereign, independent, democratic State. It affirms the inalienable, indefeasible and sovereign right of the Irish nation to choose its own form of government, to determine its relations with other nations, and to develop its life, political, economic and cultural, in accordance with its own genius and traditions.

The Constitution applies to the whole of Ireland, but, pending the re-integration of the national territory, the laws enacted by the Parliament established by the Constitution have the same area and extent of application as those of the Irish Free State.

THE PRESIDENT

At the head of the State is the President, elected by direct suffrage, who holds office for a period of seven years. He, on the advice of the Government or its head, summons and dissolves Parliament, signs and promulgates laws and appoints judges, and, on the nomination of Dáil Éireann, appoints the Taoiseach (Prime Minister) and, on the nomination of the Taoiseach and with the previous approval of Dáil Éireann, the other members of the Government. The supreme command of the Defence Forces is vested in him, its exercise being regulated by law.

In addition, the President has power to refer certain Bills to the Supreme Court for decision on the question of their constitutionality; and also, at the instance of a prescribed proportion of the members of both Houses of the Oireachtas, to refer certain Bills to the people for decision at a Referendum.

The President, in the exercise and performance of certain of his Constitutional powers and functions, has the aid and advice of a Council of State.

PARLIAMENT

The Oireachtas or National Parliament consists of the President and two Houses, viz. a House of Representatives, called Dáil Éireann, and a Senate, called Seanad Éireann. The Dáil consists of 144 members, who are elected for a five-year term by adult suffrage on the system of proportional representation by means of the single, transferable vote. Of the sixty members of the Senate, eleven are nominated by the Taoiseach (Prime Minister), six are elected by the universities, and forty-three are elected from five panels of candidates established on a vocational basis, representing: (1) National Language and Culture, Literature, Art, Education, and such professional interests as may be defined by law for the purpose of this panel; (2) Agriculture and allied interests, and Fisheries; (3) Labour, whether organised or unorganised; (4) Industry and Commerce, including banking, finance, accountancy, engineering and architecture; (5) Public Administration and social services, including voluntary social activities.

POWERS OF THE SENATE

A maximum period of ninety days is afforded to the Senate for the consideration or amendment of Bills sent to that House by the Dáil, but the Senate has no power to veto legislation.

EXECUTIVE POWER

The Executive Power of the State is exercised by the Government, which is responsible to Dáil Éireann and consists of not less than seven and not more than fifteen members. The head of the Government is the Taoiseach (Prime Minister).

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

The State recognises the family as the natural, primary and fundamental unit group of Society, possessing inalienable and imprescriptible rights antecedent and superior to all positive law. It acknowledges the right and duty of parents to provide for the education of their children, and, with due regard to that right, undertakes to provide free primary education. It pledges itself also to guard with special care the institution of marriage.

The Constitution contains special provision for the recognition and protection of the fundamental rights of citizens, such as personal liberty, free expression of opinion, peaceable assembly, and the formation of associations and unions.

Freedom of conscience and the free practice and profession of religion are, subject to public order and morality, guaranteed to every citizen. No religion may be endowed or subjected to discriminatory disability. The special position of the Catholic Church as the guardian of the faith professed by the majority of the citizens is recognised by the State. The other religious denominations existing in the country at the date of the coming into operation of the Constitution are also recognised.

DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES OF SOCIAL POLICY

Certain principles of social policy intended for the general guidance of the Oireachtas, but not cognisable by the courts, are set forth in the Constitution. Among their objects are the direction of the policy of the State towards securing the distribution of property so as to subserve the common good, the regulation of credit so as to serve the welfare of the people as a whole, the establishment of families in economic security on the land, and the right to an adequate means of livelihood for all citizens.

The State pledges itself to safeguard the interests, and to contribute where necessary to the support, of the infirm, the widow, the orphan and the aged, and shall endeavour to ensure that citizens shall not be forced by economic necessity to enter occupations unsuited to their sex, age or strength.

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION

No amendment to the Constitution can be effected except by the decision of the people given at a Referendum.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Fianna Fáil (The Republican Party): was formed in 1926 and provided the Government of Ireland from 1932 to 1948, from 1951 to 1954, and 1957 to date, with EAMON DE VALERA, President of the organisation, as Taoiseach (Prime Minister) until June 1959, when he was succeeded in both posts by SEÁN F. LEMASS. It has 1,900 branches and 72 members in the Dáil. Gen. Sec. Senator THOMAS MULLINS. Offices: 13 Upper Mount Street, Dublin; Party organ: Gléas (monthly)

Fine Gael (United Ireland Party): Formed in September 1933 by the amalgamation of Cumann na nGaedheal (the Cosgrave Party), the Centre Party (formerly the Farmers' Party), and the National Guard (formerly the Army Comrades Association). It has 47 members in the Dáil. Leader LIAM COSGRAVE, Hon Secs DENIS JONES, TD, PATRICK J. LINDSAY, TD. Offices 16 Hume Street, Dublin, Party organ: Fine Gael Bulletin.

The Labour Party originated with the addition of political functions to the Trade Union Congress in 1912. At the end of 1930 it was decided to separate the political and industrial functions of the Party, and the Trade Union Congress and the Labour Party became separate bodies. The Chairman of the Party is JAMES TULLY (Deputy); Leader of the Parliamentary Labour Party is B. CORISH (Deputy); Gen. Sec. Senator MARY F. DAVIDSON. Offices: 20 Earlsfort Terrace, Dublin.

Sinn Féin: 30 Gardiner Place, Dublin; f. 1905; aims: to end British occupation of Irish Territory, to end partition rule in Ireland and to replace the Partition Governments by a National government exercising jurisdiction over all Ireland. Publ. United Irishman; circ. 95,000.

Clann Cavan Association: c/o Dáil Éireann, Dublin; replaces the former Clann na Poblachta, which was dissolved in July 1965, one parliamentary representative, Leader JOHN TULLY.

THE JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Justice is administered in public by Judges appointed by the President on the advice of the Government. The Judges of all Courts are completely independent in the exercise of their functions. The jurisdiction and organisation of the Courts are dealt with in the Courts (Establishment and Constitution) Act 1961, and the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Acts, 1961 to 1964

THE SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court, consisting of the Chief Justice and four other Judges, has appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court, and on questions of law from all decisions of the Circuit Court in Workmen's Compensation cases. The President of the Republic may, before signing any Bill, refer it to the Supreme Court, to decide whether it is constitutional.

THE COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL

The Court of Criminal Appeal, consisting of the Chief Justice or some other Judge of the Supreme Court and two Judges of the High Court, deals with appeals by persons convicted on indictment, where leave to appeal has been granted. The decision of this Court is final unless the Court or the Attorney-General certifies that the point of law involved should, in the public interest, be taken to the Supreme Court

THE HIGH COURT

The High Court, consisting of the President of the High Court and six other Judges, has full original jurisdiction in, and power to determine, all matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal. The High Court on circuit acts as an appeal court from the Circuit Court. The Central Criminal Court sits as directed by the President of the High Court to try criminal cases outside the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court. The duty of acting as the Central Criminal Court is assigned, for the time being, to a Judge of the High Court.

CIRCUIT AND DISTRICT COURTS

The civil jurisdiction of the Circuit Court is limited to £600 in contract and tort, £1,000 in actions founded on hire-purchase and credit-sale agreements, and £2,000 in equity, but where the parties consent the jurisdiction is unlimited. In criminal matters the Court has jurisdiction in all cases except murder, treason, piracy and allied offences. A Circuit Judge is assigned to each circuit and two to the Dublin circuit. The Circuit Court acts as an appeal court from the District Court, which has a summary jurisdiction in a large number of criminal cases where the offence is not of a serious nature. In civil matters the District Court has jurisdiction in contract and tort (except slander, libel, criminal conversation, seduction, slander of title, malicious prosecution and false imprisonment) where the claim does not exceed £50. In actions founded on hire-purchase and credit-sale agreements the jurisdiction extends to £100.

All criminal cases except those dealt with summarily by a Justice in the District Court are tried by a Judge and a Jury of twelve. Juries are also used in very many civil cases. In a criminal case the jury must be unanimous in reaching a verdict but in a civil case the agreement of nine members is sufficient.

JUDGES OF THE SUPREME COURT

Hon. CEARBHALL O'DÁLAIGH, Chief Justice.
Hon. CECIL LAVERY.
Hon. K. HAUGH.
Hon. BRIAN WALSH.
Hon. AINDRIAS Ó CAOIMH.

JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURT

RELIGION

The religious professions of the population are approximately as follows: Roman Catholics 2,700,000; the Church of Ireland (Anglicans) 100,000; Presbyterians 20,000; Methodists 8,000; all others 10,000.

The organisation of the churches takes no account of the partition of Ireland into two separate political entities. Thus the Catholic Primate of All-Ireland and the Protestant Episcopalian Primate of All-Ireland now have their seat in Northern Ireland at Armagh, and the headquarters of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland is at Belfast.

ITALY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Italy is a peninsula extending from southern Europe into the Mediterranean Sea. The peninsula is about 730 miles long and 150 miles at its widest point. The two principal islands are Sicily to the south-west and Sardinia to the west. The Alps form a natural boundary to the north where the bordering countries are France to the north-west, Switzerland and Austria to the north and Yugoslavia to the north-east. The climate is Mediterranean. The language is Italian. German is spoken in the Alto Adige region on the Austrian border, and in the Basilicata region of eastern Italy there is an Albanian-speaking minority. Roman Catholicism is the state religion. The flag has three vertical bands of green, white and red. The capital is Rome.

Recent History

In 1946, as the result of a plebiscite, the Monarchy was abolished and a Republic officially declared in 1948. In 1952 Italy joined the European Coal and Steel Community and in 1958 was one of the founder-members of the European Economic Community (the Common Market). Since the war the Christian Democratic Party has dominated government coalitions but in the General Election of April, 1963, it lost ground to the Right and to the Communists. In November, 1963, and February, 1966, governments under Signor Moro were formed with the participation of the Socialist Party. Following a severe illness President Segni resigned in December, 1964, and was succeeded by Giuseppe Saragat, the leader of the Social Democratic Party.

Government

Parliament consists of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. Both jointly exercise legislative functions. Deputies serve a five-year term and are elected by direct adult suffrage. Senators are elected for a six-year term on a regional basis. The President of the Republic, who is the Head of the State, is elected jointly by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate for a period of seven years. The President nominates the Council of Ministers which forms the executive.

Defence

Over 15 per cent of the national budget is allocated to defence. Italy, a NATO member, maintains an Army of 292,000, a Navy of 38,000 and an Air Force of 60,000. Military service lasts 15 months in the Army and Air Force and two years in the Navy. Defence estimates for 1965 totalled 1,112,510 million lire.

Economic Affairs

Formerly an agricultural country much visited by tourists, Italy has industrialised itself since the war and now enjoys a thriving and balanced economy. A Five Year Plan, 1965-69, envisages an annual growth rate of five per cent. The triangle formed by the northern cities of Genoa, Turin and Milan has a complex of chemical, textile, engineering, electronic and motor vehicle factories employing thousands of Italians from the poor regions south of Rome. These regions, including Sicily, are being strenuously developed by the Cassa del Mezzogiorno (the state fund to develop Southern Italy). The EEC has also undertaken a project for the industrial and economic development of the Puglia and Basilicata regions, involving an investment over the four years 1966-1970 of 100,000 million lire. Italy has few raw materials and coal has to be imported, but much energy is drawn from water power; there are also large natural gas reserves which account for 85 per cent of total gas production. Tourism and agriculture remain of the first importance. The chief crops are wheat, rice, maize, grapes and olives and much wine is produced. Many Italians work abroad and their remittances form a valuable source of income. Italian firms execute large civil engineering projects in many parts of the world. Italian fashion and design also have an international reputation.

Transport and Communications

There are more than 13,500 miles of railways, half of them electrified. Italy has an advanced system of motorways. These are being extended, the most important undertaking being the Autostrada del Sole (the Sun Highway) between Milan and Naples. The Mont Blanc Tunnel, opened in 1965, shortens the road journey from Paris to Rome by 130 miles. The Great St. Bernard Tunnel linking Italy with Switzerland was opened in March 1964. When the section from the Brenner Pass to Verona is completed by 1970 there will be an unbroken motorway link from Northern Europe to Southern Italy. Alitalia, the Italian airline, operates internally and throughout the world. The merchant fleet has a gross tonnage of 5.7 million tons and is the world's eighth largest.

Social Welfare

Family allowances, sickness, unemployment and injury benefits, marriage, birth and death grants and retirement pensions are paid. The bulk of contributions are paid by employers.

Education

Education is compulsory and free between the ages of 6 and 14. There are 30 universities.

Tourism

With Alpine and Mediterranean scenery, a sunny climate, Roman buildings, Renaissance towns and palaces, paintings and sculpture, and scores of opera houses, Italy is a perfect land for tourists. More than 20 million foreigners go there every year.

The income from tourism totalled $1,035 million in 1964, and expenditure was $209 million.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Algeria, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia,

THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of the Republic of Italy was approved by the Constituent Assembly on December 22nd, 1947, and came into force on January 1st, 1948. The fundamental principles are set out in Articles 1-12 as follows:

Italy is a democratic republic based on the labour of the people.

The Republic recognises and guarantees as inviolable the rights of man, either as an individual or in a community, and it expects in return devotion to duty and the fulfilment of political, economic and social obligations.

All citizens shall enjoy equal status and shall be regarded as equal before the law, without distinction of sex, race, language or religion, and without regard to the political opinions which they may hold or their personal or social standing.

It shall be the function of the Republic to remove the economic and social inequalities which, by restricting the liberty of the individual, impede the full development of the human personality, thereby reducing the effective participation of the citizen in the political, economic and social life of the country.

The Republic recognises the right of all citizens to work, and shall do all in its power to give effect to this right.

The Republic, while remaining one and indivisible, shall recognise and promote local autonomy, fostering the greatest possible decentralisation in those services which are administered by the State, and subordinating legislative methods and principles to the exigencies of decentralised and autonomous areas.

The State and the Catholic Church shall be sovereign and independent, each in its own sphere. Their relations shall be governed by the Lateran Pact ("Patti Lateranensi"), and any modification in the pact agreed upon by both parties shall not necessitate any revision of the Constitution.

All religious denominations shall have equal liberty before the law, denominations other than the Catholic having the right to worship according to their beliefs, in so far as they do not conflict with the common law of the country.

The Republic shall do all in its power to promote the development of culture and scientific and technical research. It shall also protect and preserve the countryside and the historical and artistic monuments which are the inheritance of the nation.

The juridical system of the Italian Republic shall be in conformity with the generally recognised practice of international law. The legal rights of foreigners in the country shall be regulated by law in accordance with international practice.

Any citizen of a foreign country who is deprived of democratic liberty such as is guaranteed under the Italian Constitution, has the right of asylum within the territory of the Republic in accordance with the terms of the law, and his extradition for political offences will not be granted.

Italy repudiates war as an instrument of offence against the liberty of other nations and as a means of resolving international disputes. Italy accepts, under parity with other nations, the limitations of sovereignty necessary for the preservation of peace and justice between nations. To that end she will support and promote international organisations.

The Constitution is further divided into Parts I and II, in which are set forth respectively the rights and responsibilities of the citizen and the administration of the Republic.

PART I

SECTION I—Civic Clauses (Articles 13-28)

The liberty of the individual is inviolable and no form of detention, restriction or inspection is permitted unless it be for juridical purposes and in accordance with the provisions of the law. The domicile of a person is likewise inviolable and shall be immune from forced inspection or sequestration, except according to the provisions of the law. Furthermore, all citizens shall be free to move wheresoever they will throughout the country, and may leave it and return to it without let or hindrance. Right of public meeting, if peaceful and without arms, is guaranteed. Secret organisations of a directly or indirectly political or military nature are, however, prohibited.

Freedom in the practice of religions faith is guaranteed.

The Constitution further guarantees complete freedom of thought, speech and writing, and lays down that the Press shall be entirely free from all control or censorship. No person may be deprived of civic or legal rights on political grounds.

The death penalty is not allowed under the Constitution except in case of martial law. The accused shall be considered "not guilty" until he is otherwise proven. All punishment shall be consistent with humanitarian practice and shall be directed towards the re-education of the criminal.

SECTION II—Ethical and Social Clauses (Articles 29-34)

The Republic regards the family as the fundamental basis of society and considers the parents to be responsible for the maintenance, instruction and education of the children. The Republic shall provide economic assistance for the family, with special regard to large families, and shall make provision for maternity, infancy and youth, subject always to the liberty and freedom of choice of the individual as envisaged under the law.

Education, the arts and science shall be free, the function of the State being merely to indicate the general lines of instruction. Private entities and individuals shall have the right to conduct educational institutions without assistance from the State, but such non-State institutions must ensure to their pupils liberty and instruction equal to that in the State schools. Institutions of higher culture, universities and academies shall be autonomous within the limitations prescribed by the law.

Education is available to all and is free and obligatory for at least eight years. Higher education for students of proven merit shall be aided by scholarships and other allowances made by the Republic.

SECTION III—Economic Clauses (Articles 35-47)

The Republic shall safeguard the right to work in all its aspects, and shall promote agreement and co-operation with international organisations in matters pertaining to the regulation of labour and the rights of workers. The rights of Italian workers abroad shall be protected.

The worker shall be entitled to remuneration proportionate to the quantity and quality of his work, and in any case shall be ensured of sufficient to provide freedom and a dignified standard of life for himself and his family.

The maximum working hours shall be fixed by law, and the worker shall be entitled to a weekly day of rest and an annual holiday of nine days with pay.

Women shall have the same rights and, for equal work, the same remuneration as men. Conditions of work shall be regulated by their special family requirements and the needs of mother and child. The work of minors shall be specially protected.

All citizens have the right to sickness, unemployment and disability maintenance.

Liberty to organise in trade unions is guaranteed and any union may register as a legal entity, provided it is organised on a democratic basis. The right to strike is admitted within the limitations of the relevant legislation.

Private enterprise is permitted in so far as it does not run counter to the social well-being nor constitute a danger to security, freedom and human dignity.

Ownership of private property is permitted and guaranteed within the limitations laid down by the law regarding the acquisition, extent and enjoyment of private property. Inheritance and testamentary bequests shall be regulated by law.

Limitation is placed by law on private ownership of land and on its use, with a view to its best exploitation for the benefit of the community.

The Republic recognises the value of mutual co-operation and the right of the workers to participate in management.

The Republic shall encourage all forms of saving, by house-purchase, by co-operative ownership and by investment in the public utility undertakings of the country.

SECTION IV—Political Clauses (Articles 48-54)

The electorate comprises all citizens, both men and women, who have attained their majority. Voting is free, equal and secret, and its exercise is a civic duty. All citizens have the right to associate freely together in political parties, and may also petition the Chambers to legislate as may be deemed necessary.

All citizens of both sexes may hold public office on equal terms.

Defence of his country is a sacred duty of the citizen, and military service is obligatory within the limits prescribed by law. Its fulfilment shall in no way prejudice the position of the worker nor hinder the exercise of his political rights. The organisation of the armed forces shall be imbued with the spirit of democracy.

All citizens must contribute to the public expenditure, each in proportion to his capacity.

All citizens must be loyal to the Republic and observe the terms of the law and the Constitution.

PART II

SECTIONS I, II, AND III (Articles 55-100)

These sections are devoted to a detailed exposition of the Legislature and legislative procedure of the Republic.

Parliament shall comprise two Chambers, namely the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate of the Republic.

The Chamber of Deputies is elected by direct universal suffrage, the number of Deputies being six hundred and thirty. All voters who on the day of the elections are twenty-five years of age, may be elected Deputies.

Seats are apportioned by dividing the number of inhabitants of the Republic, as shown in the last general census, by six hundred and thirty, and allocating the seats proportionally to the population of each constituency.

The Senate of the Republic is elected on regional basis, the number of eligible Senators being three hundred and fifteen. No Region shall have less than seven Senators. Val d'Aosta has only one Senator.

Seats are allocated proportionally among the Regions in the same way as for the Chamber of Deputies.

The Chamber of Deputies and the Senate of the Republic are elected for five years.

The term of each House cannot be extended except by law and only in the case of war.

Members of Parliament shall receive remuneration fixed by law.

The President of the Republic must be a citizen of at least fifty years of age and in full enjoyment of all civic and political rights. He shall be elected for a period of seven years (Articles 84-85).

The Government shall consist of the President of the Council and the Ministers who themselves shall form the Council. The President of the Council, or Prime Minister, shall be nominated by the President of the Republic, who shall also appoint the Ministers on the recommendation of the Prime Minister (Article 92).

SECTION IV (Articles 101-113) sets forth the judicial system and procedure.

SECTION V (Articles 114-133) deals with the division of the Republic into regions, provinces and communes, and sets forth the limits and extent of autonomy enjoyed by the regions. Under Article 131 the regions are enumerated as follows.

Piedmont	Molise
Lombardy	Campania
Veneto	Puglia
Liguria	Basilicata
Emilia-Romagna	Calabria
Tuscany	Sicily
Umbria	Sardinia
Marche	Trentino-Alto Adige
Lazio	Friuli-Venezia Giulia
Abruzzi	Val d'Aosta

The last five-named regions shall have a wider form of autonomy based on constitutional legislation specially adapted to their regional characteristics (Article 116). Each region shall be administered by a Regional Council, in which is vested the legislative power and which may make suggestions for legislation to the Chambers, and the "Giunta regionale" which holds the executive power (Article 121).

The final articles provide for the establishment of the "Corte Costituzionale" to deal with constitutional questions and any revisions which may be found necessary after the Constitution has come into operation.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Partito Democrazia Cristiana (D.C.) (Christian Democrats): Central Office: Rome, Piazza Luigi Sturzo 15; f. 1943; is successor to the pre-Fascist Popular Party. While extending its appeal to voters of all classes, the party attempts to maintain a centre position while co-operating with the left-wing Socialist Party, and favours social reforms. It is openly and militantly anti-Communist.

Leaders: Pres. of Nat. Council ATTILIO PICCIONI; Political Sec. Prof. MARIANO RUMOR.

Partito Comunista Italiano (P.C.I.) (Communist Party): Central Office: Rome, Via delle Botteghe Oscure 4, f. 1921; number of members, 1,615,296; the largest Communist party in Western Europe; advocates sweeping industrial nationalisation, labour and social reforms, enforcement of anti-monopoly legislation, land re-distribution and most other policies leading along a national path towards socialism, peace and democracy. Its general electoral appeal is to the working classes. The party has 166 M.P.s and 85 Senators.

Leaders: LUIGI LONGO (Gen.-Sec.); Secretariat: GIORGIO AMENDOLA, PIETRO INGRAO (Leader in Chamber of Deputies), GIANCARLO PAJETTA, ENRICO BERLINGUER, ALESSANDRO NATTA, EMANUELE MACALUSO.

Publs. L'Unità (daily), Rinascita (weekly), Critica Marxista (bi-monthly), Vie Nuove (weekly), Foreign Bulletin (bi-monthly in English, French and Spanish), Weekly Bulletin (English and French).

Partito Socialista Italiano (P.S.I.) (Italian Socialist Party): Central Office. Rome, Via del Corso 476. The P.S.I. was expelled from the Socialist International in May 1949, after it had advocated a policy of maximum collaboration with the Communist Party.

The party advocates nationalisation of industrial and commercial monopolies and moderate land reforms. In foreign policy it believes that Italy should remain completely independent of any bloc, but should co-operate with all democratic nations. Since the formation of the Government of December 1963, the Party has been represented in the Government.

Leaders: PIETRO NENNI, FRANCESCO DE MARTINO (Sec.-Gen.), GIACOMO BRODOLINI, RICCARDO LOMBARDI, GIORGIO VERONESI, VINCENZO BALZAMO (Secs.)

Partito Liberale Italiano (P.L.I.) (Liberal Party of Italy): Rome, Via Frattina 89; f. 1848 by Cavour, its chief aim is the realisation of the principle of freedom in all public and private matters.

Chief Mems.: On. GAETANO MARTINO (Pres.), On. VITTORIO BADINI-CONFALONIERI, ENZO STORONI (Vice-Pres.), On. GIOVANNI MALAGODI (Sec.-Gen.), On. ALDO BOZZI (Deputy Sec.-Gen.); chief organ La Tribuna.

Partito Socialista Democratico Italiano (P.S.D.I.) (Social Democratic Party—Italian Section of the Socialist International): Central Office: Rome, Piazza Colonna 366; formed in March 1951 by the merger of the Italian Socialist Workers' Party (P.S.L.I.) and the Unitary Socialist Party (P.S.U.), which had broken away from the P.S.I. in January 1947 and December 1949 respectively; the new party was known, when the merger became operative in May 1951, as the Italian Socialist Party—Italian Section of the Socialist International. The present title was adopted in January 1952.

Leaders: Sec. MARIO TANASSI; Vice-Sec. ANTONIO CARIGLAI; chief organ, Socialismo Democratico (weekly).

Movimento Sociale Italiano (Italian Social Movement): Rome, Via Quattro Fontane 22; f. 1946; 650,000 mems.; a right-wing party; Pres. AUGUSTO DE MARSANICH; Sec. ARTURO MICHELINI.

Partito Socialista Italiano di Unità Proletaria: c/o Mondo Nuovo, Rampa Mignanelli 12, Rome; f. January 1964 as breakaway from Socialist Party; 200,000 mems; Sec. Prof. TULLIO VECCHIETTI.

Partito Democratico Italiano di Unità Monarchica (Italian Democratic Party of Monarchical Unity): Piazza del Gesù 49, Rome; f. 1959, by fusion of Partito Nazionale Monarchico and Partito Popolare Monarchico; Pres. ORAZIO CONDORELLI; Nat. Sec. Prof. ALFREDO COVELLI.

Partito Repubblicano Italiano (P.R.I.) (Republican Party of Italy): Rome, Corso Vittorio Emanuele 326; f. 1897; followers of the principles of the Mazzinian school (social justice in a modern free society); 125,000 mems.

Sec. UGO LA MALFA; daily paper, La Voce Repubblicana (Editor PASQUALE BANDIERA), L'Informatore Repubblicano (Editor MARIO DI BARTOLOMEI).

There are also the following small parties: South Tyrol People's Party, Piedmont Independent Party, Comunità and National Labour Party.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Corte Costituzionale: Palazzo Della Consulta, Piazza del Quirinale 41, Rome; consists of 15 judges, one third nominated by the President of the Republic, one third elected by Parliament in joint session, one third by the ordinary and administrative supreme courts; Pres. Prof. GASPARE AMBROSINI; Sec.-Gen. Dott. MARCELLO CARLOMAGNO.

Consiglio Superiore della Magistratura: Piazza della Indipendenza 6, Rome; Pres. the President of the Republic; Vice-Pres. Avv. ERCOLE ROCCHETTI.

Consiglio di Stato: Palazzo Spada, Piazza Capo di Ferro 13, Rome; established in accordance with Article 10 of the Constitution; has both consultative and judicial functions; Pres. Prof. CARLO BOZZI.

Corte dei Conti: Via Baiamonti 25, Rome, and Via Barberini 38, Rome; functions as the court of public accounts; Pres. Dott. FERDINANDO CARBONE.

Corte Suprema di Cassazione: Palazzo di Giustizia, Rome; supreme court of civil and criminal appeal; First Pres. Dott. SILVIO TAVOLARO; Asst. Pres. Dott. LUIGI GIANNANTONIO.

The Constitutional Court was established in 1956 and is an autonomous organ of the Constitution, standing apart from the judicial system. Its most important function is to pronounce on the constitutionality of legislation both subsequent and prior to the present Constitution of 1948. It also judges accusations brought against the President of the Republic or ministers of state.

At the base of the system of penal jurisdiction are the Preture (District Courts), where offences carrying a fine or a sentence of up to three years imprisonment are tried. Above the Preture are the Tribunali (Tribunals) and the Corti di Assise presso i Tribunali (Assize Courts attached to the Tribunals), where the graver offences are dealt with From these courts appeal lies to the Corti di Appello (Courts of Appeal) and the parallel Corti di Assise di Appello (Assize Courts of Appeal). Final appeal may be made, on juridical grounds only, to the Corte Suprema di Cassazione.

Civil cases may be taken in the first instance to the Giudici Conciliatori (Justices of the Peace), Preture or Tribunali, according to the seriousness of the offence.

Appeal from the Giudici Conciliatori lies to the Preture, from the Preture to the Tribunali, from the Tribunali to the Corti di Appello, and finally, as in penal justice, to the Corte di Suprema Cassazione on juridical grounds only.

Special departments for cases concerning labour relations or young persons may be attached to both penal and civil courts. Cases concerned with the public service and its employees are tried by the Consiglio di Stato.

RELIGION

More than 90 per cent of the population of Italy profess the Roman Catholic faith.

Under the terms of the Lateran Pact, signed in 1929 between Mussolini and the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Gasparri, the Catholic Apostolic Roman Religion was recognised as the official religion of Italy, and instruction in the Roman Catholic doctrine became compulsory in Italian schools. The Holy See was accorded sovereign rights in the Vatican City, which was granted extraterritorial rights as an independent State. Furthermore, the person of the Pope was declared sacred and inviolable, and Cardinals were granted honours formerly only accorded to princes of the blood royal. In this way the dispute between the Papacy and the Italian Government, which had begun in 1870 with the creation of a united Italy, was terminated.

The question of relations between the Roman Catholic Church and the Italian State arose in a sharpened form during the debates on the Constitution in the post-war Constituent Assembly. Article 5 of the draft Constitution, which formally accepted the Lateran Pact of 1929 in its entirety, occasioned a prolonged and heated debate, but was finally accepted on March 26th, 1947, by 350 votes to 149.

NATIONALISED BODIES

ISTITUTO PER LA RICOSTRUZIONE INDUSTRIALE—IRI

(Institute for Industrial Reconstruction)

89 Via Veneto, Rome

President: Prof. GIUSEPPE PETRILLI

Established 1937 as an autonomous government agency controlling banking and credit institutions as well as many of the largest industrial undertakings. There are six sectoral holding companies:

STET: Six companies providing urban and trunk line telephone services, catering for nearly four million subscribers. Length of urban circuits: 8,400,000 km. Length of extra-urban circuits: 2,300,000 km.

FINMARE: Four large shipping lines. At the end of 1963 the companies accounted for 65 per cent of Italy's passenger and mixed passenger-cargo carrying capacity. More than 1,700,000 passengers were carried in 1962.

FINCANTIERI: Seven shipbuilding firms, accounting for almost eighty per cent of total Italian capacity. Ship's motors, cranes and other engineering products are also manufactured.

FINSIDER: Nine major iron and steel firms producing pig iron, steel, tubes, plates, sections, structural steel, cement and other products.

FINMECCANICA: Twelve major engineering firms, including aircraft, motor vehicles, industrial machinery, electronics and optical instruments.

FINELETTRICA: Three electrical firms. Most of this group's activities have been taken over by the nationalised electricity board ENEL (see below).

Thirteen other companies, including the national airline ALITALIA and RAI television service are also under direct IRI control.

ENTE NAZIONALE PER L'ENERGIA ELETTRICA—ENEL

ENTE NAZIONALE IDROCARBURI—ENI
(ITALIAN STATE PETROLEUM COMPANY)

72 Viale dell'Arte, Rome

President: MARCELLO BOLDRINI.

A state holding company with subsidiaries operating in petroleum exploration and production, refining, petroleum products marketing, petro-chemicals and scientific research.

CASSA DEL MEZZOGIORNO

(SOUTHERN ITALY DEVELOPMENT FUND)

Piazzale dei Congressi 20, Eur, Rome

President: Prof. GABRIELE PESCATORE.

The Fund was set up in 1950 to develop the southern areas of the country. Up to 1964 contracts for public works worth 1,388,000 million lire had been awarded. The Fund has been extended until 1980 with 5-year periods coordinated with the general economic programme. During the period 1965-70 an annual average investment of 340,000 million lire is envisaged. The following are projects supervised by the Fund.

Land Reclamation: More than 4,600 kilometres of river banking, canals and drains have been completed. Over 730,000 hectares of land have been drained and 6,700 kilometres of canals laid. Roads in these areas have been extended by 7,000 kilometres.

Water supply: The Fund has tackled the drought problem by laying 9,100 kilometres of mains and constructing 1,700 reservoirs with a capacity of 1,200,000 cubic metres.

Professional and Technical Education: Thirty-eight new schools are to be built to train people in industry, commerce and services. Twenty-one agricultural schools with 129 branches have been opened. The Fund has allocated 6,042 million lire for building schools and nursery schools. Work will be carried out by unemployed persons who will receive trade training at the same time.

Land Improvement: In June 1963, the Fund approved plans for the construction of 8,500 kilometres of farm roads, 75,633 wells, tanks and reservoirs and 3,200 kilometres of electricity grid.

TRANSPORT

Ispettorato Generale della Motorizzazione Civile e dei Trasporti in Concessione: Rome, Piazza Croce Rossa; Dir.-Gen. Ing. PAOLO CARLUCCI; publ. Trasporti Pubblici (monthly); controls road transport and traffic, and public transport services (railways operated by private companies, tramways, motor-buses, trolley-buses, funicular railways and inland waterways).

RAILWAYS

Ferrovie dello Stato: Rome, Piazza della Croce Rossa; an autonomous body which administers the State Railways; it is controlled by the Minister of Transport and Civil Aviation, who is assisted by an Administrative Board; Dir.-Gen. Dr. GIUSEPPE RENZETTI. The majority of Italian lines are in the hands of the State. Some branch lines, chiefly those of narrow gauge, are in the hands of private companies. The first railway line (Naples-Portici) was inaugurated in 1839 and the State Service in 1905. Length (June 1964) 16,452 km, of which 7,964 km. are electrified.

ROADS

Azienda Nazionale Autonoma delle Strade Statali (ANAS) (National Autonomous Road Corporation): f. 1928, reorganised 1948, responsible for the administration of State Autostrade and other roads and their improvement and extension; functions under the control of the Ministry of Public Works. Total length of Italian roads (1960) 181,018 km.

A very extensive programme of road extension and improvement in all spheres is in progress at the moment. The most important of these plans is the "Autostrada del Sole" (the "Sun Highway"), over 738 km. in length, which will connect Milan with Naples and the northern regions with those of the south. The sections from Milan to Florence and from Capua to Naples are complete and also connections between Florence and Pisa, and Rome and Ostia. Other important roads are the coastal road from Genoa to Savona and the Catania-Messina highway in Sicily, both finished in 1960.

ATOMIC ENERGY

Comitato Nazionale per l'Energia Nucleare—CNEN (National Committee for Nuclear Energy): Rome, Via Behsario 15; f. 1960; Pres. On. EMILIO COLOMBO; Vice-Pres Senator Prof. BASILIO FOCACCIA.

In August 1960 CNEN succeeded the National Committee for Nuclear Research (CNRN), which was set up in 1952.

The new Committee inherits the tasks of pure and applied research, and must also maintain technical control over industrial nuclear power plants which are being built in increasing numbers. It promotes and encourages the development of industrial applications of nuclear energy, and co-operates internationally.

CNEN, which has a staff of about 1,500, owns the research centres of Frascati, Casaccia and Bologna. It prospects for uranium, undertakes research into the production of nuclear materials, constructs prototype power reactors, applies nuclear energy to agriculture and medicine, and trains personnel.

CNEN advises the Foreign Ministry about policy in discussions with the International Atomic Energy Agency, the European Nuclear Energy Agency and EURATOM.

Istituto Nazionale di Fisica Nucleare—INFN (National Institute of Nuclear Physics): Casella Postale 70, Frascati, Rome; f. 1951; eight sections in Universities of Turin, Milan, Padua, Bologna, Pisa, Rome, Genoa and Naples; sub-sections in Universities of Florence, Trieste, Bari and Public Health Institute in Rome; groups in Universities of Catania, Messina and Palermo, forming the Sicilian section, and in Universities of Parma, Pavia, Politecnico of Milan; Pres Prof. EDOARDO AMALDI.

Since 1952 the Institute has been financed by CNEN, for whom it conducts basic research.

National Laboratory at Frascati: Casella Postale 70, Frascati, Rome; equipped with 1,100-MeV electron synchrotron, functioning since February 1959; Dir. Prof. LUCIO MEZZETTI.

There are eleven other smaller accelerators elsewhere in Italy.

Casaccia Centre for Nuclear Studies: S.p. Anguillarese Km.1—300, Rome, S. Maria di Galeria; Director: Dr Ing. GIANFRANCO FRANCO.

The Centre, which is particularly concerned with nuclear applied research, is equipped with the following reactors.

A Triga Mark II reactor, whose original power of 100 kW will now be increased to 1 MW. Fuelled by 20 per cent enriched uranium, it is used for research and training.

The Rana reactor (a swimming-pool graphite-reflected and natural-convection-cooled reactor with an operating power of 10 kW), which was recently transferred to the Casaccia Centre after one year's operation at Ispra, where it was known as the Ispra-2. It is particularly suited to neutron physics measurements.

An Organic Zero Power Experimental Reactor (ROSPO). Used for the study of cores using organic moderator.

A Zero Power Engineering Technological and Metallurgical Reactor (RITMO), recently built. Used within the framework of the construction programme of the big material test reactor (R.T.M.).

The Centre also develops biological research—for which laboratories and a gamma-field have been installed—concerned with animal radiobiology studies, health physics, applications of nuclear energy to agriculture.

At Casaccia there are also electronic laboratories planning the electronic instrumentation for experiments at the CNEN research centre and the Frascati National Laboratory, geomining analysis laboratories, chemistry and metallurgical facilities, hot cells for work on "hot" materials, and a waste disposal laboratory.

Centro Informazioni Studi Esperienze (Information, Study and Experiment Centre): Casella Postale 3986, Milan; f. 1946; 280 members; Pres. Prof. ARNALDO M. ANGELINI; Man. Dir. Prof. CORRADO GENESIO; Technical Dir. Prof. GINO BOZZA. Laboratories Dir.: Chemistry and Radiochemistry, Prof. ENRICO CERRAI; Electronics, Prof. EMILIO GATTI; Nuclear Engineering, Prof. MARIO SILVESTRI; Nuclear Physics, Prof. UGO FACCHINI; Solid State Physics, Prof. ELIO GERMAIGNOLI; Technology, Ing. GIOVANNI PERONA; Documentation Service Head, Ing. LUIGI LUCIANI; publ. Energia Nucleare (monthly journal), CISE Reports, CISE Reprints.

The main task of the CISE is to carry on a research and development programme on a nuclear reactor concept (CIRENE) cooled by a water-steam mixture. Other CISE activities concern semi-conductor detectors, lasers, nuclear reactions and nuclear models, metal physics, ceramic reactor fuels.

The CISE installations include a 4 MeV Van de Graaff accelerator.

Centro di Studi Nucleari "Enrico Fermi" (Enrico Fermi Centre for Nuclear Studies): Polytechnic School, Via C. Pascal 3, Milan; Dir. Prof. GIUSEPPE BOLLA.

Equipped with a 50 kW research reactor.

Centro Siciliano di Fisica Nucleare (CSFN) (Sicilian Centre of Nuclear Physics): 57 Corso Italia, Catania, f. 1955. Pres. Prof. I. F. QUERCIA.

Società Elettrol nucleare Nazionale (SENN): 6 Via Torino, Rome, f. 1957; State controlled; nine public utility companies, five industrial companies are shareholders, will own and operate Garigliano river plant of 150 MW; Pres. TOMMASO ZERBI.

Società Elettrol nucleare Italiana (SELNI): Owned by group of private power companies; will build 165 MW plant at Trino Vercellese in North Italy.

AGIP Nucleare S.p.A.: P.O. Box 4179, S. Donato Milanese Milan; State controlled; conducts research into nuclear power stations, especially in the gas-cooled reactors field.

SIMEA: Latina; State controlled; is building a 200-MW plant near Latina.

SAN MARINO

The republic of San Marino is situated in central Italy on the slopes of Mount Titano in the Apennines. A treaty of friendship with Italy was first signed on June 28th, 1861, and was last renewed on April 20th, 1953.

Area: 63 sq. km

Population: 1953 census; 13,500; 1962 estimate: 17,020; San Marino (capital) 3,000.

Finance: Budget balanced at Lire 3,075,211,865.

Main Products: Wheat and wine.

Industrial Products: Textiles, cement, paper, leather, furs.

Education: 18 elementary schools and a high school.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Legislative Power is vested in a Grand Council of 60 members, elected every five years by popular vote. In the elections held in September, 1964, the results were as follows:

	SEATS
Christian Democrats . . .	29
Communist Party . . .	14
Social Democrats . . .	10
Socialists . . .	6
Others . . .	1

Defections from the Communist Party in 1957 led to a bloodless revolution after which the Christian Democrats came to power. In January 1960 a new Electoral Law was passed giving the women of San Marino the right to vote.

Two members of the Grand Council are appointed to act as Regents every six months. The Regents exercise power in conjunction with the Council of State—Congresso di Stato, which is made up of ten departments. There are also various commissions for art, sport, tourism, etc.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Judicial Authority is exercised by the Council of Twelve—Consiglio dei XII.

FINANCE

Italian and Vatican City currency are in general use in the Republic, which does issue its own coins and postage stamps.

EXTERNAL TRADE

Principal exports are wine, woollen goods, furniture, ceramics and building stone quarried in Mount Titano.

TRADE UNION CONFEDERATION

Confederazione Generale Democratica dei Lavoratori Sammarinesi: Piazza del Teatro, San Marino; 1,800 mems.; affiliated to IFCTU

COMMUNICATIONS

San Marino is connected with Rimini and the Adriatic coast by funicular from the capital, San Marino, to Borgo Maggiore, a mile away, and thence by helicopter to Rimini. There is also a bus service.

TOURISM

Ente Governativo per il Turismo, Sport e Spettacolo (Government Tourism, Sport and Entertainment Board): Palazzo del Turismo, San Marino; Dir. GIOVANNI VITO MARCUCCI.

MUSEUM

Government Museum, Picture Gallery, Library and Archives: Valloni Palace; library of 40,000 vols.; Garibaldi exhibition, archaeological remains, numismatic collection, collection of ancient arms.

LIECHTENSTEIN

Liechtenstein is a principality on the Upper Rhine between Austria and Switzerland.

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Liechtenstein lies between the Austrian province of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of the Grisons and St. Gall. It measures 24 km. from north to south and 9 km. from east to west. The climate is mild. The official language is German, of which a dialect—Alemannish—is spoken. The population is largely Roman Catholic. The flag consists of a royal blue and a red stripe horizontally divided, with a princely crown in the royal blue part. The capital is Vaduz.

Recent History

Liechtenstein has been an independent state since 1719, except while under Napoleon's domination.

Government

The constitution of the hereditary principality provides for a unicameral parliament (Landtag), composed of 15 members who are elected for four years. The Government consists of the Chief of Government, the Deputy Chief of Government (both elected for six years) and three Councilors (elected for four years). Liechtenstein is united in a Customs Union with Switzerland, which also represents the principality abroad.

Defence

There is no army, and only a small police force of eighteen men.

Economic Affairs

The economy is mainly industrial. A variety of products, such as cotton yarn, small machinery, ceramics and leatherware are manufactured.

Transport and Communications

A tunnel connecting the Rhine and Samina valleys was opened in 1947.

Social Welfare

Social welfare is organized on lines similar to Switzerland.

Education

There were 14 elementary and 5 secondary schools in 1963.

Tourism

Liechtenstein has a perfect Alpine setting in the Upper Rhine area. The valley produces excellent wine. The princely residence, Schloss Vaduz, stands on a crag overlooking the city. There is a celebrated postal museum and the Prince's Art Gallery at Vaduz.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), January 6 (Epiphany), March 19 (St. Joseph's Day), Easter Monday, The Ascension, Whit Monday, Corpus Christi, August 15 (The Assumption), November 1 (All Saints'), December 8 (Immaculate Conception), December 25, 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

Liechtenstein uses Swiss currency.

Exchange rate: 12.1 francs = £1 sterling
4.28 francs = $1 U.S.

AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRY

The chief agricultural products are corn, wine, fruit, wood, potatoes, cattle and cabbages. The most important industries are hardware, machines, cotton weaving and spinning, leather goods, pottery, canned goods, sausage cases, furniture, high frequency installations, heaters, artificial teeth. Cattle rearing is highly developed.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Principality of Liechtenstein is a Sovereign State consisting of the two former counties of Schellenberg and Vaduz, which came into the possession of the House of Liechtenstein in 1699 and 1712 respectively. From 1815 to 1866 the Principality formed part of the German Confederation.

By the Constitution of October 5th, 1921, the monarchy is hereditary in the male line. The reigning Prince, or during his absence a Prince of his House, exercises the legislative right jointly with a Diet of fifteen members elected for four years by general and secret ballot. All male citizens of over 21 years are eligible to vote.

In the case of adjournment or dissolution, the Diet is replaced by a National Committee consisting of the President of the Diet and four Deputies. The chief of the Government and his deputy are nominated by the Prince for six years on the motion of the Diet. Three Counsellors are elected for four years by the Diet.

By a Treaty made with Switzerland in 1923 Liechtenstein is incorporated in Swiss Customs territory, and uses Swiss currency, customs and postal administration.

HEAD OF THE STATE

Prince FRANCIS JOSEF II, Prince of Liechtenstein, Duke of Troppau and of Jagerndorf, Count of Rietberg, succeeded July 25th, 1938.

Prince's Court: Director of the Cabinet Dr. GUSTAV WILHELM

THE GOVERNMENT

Chief of Government: Dr. G. BATLINER.

Vice-Chief of Government: Dr. A. HILBE.

President of the Diet: Dr. MARTIN RISCH.

Vice-President of the Diet: Dr. OTTO SCHAEDELER.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION

Liechtenstein's foreign interests are represented by Swiss Embassies and Consulates abroad and through the Swiss Head of Foreign Affairs in Berne.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Fortschrittliche Bürgerpartei (Progressive Citizens' Party): Herrengasse 65, Vaduz; Chair. Dr. RICHARD MEIER; Sec. WALTER WOBLWEND.

Vaterländische Union (Fatherland Union): Eschen; Chair. Dr. FRANZ NÄGELE; Sec. HUBERT MARNER.

COURTS

I. Civil:

- (1) County Court (Landgericht); one presiding judge.
- (2) Superior Court (Obergericht); bench of five judges.
- (3) Supreme Court (Oberster Gerichtshof); bench of five judges.

II. Criminal:

- (1) (a) Petty Sessions (Landgericht); for summary offences.
- (b) Court of Assizes (Schöffengericht-Vergehen); for minor misdemeanours; bench of five judges.

(c) Criminal Court (Kriminalgericht); bench of five judges.

(2) Superior Court (Obergericht); bench of five judges.

(3) Supreme Court (Oberster Gerichtshof); bench of five judges.

III. Administrative:

(1) Appeal against decrees and decisions of the Government may be made to the Administrative Court of Appeal (five members).

(2) A State Court of five members exists for the protection of Public Law.

PRESIDING JUDGES

State Court: Dr. RUPERT RITTER, Vaduz.

Administrative Court: Dr. GREGOR STEGER.

County Court (Court of First Instance): Dr. HERMANN RISCH (civil law); Dr. ARNOLD OEHRLY (criminal law).

Court of Assizes (Schöffengericht-Vergehen): Dr. ARNOLD OEHRLY.

Criminal Court (Kriminalgericht-Verbrechen): Dr. ARMIN WECHNER.

Superior Court (Obergericht) (Court of Second Instance for Civil and Criminal Cases): Dr. JACOB EUGSTER.

Supreme Court (Oberster Gerichtshof) (Court of Third Instance for Civil and Criminal Cases): Prof. Dr. FRANZ GSCHNITZER.

THE GRAND DUCHY OF LUXEMBOURG

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg lies south-east of Belgium between France and Germany. The climate is temperate. Both French and German are official languages. French is employed administratively, but German is the generally used written language. The spoken language is Letzeburgish, a German-Moselle-Frankish dialect. Ninety-seven per cent of the population are Roman Catholic and one per cent Protestant. The flag consists of three horizontal stripes—red, white and blue. The capital is Luxembourg.

Recent History

There has been a customs union between Luxembourg and Belgium since 1921, except for the period 1940 to 1944 when the Grand Duchy was annexed by Germany. In 1948 Luxembourg and Belgium joined the Netherlands in the Benelux Customs Union. The High Authority of the European Community for Coal and Steel chose Luxembourg as its seat in 1951. The Grand Duchy is a member of the European Economic Community and has played a full part in the post-war moves toward European integration. In November 1964, Grand Duchess Charlotte abdicated after a reign of 45 years, and was succeeded by her son, Prince Jean.

Government

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is a constitutional hereditary monarchy. The Parliament comprises a Chamber of Deputies and a Council of State. The country is divided into 12 cantons.

Defence

Luxembourg is a member of the Western European Union and since 1954 of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation. National military service is compulsory for a period of six months. The army numbers 5,500 men.

Economic Affairs

The country enjoys great prosperity due to the iron and steel industry situated in the south-west. Large deposits of minette (iron ore) are found in this region. This ore, however, is insufficient to supply all the needs of industry and iron ore is also imported, as is the coal necessary for iron and steel manufacture. About 4 million tons of crude iron and the same amount of crude steel are produced annually, as well as 2.5 million tons of rolled steel. Luxembourg is a member of the European Community for Coal and Steel and of the European Economic Community (Common Market).

Agriculture is a source of livelihood for a third of the population. Barley, oats and potatoes are grown in the north, and wheat, fruit and wine in the south. Cattle-raising is well-developed. There is full employment in the Grand Duchy.

Transport and Communications

The railway system covers 338 km. The roads are modern and total 4,440 km. There is an airport at Luxembourg, served by Sabena and other international lines.

Social Welfare

Luxembourg enjoys one of the highest standards of living in the world. There is a comprehensive system of social security, maintained by contributions of employers and employees.

Education

Compulsory education exists for all children between the ages of 6 and 13. There is an International University of Comparative Sciences in Luxembourg and numerous technical colleges.

Tourism

Luxembourg is famous for the beauty of its scenery. Many tourist resorts have grown up round the ruins of mediaeval castles such as Clerf, Esch/Sauer, Vianden and Wiltz.

Sport

Football is the most popular game.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Easter Monday, May 1 (May Day), Ascension Day, Whit Monday, June 23 (National Day), August 15 (The Assumption), November 1 (All Saint's Day), December 25, 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The basic unit of currency is the Luxembourg Franc, which is divided into 100 centimes. Belgian currency is also legal tender. For denominations of coins and notes, see Belgian Introductory survey.

Exchange rate: 139.2 Lfr. = £1 sterling
50 Lfr. = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE Constitution now in force dates back to October 17th, 1868, but in 1919 a Constituent Assembly introduced into it some important changes, declaring that the sovereign power resided in the nation, that all secret treaties were denounced, and that deputies were to be elected, by scrutin de liste, and by proportional representation, on the basis of complete universal suffrage. Electors must be citizens of Luxembourg, male or female, and must have attained twenty-one years of age. Candidates for election must have attained twenty-five years of age. The Grand Duke chooses the Ministers, may intervene in legislative questions, and has certain judicial powers. There is a single-chamber legislature, the Chamber of Deputies, with 56 members elected for five years. The number of deputies was increased to accord with the increase in population registered in the census of 1960. There are four electoral districts, the North, the Centre, the South and East. By the law of October 9th, 1956, the Constitution was further revised, by the following stipulation: "The exercise of prerogatives granted by the Constitution to the legislative, executive and judiciary powers, can, by treaty, be temporarily vested in institutions of international law." In addition to the Cabinet, composed of a Prime Minister and 6 Ministers, Luxembourg has a Council of State, which is the supreme administrative tribunal and also fulfils certain legislative functions, comprising 21 members nominated by the Sovereign. As the result of negotiations concluded between Belgium and Luxembourg on December 22nd, 1921, economic union was established between the two countries. By the terms of this union, which is to last for fifty years, the old customs barrier disappears, and Belgian money becomes current in the Grand Duchy. The union came into force on May 1st, 1922.

Luxembourg's economic ties with Belgium and the Netherlands have become closer since the establishment of the "Benelux" economic union in September 1944, which was signed in 1958 and came into force in 1960 (see also Benelux chapter).

Luxembourg is a full member of all the major European organisations, such as EEC, OECD, NATO, WEU, ECSC, the Council of Europe and the European Monetary Fund.

In 1961, the Grand Duchess appointed her son, Prince JEAN, to act as Lieutenant-Représentant and to exercise in her name "all the political and juridical prerogatives granted by the Constitution to the Sovereign of the State." Her action was in accordance with Article 42 of the Constitution.

MALTA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The island of Malta, with the smaller islands of Gozo and Comino, is situated in the central Mediterranean 60 miles south of Sicily and 200 miles north of the African coast. Climate is warm; winter temperatures do not fall below 40°F (4.4°C); summer temperatures rise to 98°F (36.6°C). English and Maltese are the official languages though Italian is widely spoken. The state religion is Roman Catholicism. The flag consists of two vertical bands of white and red, the white band bearing the George Cross in the top-left corner. The capital is Valetta.

Recent History

Malta was awarded the George Cross by King George VI for the heroism of her people during the Second World War. Under the Constitution of 1947 self-government was granted to the island except in certain matters reserved to the Governor. Civil disturbances followed the resignation of the Mintoff Labour Government of 1958 and a state of emergency was declared, the Governor assuming direct administration. In 1961 a new constitution was adopted and elections held which returned the Nationalist Government of Dr. Borg Olivier. As a result of the London conference of August 1963, Malta became an independent monarchy within the Commonwealth on September 21st, 1964 and in the following year was admitted to the Council of Europe and the United Nations.

Government

The Constitution of 1964 provides for Malta to have complete independence within the Commonwealth. H.M. the Queen is represented by the Governor-General. There is a fifty-member House of Representatives elected by proportional representation. Government is by a Cabinet which is responsible to the House.

Defence

There are small local forces which are being built up with British assistance, and Malta has signed a mutual defence agreement with the United Kingdom. Malta's position in the Central Mediterranean makes it a vital part of the strategic defence of Britain and NATO. There are Royal Air Force airfields at Luqa, Ta'Qali and Hal Far. The Grand Harbour at Valetta is still an important naval base.

Economic Affairs

Principal crops are onions, grapes, wheat, barley and fodder. Fresh vegetables and potatoes are the main cash crops. Most raw materials have to be imported. Industry centres on ship repairing and building but there are light industries producing foodstuffs, footwear, clothing, paint, refrigerators and boats. Many Maltese migrate to Australia and the United Kingdom.

Transport and Communications

There are some 560 miles of roads. The international airport is at Luqa. The main harbour, Valetta is used annually by some 2,100 vessels of over three million tons.

Social Welfare

Social security is provided under the 1956 National Insurance Act. There is reciprocity in social insurance between Malta and the United Kingdom.

Education

Education is compulsory and given in Roman Catholic Government schools. Instruction is in Maltese and English. There are 113 primary schools, 6 grammar schools and one university—the Royal University of Malta.

Tourism

The Government is providing £1 million to build a tourist industry. The island has climatic, scenic and historical assets. Excavations indicate the existence of an advanced culture dating from 2000 B.C. There are fine beaches.

Sport

Football is the most popular game.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), January 6 (The Epiphany), February 10 (St. Paul's Shipwreck), March 19 (St. Joseph), Good Friday, May 1 (St. Joseph the Worker), Ascension Day, May 24 (Commonwealth Day), June 8 (Queen's Birthday), Corpus Christi, June 29 (SS. Peter and Paul), August 15 (The Assumption), September 8 (National Day), November 1 (All Saints' Day), December 8 (Immaculate Conception), December 25 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is in force (See under Great Britain.)

Currency and Exchange Rates

The monetary unit is the Maltese Pound which is at par with the Pound Sterling.

Both British and Maltese currencies are used.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Independence Constitution was presented in draft form to the Legislative Assembly on the 31st March, 1964, and a referendum was held in May 1964 asking the people whether the Constitution as presented by the Government and endorsed by the House met their approval. The result of the poll was 65,714 "yes" and 54,919 "no" with 9,016 invalid votes. After prolonged talks between the Prime Minister of Malta and the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the draft Constitution prepared by the Government of Malta, with minor agreed amendments, was approved by the British Government. The Malta Independence Act was approved by the United Kingdom Parliament on the 28th July, 1964 and received Royal assent on the 31st of that month.

The Malta Independence Constitution adopts a monarchical system with a Governor-General representing Her Majesty The Queen. Maltese citizens are also citizens of the Commonwealth. Provisions in the new Constitution provide for the protection of the Roman Catholic Church and of the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual; for Education to be compulsory in primary schools and free in those which are state-run; for elections to be free; for the independence of the Judicature and for the setting up of an independent Public Service Commission. Sound and vision broadcasts are under the control of an independent Authority.

The Government concluded a Defence Agreement and a Financial Agreement with the United Kingdom Government for a period of ten years.

THE CABINET

The Cabinet consists of the Prime Minister and such number of other Ministers as recommended by the Prime Minister.

PARLIAMENT

The normal life of the 50-member House of Representatives is five years, after which a general election is held.

Election is by universal adult suffrage on the principle of proportional representation

MONACO

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Principality of Monaco occupies $1\frac{1}{2}$ square kilometres on France's south-eastern Mediterranean coast. The climate is fine and warm with very mild winters. The languages are French and Monégasque (a mixture of French and Italian). Roman Catholicism is the religion of the nation. Flag: red and white (horizontal). Capital: Monte Carlo.

Recent History

In 1962 a new Constitution was introduced granting more power to the elected National Council. Also in 1962 the French Government set up a customs barrier outside the Principality to exercise stricter control on the movement of goods between the two countries. In May 1963 the barrier was lifted and a new Convention was signed bringing many French companies established in Monaco under the fiscal authority of France.

Government

Legislative power is exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which consists of eighteen members elected for a term of five years by universal suffrage. Executive power is vested in the hereditary Prince and the Ministers of State assisted by three Government Councillors. The Prince represents the principality in its relations with foreign powers; he signs and ratifies treaties.

Economic Affairs

Revenue is derived mainly from transactional laws, the sale of tobacco, postage stamps and tourism.

Tourism

The pleasant climate and the amenities of Monte Carlo, including the world famous Casino, have made Monaco a leading centre for tourism both in summer and winter.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), January 27 (St. Devote, Patron Saint of the Principality), Easter Monday, Whit Monday, August 15 (The Assumption), November 19 (National Day), December 25, 26 (Christmas).

MONACO

THE CONSTITUTION

This small Principality has been in existence from about 968. It was abolished under the French Revolution and First Empire, but it was re-established in 1814; and in 1815 was placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the Treaty of Vienna. In 1848 Mentone and Roccabruna asserted their independence, and in 1861 Charles III ceded his rights over the two towns to France. With the concurrent withdrawal of the Sardinian garrison, Monaco ceased to be a Sardinian protectorate and became an enclave of France. On January 7th, 1911, Prince Albert, great-grandfather of the reigning sovereign, Prince Rainier III, promulgated a Constitution (modified November 18th, 1917), which provided for a National Council elected by a panel of 30 members composed of delegates of the municipality, and 21 electors appointed by universal suffrage. The legislative power was exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which contained 18 members elected for five years. The executive government was exercised, under the authority of the Sovereign, by the Minister of State, assisted by the three members of the Council of Government

On January 29th, 1959, the Constitution was provisionally suspended by Prince Rainier. The duties of the National Council were to be carried out by the Council of State, an official body, and those of the Municipal Council, the other elected body in the Principality, by an eight-member delegation appointed by Royal Ordinance

In February 1961 the National Council was restored and an Economic Advisory Council was set up to assist it.

On December 17th, 1962, a new Constitution was promulgated by Prince Rainier. Any future amendments to this may be made only with the approval of the elected National Council. The new text maintains the traditional hereditary monarchy though the principle of divine right is renounced. The right of association, trade union freedom and the right to strike are guaranteed. The Supreme Tribunal safeguards fundamental liberties. The new Constitution also bestows the franchise on women.

THE NETHERLANDS

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Kingdom of the Netherlands is situated in Western Europe, bounded to the east by Germany and to the south by Belgium. Its northern and western shores are washed by the North Sea. Much of the land lies below sea level. Climate is temperate. The language is Dutch. About 40 per cent of the population is Protestant, 40 per cent is Roman Catholic and 18 per cent does not profess any religion. The flag carries three horizontal bands of red, white and blue. The capital is Amsterdam but the government seat is at The Hague, the third largest city.

Recent History

During the Second World War the Netherlands abandoned her neutral policy later signing the Brussels Pact along with the other Western powers. Economically she became a member of Benelux (Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg). Indonesian forces in the Dutch East Indies opposed the return of the administration in 1945 and in 1949 independence was granted to the archipelago which became known as the Republic of Indonesia. In 1962 Indonesia laid claim to Dutch New Guinea and responsibility for the colony was handed over by the Netherlands in April, 1963.

The Cabinet of Dr. Marijnen resigned in February 1965 over the question of commercial advertising on radio and television. The coalition Government of Dr. Cals took office in April, the Labour Party participating in the Government for the first time since 1959.

Government

The Netherlands is a constitutional monarchy. Parliament is bicameral, consisting of the Lower Chamber or Second House elected by all citizens of over 23 years of age voting on a basis of proportional representation. The First Chamber or Upper House is elected by Provincial Representatives' Councils. The Cabinet holds executive power. The Upper Chamber can accept or reject legislation but only the Lower Chamber can amend it. The Sovereign gives assent to all Bills.

Defence

The Netherlands is a member of NATO. Military service is compulsory between the ages of 20 and 35 for a period of at least 18 months. Total strength of the armed forces is 135,000, comprising Army 92,000, Navy 22,000 and Air Force 21,500. Defence estimates for 1966 total 2,751 million guilders.

Economic Affairs

Despite high population density there is a surplus of agricultural produce made possible by land reclamation, intensive scientific cultivation and co-operative crop distribution. Seed crops, bulbs, horticultural and dairy products account for one quarter of exports. About 40 per cent of the working population is in industry which, because of the shortage of home-produced raw materials, is mainly processive. Oil and natural gas fields under territorial waters are being explored, while an estimated 1,100,000 million cubic metres of natural gas, discovered below the northern province of Groningen, is being exploited. Output includes steel, metals, transport equipment, chemicals, oil, radios, textiles and ships. Chocolate, biscuits, margarine and other foodstuffs are also important. Amsterdam is the centre for the trade in tobacco, diamonds, precious metals and art treasures. The Netherlands is a founder member of the European Common Market.

Transport and Communications

Most freight is carried on inland waterways of which there are about 4,300 miles. There are 2,024 miles of state-operated railways providing mainly passenger services. The Netherlands is one of the world's leading shipping countries, freighters constituting 55 per cent of the total tonnage. In 1965 the merchant marine numbered 46 passenger ships, 386 freighters, 883 coasters and 126 tankers. Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM) is the world's oldest commercial airline and has services to all parts of the world.

Social Welfare

Social insurance is compulsory, except in cases of conscientious objections, with employers and employees paying joint contributions towards industrial, sickness, family, old age and unemployment benefits.

Education

Education is compulsory for all children between 7 and 14. There are six universities and three technical universities.

Tourism

The chief attractions are the out-lying islands, the old towns, the canals, the cultivated fields of spring flowers, the art galleries and modern architecture.

Receipts from tourism totalled $242 million in 1964, and expenditure was $266 million.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Austria, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom.

Sport

Football is the most popular sport closely followed by gymnastics and skating.

Public Holidays

The main public holidays are: January 1 (New Year's Day), Good Friday, Easter Monday, April 30 (Queen's Birthday), Ascension Day, Whitsun Monday, December 25 and 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency is the Gulden, the standard sign of which is Fl. It is also known as the Florin or the Guilder. 1 Gulden = 100 cents.

Notes: Gulden 1,000, 100, 25, 10, 2 50.

Coins: Gulden 2 50, 1; Cents 25, 10, 5, 2, 1.

Exchange rate: 10 14 Gulden = £1 sterling
3.60 Gulden = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE NETHERLANDS KINGDOM

Under the Constitution the State (the Kingdom) of the Netherlands consists of territories in Europe (the Realm in Europe of the Netherlands), in the West Indies, Surinam (Dutch Guiana) and the Netherlands Antilles. Under the Statute of the Realm signed by Queen Juliana in 1945, the Netherlands Surinam and the Netherlands Antilles were constituted as a single realm under the House of Orange, thereby ending the former colonial status of Surinam and the Netherlands Antilles.

POWER OF THE MONARCHY

The Netherlands is a kingdom with responsible and popular government. The Constitution regulates the succession and regency in great detail. When no heir exists, the last Sovereign and a Joint Assembly of the States-General (of a size augmented to double the usual numbers) shall designate the successor, and the Joint Assembly shall act of itself if the Sovereign previously dies. Normally the succession is in the direct male line or, failing a male, in direct female line. The age of majority of the Sovereign is 18.

HISTORY

Independent constitutional life began in the Eighty Years' War (1568-1648), in the course of which seven provinces of the Netherlands seceded from the Spanish Habsburg Monarchy and united themselves in the Dutch Republic under the sovereignty of the States-General. During the following centuries Princes of the House of Orange intermittently held high office in the Republic as Stadholders, a function somewhat similar to that of Chancellors and Commanders-in-Chief. The Napoleonic era saw the Netherlands first as a Kingdom under one of Napoleon's brothers (1806 to 1810) and later (1810-1813) as an integral part of France. At the Restoration of 1814 the Netherlands became an independent Monarchy with the House of Orange as constitutional Sovereigns. The union with Belgium in the United Kingdom of the Netherlands lasted until the secession of Belgium in 1830. The democratic principle of ministerial responsibility to Parliament was introduced under a revision of the Constitution in 1848. The capital of the Netherlands is Amsterdam. The seat of the Government is at The Hague.

ELECTORAL SYSTEM

In 1919 and 1922 electoral reform laws swept away the limited categories of voters, designed in 1887 and 1896 to give the vote to those of required "aptitude and social condition", and gave the suffrage to all men and women over twenty-five. After 1945 the age was reduced to twenty-three. Attendance at the ballot is compulsory.

The Parliamentary Assemblies are called the States-General and consist of two Chambers, a First and a Second Chamber. The Second Chamber is composed of 150 members, and is elected for four years on a system of Proportional Representation. The First Chamber is composed of 75 members, elected, since 1848, by the Provincial Councils for a term of six years, one-half retiring every three years. All Netherlands who have reached the age of 30 are eligible for election to the States-General.

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

For all the political actions of the King the ministers are responsible to the States-General. Consequently the power of the Crown (i.e. the King and ministers) to dissolve either or both Chambers is ultimately subject to the judgment of public opinion as interpreted by the States-General and the Cabinet itself. A revision of the Constitution in 1922 made the right of the King to declare war and conclude international agreements (treaties, etc.), dependent upon prior parliamentary sanction. New clauses laying down the conditions under which sovereign powers may be transferred to international organisations, and acknowledging the supremacy of international law, have recently been included in the Constitution.

The Constitution says nothing about a Prime Minister or a Cabinet: it merely declares that the King establishes ministerial departments, and appoints and dismisses the ministers. Democratic development has enforced upon the Crown the principle that the King shall appoint a Cabinet through the choice of a Cabinet-former, who usually, though not necessarily, will have a majority in Parliament.

Ministers have the right to speak in both Chambers, but not to vote. They are submitted to the questioning and criticism customary in democratic legislatures. The States-General has one ordinary session annually, which normally lasts the whole year, and the King, through the Cabinet, can call others. Legislative power is in the joint authority of the States-General and the Crown (i.e. King and Ministers). The two Chambers must agree on legislation, but while the First Chamber has a power of acceptance or rejection, only the Second Chamber has the power of amendment. The budget, like all common laws, is first presented in the Second Chamber. Revision of the Constitution is possible after two readings in Parliament, and a two-thirds majority on the second reading.

THE COUNCIL OF STATE

There is a Council of State, presided over and appointed by the Sovereign, usually from notable personages, and the Cabinet and King consult this body on legislative and administrative policy, and upon the issue of decrees.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The Netherlands consists of eleven provinces. The administrative organs are the Provincial States, the "Deputy States" and the Governor of the province. The Provincial States—directly elected, as is the Second Chamber, on a basis of proportional representation—form as it were the Parliament of the provinces. From its members each elects a college of Deputy States to act as Executive Committee of the province. The Governor is the representative of the Crown in the province and is appointed, as well as discharged by the Crown. He is Chairman of the Provincial and Deputy States. By virtue of the Constitution, the Provincial States have the right of making their own decisions on measures in the interest of the province.

The municipalities (about one thousand in number)—each governed by a burgomaster (also appointed by the Crown), assisted by aldermen (chosen from and by the Council) and the Council elected by the local inhabitants—have the right to make local regulations.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

RADIO

Stichting Nederlandsche Radio-Unie. Post Box 150, Hilversum; Pres. A. B. ROOSJEN, LL.D.

There are five associate companies (Algemene Vereniging Radio-Omroep, Nederlandse Christelijke Radio Vereniging, Omroepvereniging Vara, Stichting Katholieke Radio-Omroep, Vrijzinnig Protestantse Radio-Omroep) who in 1947 agreed upon a Charter by which their various possessions—studios, technical equipment, records, and music libraries—were merged for joint use into one foundation called the Netherlands Radio Union (Nederlandsche Radio Unie). The members of this Union still retain individual autonomy in planning and broadcasting their programmes during the hours allotted to them by the Government decree.

The licence fee for radios is 18 guilders per annum.

Advertising will be allowed in the course of 1966.

There is no preventive censorship.

The total number of registered radio sets in the Netherlands at the end of 1965 was 3,094,077.

LAND RECLAMATION AND DEVELOPMENT

Ministry of Transport, Water Control and Public Works is the authority responsible for land reclamation and waterways.

Without intensive land protection schemes nearly the whole of the north and west of the Netherlands (about 40 per cent of the total area of the country) would be inundated by sea-water twice a day. A large part of the country (as, for example, the Zuyder Zee) has already been drained by the creation of polders—a piece of land surrounded by a dike from which all superfluous water can be drained off into a canal or the sea by the aid of pumps. Despite the vast system of sea-dikes, such as the Weskapelse Sea-Dike on the Island of Walcheren, and the Hondsbosse and Peltemer Sea-Dike to the north of Alkmaar in the province of North Holland, storm-tides can still create disaster. The great disaster of February 1953, in which 1,835 people lost their lives, and 450,000 acres of land were flooded, resulted in the formation of the Delta Commission to investigate a project for "sealing off" the Rhine and the Scheldt estuaries of Zeeland and South Holland.

The Delta Plan, which was accepted by the Second Chamber of the States General in 1957, will shorten the southern coastline by 435 miles and protect the estuaries of Zeeland and Southern Holland. The Scheme consists of 4 closing dams across the mouths of the Eastern Scheldt and 4 regulating dams, three in the Scheldt estuary and one on the Hollandsche IJssel. Roads crossing the dams will link the islands of the Scheldt estuary to the mainland. The whole scheme is expected to take 25 years to complete.

The main works under the Plan are:

1. Haringvliet Closing Dam: between Voorne and Goeree Overflakkee; date of completion 1967.
2. Brouwershavensche Gat Closing Dam: between Goeree Overflakkee and Schouwen Duiveland; date of completion 1969.

3. Eastern Scheldt Closing Dam: between Schouwen Duiveland and Noord Beveland; date of completion 1978.

4. Veeregat Closing Dam: between Noord Beveland and Walcheren; closed by means of seven 5,000-ton caissons 1961; a dike, in which the caissons will disappear, is under construction.

5. Three Secondary dams: Volerak (between the Hollandschdiep and the Eastern Scheldt estuary); Grevelingen (between Goeree Overflakkee and Schouwen Duiveland); Zandkreek (between Noord and Zuid Beveland). This dam, together with the Veeregat, forms the Three Islands Plan, linking the islands of Noord and Zuid Beveland and Walcheren. Dates of completion 1961-1968.

6. Kapelle Moveable Flood Dam: on the Hollandsche IJssel, east of Rotterdam. This dam was finished in 1958.

The whole scheme is designed to create a fresh-water lake in the Eastern Scheldt estuary, thereby improving water supplies and permitting the reclamation of saltings and other saline land.

The total cost is estimated at about 2,500 million guilders (£250 million). Part of the cost will be defrayed by the use of counterpart funds, accumulated out of American economic aid to the Netherlands between 1948 and 1953. By agreement with the United States the money will be distributed as follows:

Delta Plan: 40m. guilders; Reinforcement of dikes 30m. guilders; Road Construction: 30m. guilders; Tunnel under the North Sea near Velsen: 10.78m. guilders; final recovery of Walcheren Island: 5m. guilders.

The Plan does not affect the Western Scheldt Channel, which gives access from the Belgian port of Antwerp to the North Sea through Dutch territorial waters, and on which freedom of navigation is guaranteed to Belgium under international treaty.

TRANSPORT

RAILWAYS

Nederlandse Spoorwegen: Moreelsepark 1, Utrecht; length of lines 3,238 km.; Pres. Ir. J. LOHMANN; Gen. Mans. Dr. M. G. DE BRUIN, Ir. J. P. KOSTER.

All railway lines in the Netherlands are operated by the Nederlandse Spoorwegen, a limited liability company of which the State is the sole shareholder, and which company was formed by the amalgamation of the Maatschappij tot Exploitatie van Staatsspoorwegen and the Hollandische IJzeren Spoorweg Maatschappij. Half the Dutch railway network is electrified; the remaining track carries diesel electric stock.

INLAND WATERWAYS

Ministry of Transport, Water Control and Public Works: responsible for all waterways.

An extensive network of rivers and canals has led to an outstanding development in Dutch inland shipping. Approximately 50 per cent of goods transported inside the Netherlands are carried on the canals and waterways. Dutch inland shipping has access to Germany along the Rhine and its branch rivers, and to France and Belgium along the Meuse. Ocean traffic reaches Rotterdam via the New Waterway, and Amsterdam is connected to the North Sea by the 18-mile-long North Sea Canal.

Stichting Kernvoortstuwung Koopvaardij-schepen—(SKK)
(Foundation for Nuclear Propulsion of Merchant Vessels): Nassaulaan 13, The Hague; f. 1957; Chair. J. P. KRUSEMAN.

Established by members of the Royal Netherlands Ship-Owners Association and a number of shipyards and engineering industries to carry out studies on nuclear ship propulsion.

Reactor Centrum Nederland (RCN) (Netherlands Reactor Centre): Scheveningsweg 112, The Hague; f. 1955; Chair. Dr. E. L. KRAMER; Dirs Prof. Dr J. A. GOEDKOOP, Prof. Ir. J. PELSER, Dr. W. REYSEGER; Chair. Scientific Advisory Council Prof. Dr. J. H. DE BOER.

The RCN organises and finances applied nuclear research. It was founded with the participation of fifty industrial companies as well as of the Netherlands Government. The RCN has a scientific and technical centre at Petten, with laboratories for chemistry and physics and a 10-kW research reactor. A laboratory for metallurgy and a laboratory for highly radioactive objects have built. A 20-MW material testing reactor has been built, but has been handed over to Euratom on the understanding that the RCN continues to operate and to maintain the reactor. A critical experiment, for research on a ship propulsion reactor inter alia, has been built. The RCN also undertakes research on isotopes and organises specialised training courses and a technical information centre.

An agreement with EURATOM was concluded in July 1961 to set up a nuclear research centre in Petten, adjacent to the RCN centre.

Together with the Norwegian Institute for Atomenergy (IFA), RCN carried out comprehensive research at the Netherlands-Norwegian Joint Establishment for Nuclear Energy Research (JENER) at Kjeller, Norway. Since July 1959, when JENER was abolished, the form of co-operation has been changed: IFA and RCN are carrying out joint projects each at their own centre.

NORWAY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Kingdom of Norway forms the western part of Scandinavia in Northern Europe. Within the Arctic Circle a strip of Norwegian territory adjoins Finland and the U.S.S.R. A long indented coast faces the Atlantic. Climate is temperate on the west coast but colder inland. The language is Norwegian. The Evangelical Lutheran State Church is the established religion. The flag carries a blue cross with white borders on red. The capital is Oslo.

Recent History

Norway remains a full participant in the Western alliance. After many years of rule by the Labour Party, a Conservative administration took over for less than a month in 1963 following which the former Labour Prime Minister, Mr. Gerhardsen, returned to office in September. The non-socialist coalition government of Per Borten took office following the general election of September 1965.

Government

The Kingdom of Norway is a constitutional monarchy. Executive power is nominally vested in the King, legislative power lies with the Storting (Parliament) and judicial power with the judicature. The King's executive power is exercised through the State Council or Cabinet, headed by the Prime Minister. The King appoints the Government in accordance with the will of the Storting, which is elected for a four-year term by adult universal suffrage. The Storting votes a quarter of its number to form the Lagting, the remaining three-quarters being the members of the Odelsting.

Defence

Norway is a full member of NATO. Out of a total expenditure of 12,382 million kroner in 1966, 1,998 million kroner is allocated to defence. There is compulsory national service, lasting a minimum of twelve months. The total strength of the Armed Forces is 32,200, comprising Army 16,000, Navy 7,400, and Air Force 8,800.

Economic Affairs

Norway's chief exports are fish, woodpulp and paper. She also produces metal ore and steel. Her merchant fleet is the world's fourth largest at over 15 million gross registered tons. Norway is a member of the European Free Trade Association and has applied to join the European Economic Community.

An economic plan for the four years 1966 to 1969 envisages an annual growth rate of 4.5 per cent, with considerable increases in industrial production, investment and civilian consumption.

Transport and Communications

The Norwegian State Railways have a total length of 2,705 miles and nearly a half are electrified. There are about 39,000 miles of road, half of which are main roads. The Norwegian merchant fleet numbers 2,324 ships (Dec 1965), totalling 15½ million gross tons. Norwegian Airlines has a two-sevenths share in the Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS).

Social Welfare

Norway has a comprehensive system of social security and state insurance. There are sickness, unemployment and maternity benefits and retirement pensions. The scheme is universal and compulsory. A People's Pension Scheme to cover all Norwegians, whether or not they are wage-earners, is to be instituted from January 1st, 1967.

Education

Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 16. In 1964 there were 417,145 children receiving primary, 180,889 secondary and 17,070 higher education. There are two universities and one technical university.

Tourism

Norway is a popular resort for tourists who prefer holidays in rugged, peaceful surroundings. It is also a centre for winter sports. Income from tourism totalled $78 million in 1964, and expenditure was $74 million.

Visas are not required for nationals of the following countries: Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Gambia, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Malta, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, San Marino, Sierra Leone, Singapore, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zambia.

Sport

Skiing originated in Norway and is still the most popular sport closely followed by ice skating in which the Norwegians excel. Football is also popular. There is no professional sport.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Maundy Thursday, Good Friday, Easter Monday, May 1 (Labour Day), May 17 (Constitution Day), Ascension Day, Whit Monday, December 24 (half-day), 25 and 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the Kroner which is divided into 100 Ore.

Notes: 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 kroner.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 25 and 50 ore, 1 kroner.

Exchange rate: 20.00 kroner = £1 sterling
7.16 kroner = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution of the Kingdom of Norway was promulgated on May 17th, 1814, by the National Assembly at Eidsvold.

According to the Constitution, Norway is a "free, independent, indivisible, inalienable Kingdom"; its form of government a "limited and hereditary monarchy." The Evangelical-Lutheran religion is the established religion of the State.

Executive power is vested in the King, legislative power in the Storting (the Parliament), and judicial power in the Judicature.

EXECUTIVE POWER

The King exercises his power through the Statsråd (State Council). The State Council (the Government) is composed of a Prime Minister and not less than seven other Councillors of State, all above thirty years of age. The business to be dealt with in State Council is prepared by the various executive Ministries, each with a State Councillor at its head. These executive departments conduct the administrative work of the country.

The Government submits the budget estimates and introduces bills in the Storting.

Formally, the King appoints the Government, but since the introduction of the parliamentary system in 1884 it is the practice for him to act in accordance with the will of the Storting.

LEGISLATIVE POWER

The Storting is elected quadrennially by universal suffrage. All Norwegian citizens, men and women, who have completed their twenty-first year, are eligible to vote. By a law passed in 1948 they are also, at the age of 21, eligible for election to the Storting. The Storting has 150 members, who elect one-fourth of their own body to constitute the Lagting; the other three-fourths compose the Odelsting. All bills must first be introduced in the Odelsting, either by the Government through a State Councillor or by a member of the Odelsting. Should the bill be passed by the Odelsting it is sent to the Lagting, who may adopt it or return it with amendments. If a bill be passed twice by the Odelsting and rejected on both occasions by the Lagting, it is submitted to the entire Storting and decided by a two-thirds majority. When a bill has thus been passed it must receive the royal assent in State Council.

Bills for the revision of the Constitution must be introduced in the first, second or third session after a new election. But only the Storting, after the following next election, has power to decide whether the proposed alteration should be adopted. Bills relating to the Constitution are dealt with only by the united Storting. For the adoption of a bill of this nature a two-thirds majority is required, and the measure becomes law without the royal assent.

The Storting votes all State expenditure and determines State revenue, taxes, customs tariffs and other duties; the Odelsting exercises control over government administration, government appointments and so forth.

The Storting prepares its business through its committees and settles such business, with the exception of bills, in plenum. The State Councillors (Ministers) may attend the Storting, having the right of speech but not of voting.

The Storting determines the duration of each session. It is opened and prorogued by the King each year. The Storting cannot be dissolved either by the King or by its own resolution until the expiry of the quadrennial period for which it has been elected.

CIVIL

In each municipality there is a Conciliation Council (Forliksråd) consisting of three members elected by the municipal council for four years. As a rule, no case may be taken to a court of justice without mediation having been attempted by a Conciliation Court. In addition to mediation, the Conciliation Court has a judicial capacity and is intended to settle, in a simple manner without great expense to the parties involved, minor cases.

The ordinary lower courts are the District and Town Courts (Herredsrett, Byrett), which decide all cases not adjudicated upon by the Conciliation Court, and they also act as courts of appeal from judgments given in the Conciliation Court. The cases are adjudicated by a judge or magistrate, who sits either alone or with two lay judges.

Judgments delivered in the District and Town Courts may be taken, on appeal, to the Courts of Appeal (Lag-mannsrett or "Lagmann's" Courts) or to the Supreme Court (Høyesterett). In the Courts of Appeal cases are judged by three qualified judges, but if requested by one of the parties, lay judges may be summoned.

The Supreme Court sits in Oslo and decides cases in the last instance. Five judges here participate in judging an appeal case.

CRIMINAL

The criminal courts are: Examining Courts (Forhørsretten), the District and Town Courts, Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett) and the Supreme Court. In the Examining Courts the professional judge presides alone, but in the District and Town Courts two lay judges also sit. The more serious criminal cases must be brought directly before the "Lagmann's" Court. Cases originating in the lower courts may be retried by the Courts of Appeal (Lagmannsrett) when the question of guilt is at issue, otherwise they are appealed directly to the Supreme Court. The "Lagmann's" Court is presided over by three legally qualified judges, who judge the case with the assistance of a jury of ten jurymen. For the accused to be pronounced guilty, at least seven jurymen must vote that he is so.

The Supreme Court (Høyesterett) is the Court of Final Appeal. In criminal cases the competence of the Court is, however, limited to questions concerning the application of the law, the nature of the penalty, and procedural errors of the lower court.

Capital punishment has been abolished, except for certain military and treasonable offences in time of war.

RADIO

Broadcasting is a monopoly of the State, which operates all transmitters. It is financed by a yearly licence fee of 30 kroner on private receiving sets and a sales tax of approx. 11 per cent on receiving sets. There were 1,059,000 holders of licences in 1965.

TELEVISION

A non-commercial State monopoly. Regular service began August 1960.

Transmissions are obtainable by about 75 per cent of the population.

A twelve-year development plan is envisaged to provide a national network covering some 85 per cent of the population.

In S.E. Norway it is possible to receive the Swedish TV programmes.

By the end of 1965 there were 470,000 television licences in Norway.

POLAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Situated in Eastern Europe the Polish People's Republic is bounded to the north by the Baltic Sea, to the west by the German Democratic Republic, to the south by Czechoslovakia and to the east by the U.S.S.R. The climate is temperate in the western region, but to the east it is of the continental type with hot summers and severe winters. Most of the population is Roman Catholic but there are 17 other religious denominations, the largest being the Polish Autocephalous Orthodox Church. The language is Polish. The flag carries two horizontal bands of white and red. The capital is Warsaw.

Recent History

A people's democracy was set up after the defeat of the German forces in 1944. Under the Potsdam Agreement signed by the major Allied powers in 1945, the former German territories along the line of the rivers Oder and Neisse and now forming one-third of Poland's total area, came under Polish sovereignty. Poland is in alliance with the U.S.S.R. and the countries of Eastern Europe. In August 1964, Alexander Zawadzki, President of the Council of State since 1952, died, and was succeeded by Edward Ochab.

Government

The supreme legislative organ is the Sejm (Parliament), a unicameral body elected by all citizens of 18 years and over for a four-year term. From its number the Sejm elects the 15 members of the Council of State, the President of which is the Head of State. Supreme executive power lies with the Council of Ministers, who are appointed or recalled by the Sejm. The Council of Ministers is responsible for its activities to the Sejm and to the Council of State between sessions of parliament. Also responsible to the Sejm is the Supreme Board of Control, an independent body examining and controlling the legality, efficiency and usefulness of general legislation and administration.

Defence

Poland is a member of the Eastern European Mutual Aid Treaty (the Warsaw Pact). The strength of the armed forces is 322,000 comprising Army 215,000, Navy 17,000, Air Force 45,000 and para-military forces 45,000. Military service lasts for eighteen months in the Army, and for three years in the Navy and Air Force. Defence estimates for 1965 totalled 23,459 million Zlotys.

Economic Affairs

Although a number of state farms exist, most agricultural land remains in private hands. The principal crops are rye, wheat, oats, and potatoes. Industry is publicly owned, private industry accounting for less than 1 per cent of total production. There are deposits of sulphur, natural gas and copper. Coal output is 117 million tons a year, of which nearly one-fifth is exported. Important industries are shipbuilding, textiles, engineering, steel, cement, chemicals and foodstuffs. Chief exports are raw and processed materials, machinery and plant and foodstuffs. Poland is a member of the Council for Mutual Economic Aid (COMECON). In 1964 she signed an agreement of mutual economic co-operation with Yugoslavia.

Transport and Communications

Transport is by rail, road, inland waterway and air. There are nearly 17,000 miles of railways. Roadways extend for some 180,000 miles, and there are more than 3,000 miles of navigable waterways. The Polish airline LOT maintains internal and external services. There are three large ports on the Baltic coast at Gdynia, Gdańsk and Szczecin. A merchant fleet with a total tonnage of over 1,000,000 tons has services to Great Britain, the Middle East, South America, the Far East and Scandinavia.

Social Welfare

The State provides comprehensive, compulsory insurance and free medical services to all workers.

Education

Education is compulsory and free between the ages of 7 and 13. Secondary education is free to candidates successful in the entrance examinations and provides technical and academic instruction. There are 73 higher educational establishments including eight universities and nine technical universities. Total investments in higher education for the period 1966-70 will exceed 8,700 million Zlotys.

Tourism

The Polish Tourist Society is responsible for tourism and itself maintains eight hotels and 226 hostels throughout the country. Poland is rich in historic cities such as Wrocław, Cracow and Warsaw, and was visited by 558,000 foreign tourists in 1964.

Sport

Football is the most popular game. Athletics, gymnastics and rowing are widely followed.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Easter Sunday, May 1 (Labour Day), Corpus Christi, July 22 (Polish National Day), November 1 (All Saints' Day), December 25 and 26 (Christmas).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the Zloty divided into 100 Groszy.

Notes: Zlotys 500, 100, 50, 20, 10

Coins: Zlotys 10, 5, 2, 1; Groszy 50, 20, 10, 5, 2, 1.

Official exchange rate: 11.2 Zlotys = £1 sterling

4.0 Zlotys = $1 U.S.

Tourist exchange rate: 67.2 Zlotys = £1 sterling

PORTUGAL

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Portugal is a republic situated on the Atlantic side of the Iberian peninsula bordered by Spain to the north and east. The climate is mild and temperate with an annual mean temperature of 16°C (61°F). In the interior the weather is drier and hotter. The language is Portuguese. Roman Catholicism is the religion of the majority of the people. The flag carries two vertical bands of green and red, the green occupying two-fifths of the total area. The capital is Lisbon.

Recent History

Dr. Salazar has ruled Portugal since 1930. The country remained neutral in the Second World War. In 1955 she was admitted to membership of the United Nations. In 1961 the Overseas Province of Goa, south of Bombay, was occupied by India. Since early in 1961 there has been fighting in Northern Angola between African nationalists and Portuguese forces.

Government

The Head of State is elected by the National Assembly and the Corporative Chamber. The National Assembly is elected by direct suffrage every four years. It initiates legislation and approves measures submitted to it by the Council of Ministers. The Corporative Chamber, which sits jointly with the National Assembly, is made up of representatives of the professions and reports on all legislative measures which it examines. The Council of Ministers consists of the Prime Minister and his nominees.

Defence

Military service is compulsory and lasts eighteen months. Portugal is a member of the NATO alliance. Total strength of the Armed Forces is 148,000.

Economic Affairs

Sixty per cent of the economy is based on agriculture. Portugal is the world's third greatest exporter of olive oil. Other important exports are Port wine, sardines and cork. Industry serves these products by way of canning, bottling and bottle manufacture. Textiles are also produced. Portugal has some coal and copper and small quantities of other minerals. The country maintains a large merchant fleet, her best customer being the Portuguese Overseas Provinces, chiefly Angola and Mozambique in Africa. In January 1964 duties on goods entering Portugal from Overseas Provinces were abolished. A three-year (1965-67) investment plan totalling £610 million has been drafted. Portugal is a member of the European Free Trade Association, and in 1964 signed an agreement of mutual economic co-operation with South Africa.

Transport and Communications

There are an estimated 30,000 kilometres of roads

Railways cover 3,601 kilometres and are jointly operated by the state and private bodies. There is a merchant marine with a total tonnage of 660,811 tons. Regular air services connect Lisbon with European and African capitals. 6.2 million escudos will be invested in Transport and Communications between 1965 and 1967.

Social Welfare

A state Social Welfare Fund was established in 1964. There is a state levy upon employers and some places of entertainment to subsidise public works for the relief of unemployment. Health services are usually covered by private insurance bodies and employers' insurance.

Education

Elementary education is compulsory and free to the age of 11 (a law, raising the compulsory age to 13, will take effect in 1970). Secondary education is voluntary and fees are charged. State fees are low and scholarships are provided. There are three universities and one technical university.

Tourism

Portugal is popular with visitors because of its mild and clement weather. Apart from Lisbon and Estoril on the mainland, Madeira and the Azores are much favoured as winter resorts. In 1965, 1,500,000 tourists visited Portugal.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Portugal: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, U.K., U.S.A.

Sport

Association football is Portugal's principal sport.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Corpus Christi, June 10 (National Day), August 15 (The Assumption), October 5 (Confirmation of the Republic), November 1 (All Saints' Day), December 1 (Declaration of Independence), December 8 (Immaculate Conception), December 25 (Christmas Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the escudo divided into 100 centavos. Notes: Escudos 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000.

Coins: Centavos 10, 20, 50, Escudos 1, 2.50, 5, 10, 20.

Exchange rate: 80.17 escudos = £1 sterling

28.95 escudos = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE ruling House of Braganza-Coburg was driven from the throne of Portugal by a revolution in 1910, and a republic proclaimed (October 5th, 1910) in place of the eight-hundred-year-old monarchy. A provisional government was established, with Dr. Teófilo Braga as President, until constitutional elections could be held in 1911.

In November 1926 General Carmona became President, and six years later appointed Dr. Salazar as Premier. He has continued to hold the appointment and is responsible for much of the present Constitution which was promulgated by decree on February 22nd, 1933, voted by plebiscite on March 19th, and came into force on April 11th. It was amended by decrees of the National Assembly on March 23rd and May 23rd, 1935, December 21st, 1936, December 18th, 1937, April 23rd, 1938, September 17th, 1945, June 11th, 1951 and August 29th 1959.

The Portuguese Overseas Provinces come under the central government at Lisbon, and comprise the Cape Verde Islands, San Tomé and Príncipe Islands, Portuguese West Africa (Angola and Guinea), Mozambique, Portuguese India (Goa, Damao and Diu), Macau, and Portuguese Timor (see sections in Vol II). The guarantees accorded to them, their political, administrative, economic and financial organisation are contained in six chapters, under Título VII of the present Constitution.

Religious freedom, habeas corpus, freedom of expression and of education are guaranteed by Article 7. Special laws aimed at preventing the perversion of public opinion, and at safeguarding the moral integrity of individuals, will regulate freedom of expression.

The State favours such private enterprise as is productive and not prejudicial to the welfare of society or of small domestic industries. It promotes the formation and development of a corporative national economy. Only authorised corporations may make, with the assistance of the State, collective labour contracts. Strikes and lock-outs with retaliatory aims are forbidden.

Primary education is compulsory, and may be provided by the State or privately. Religious education in private schools need not have official authorisation. Such schools, which may be subsidised by the State and authorised to grant official diplomas, are subject to official inspection.

The Catholic Church is separated from the State and its juridical personality is recognised. Freedom is granted other religious bodies excepting those whose doctrines are contrary to the established social order. The activities of non-Catholic bodies are subject to regulation by the law.

Sovereignty is vested in the President of the Republic, the National Assembly, the Cabinet, and the Courts.

THE PRESIDENT

The President of the Republic, who must be at least 35 years of age, is chosen by an electoral college composed of members of the National Assembly and the Corporative Chamber, and municipal representatives from each metropolitan district and oversea province, and holds office for seven years. He appoints the premier, and also the ministers and sub-secretaries of state proposed by the premier.

Legislation passed by the National Assembly receives his assent, and he is then responsible for its being carried out. He has the power to dissolve the National Assembly or to convoke extraordinary sessions.

The President is advised by a Council of State composed of the following members.

1. The President of the Council of Ministers (Cabinet).
2. The President of the National Assembly.
3. The President of the Corporative Chamber.
4. The President of the Supreme Court of Justice.
5. The Procurator-General of the Republic.
6. Ten public men of superior competence appointed for life by the President of the Republic.

The Council is consulted by the President when giving constituent powers to the National Assembly, convoking it and dissolving it in national emergencies, and whenever he deems it necessary. The Council decides on the eligibility of presidential candidates, and on whether the guarantees offered by them to respect the political order and the Constitution are acceptable.

The President acts as the representative of the nation in the negotiation of foreign treaties and pacts, though drafts have to be submitted to the National Assembly for approval before being signed.

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

The Assembly consists of 130 members elected by direct vote every four years. Electors vote for party lists. No member of the National Assembly may be at the same time a member of the Corporative Chamber. On dissolution new elections must be held within 60 days, and the new Assembly must meet within a further 30 days. (The period of 60 days may be extended to 6 months if necessary.)

The Assembly initiates legislation and must pass other measures proposed by the Council of Ministers or the President before they can be put into practice. It considers the national accounts and those of the Overseas Territories presented to it by the Accounts Tribunal, authorises the collection and expenditure of revenues; authorises the President to declare war and make peace, and approves international agreements. It may declare a state of siege, with total or partial suspension of constitutional guarantees. The Assembly also has the power to modify the Constitution every ten years or by special authorisation of the President.

THE CORPORATIVE CHAMBER

The Chamber is attached to the National Assembly, and is composed of representatives of local authorities and leaders in the fields of economics, philosophy and culture. The manner of selecting members of the Chamber and their term of office are determined by law.

The Chamber reports and advises within 30 days, or within any period fixed by the Government or the Assembly, on all legislative proposals before they are submitted to the Assembly.

The Chamber is in session simultaneously with the National Assembly and is divided into specialised sections. It may sit in plenary session or by sections and sub-sections. The meetings of sections and sub-sections are not public.

PORTUGAL—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

THE COUNCIL OF MINISTERS (THE CABINET)

The Council of Ministers consists of the Premier, who is appointed by the President, and his nominees, who have to be approved by the President.

The Premier, acting as President of the Council, is responsible only to the President of the Republic for the general policy of his Cabinet. The Cabinet has the right to nominate, transfer or remove by decree the President of the Supreme Court of Justice, the Procurator-General of the Republic, diplomatic and consular agents, and governors of the Overseas Provinces. The life of the Cabinet is exclusively dependent on the confidence of the President of the Republic, and does not depend on the result of any vote in the Assembly or on the fate of any legislative proposals. Individual ministers are responsible politically to the Premier, and civilly and criminally for the acts legalised or committed by them.

REVISION OF THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution may be revised every ten years, the National Assembly at the time of revision acquiring constituent powers which will cease when the amending law is published. The period of ten years may be reduced to five if approved by two-thirds of the members of the Assembly. The President of the Republic may, in the public interest and after consultation with the Council of State, confer constituent powers on a National Assembly enabling it to revise the Constitution in specific matters.

A number of articles were revised in 1959.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Supreme Court: Lisbon; consisting of a president and 15 judges; has jurisdiction over all Portuguese territories, including the overseas provinces, Pres. Dr. ANTÓNIO VAZ PEREIRA.

High Courts, consisting, in Lisbon, of a president and 16 magistrates; in Oporto, of a president and 14 magistrates; and in Coimbra, of a president and 8 magistrates.

District Courts. The number of magistrates attached to such courts in Metropolitan Portugal is 355.

Under the Constitution, judicial power is exercised by ordinary and special courts. Metropolitan Portugal, including the islands, is divided into three judicial districts, the centres of which are Lisbon, Oporto and Coimbra.

The State is represented in the courts by the Public Prosecutor.

The principle of habeas corpus is recognised, and persons illegally detained may appeal to the Supreme Court.

Judges of the ordinary courts are appointed for life and are irremovable. Conditions of appointment, service, dismissal, pension and transfer are governed by law. They may take no other office of profit under the Government, except service on permanent or temporary commissions.

RELIGION

The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. There is freedom of worship, and some Protestant Churches have been established.

RUMANIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Socialist Republic of Rumania lies in south-east Europe between 44° and 48° north latitude and 20° and 30° east longitude. It is bounded to the north and north-west by the U.S.S.R., to the north-west by Hungary, to the south-west by Yugoslavia and to the south by Bulgaria. The south-east coast is washed by the Black Sea. It has a climate of hot summers and cold winters with a moderate rainfall. The average summer temperature is 70°F (21°C) and the winter average 28°F (-2°C). The language is Rumanian. Most Rumanians are members of the Rumanian Orthodox Church. The flag consists of three vertical stripes, blue, yellow and red, the middle stripe bearing the national emblem. The capital is Bucharest.

Recent History

Following the armed insurrection of August 1944, Rumania allied herself with the U.S.S.R. and the Western Allies against Germany. After King Michael's abdication in 1947, Rumania became a People's Democracy later joining the East European Mutual Assistance Treaty (The Warsaw Pact) and the Council for Mutual Economic Aid (COMECON). Rumania became a Socialist Republic in August 1965, under a new constitution which emphasises the intention to maintain friendly relations with both socialist and non-socialist countries.

Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej died in March 1965 and was succeeded as President of the State Council by Chivu Stoica and as General Secretary of the Communist Party by Nicolae Ceausescu.

Government

The new Constitution, adopted in August 1965, vests supreme executive, legislative and judicial authority in the Grand Assembly. The State Council, elected by the Grand National Assembly from among its members, is the permanent executive body and is subordinated to the Assembly. State administration is the responsibility of the Council of Ministers.

Defence

Military service is compulsory for a period of one year. Rumania has an Army, Air Force and Navy. In November 1965 the strength of the Armed Forces was 258,000 (Army 175,000, Air Force 15,000, Navy 8,000, Para-military forces 60,000).

Economic Affairs

In the last twenty years radical changes have been made in the Rumanian economy. Formerly based on agriculture, forestry and oil, the economy now draws most of its wealth from industry. The whole of industry, mines, banks, telecommunications, transport, external trade are nationalised enterprises regulated by a Five-Year Plan (1966-70), which envisages an industrial development rate of 10.5 per cent annually.

Apart from traditional products—oil, timber, wine and fruit—Rumania is exporting an ever-increasing quantity of industrial products. Although most trade is done with the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe, Rumania has also developed important trade relations with Western countries, having trade agreements with France (1962), U.K. (1963), U.S.A. (1964), German Federal Republic (1965), Italy, Austria and other countries.

Transport and Communications

There are 10,985 kilometres of State railways and 76,280 kilometres of national roads. The airport at Bucharest is used by TAROM (Rumanian Air Transport) and other European lines. Navigation on the Danube is open to shipping of all nations. The joint Rumanian-Yugoslav Iron Gates power and navigation system on the Danube is under construction. The chief ports, Constantza, Galati, Braila, Giurgiu, have been modernised.

Social Welfare

Rumania has a comprehensive state insurance scheme.

Education

Primary education is free and compulsory for eight years. In 1964-65 there were more than 3.5 million pupils enrolled in 16,300 elementary and secondary establishments. Over 123,000 students were receiving higher education. There are four universities.

Tourism

The Carpathian mountains, the Danube delta and the Black Sea resorts (Mamaia, Eforie and others) are the principal attractions. Tourism from Western Europe and America has been greatly encouraged, and advantageous exchange rates are offered.

Visas are required by all nationalities.

Sport

The main sports are rugby and association football, handball, basketball, tennis, table tennis, swimming, rowing, fishing and hunting. Skiing, ice-hockey and skating are popular in winter.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), January 24 (Union Day), May 1 (International Labour Day), May 9 (Independence Day), August 23 (National Day), December 30 (Republic Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the leu = 100 bani.

Coins: 1, 3, 5, 10, 25, 50 bani.

Bank Notes: 10, 25, 100 lei.

Notes (issued by Ministry of Finance): 1, 3, 5 lei.

Official exchange rate: 16.8 lei = £1 sterling
6.0 lei = $1 U.S.

Tourist exchange rate: 50.4 lei = £1 sterling
18.36 lei = $1 U.S.

RUMANIA—(THE CONSTITUTION)

THE CONSTITUTION

(Adopted in August 1965)

The Socialist Republic of Rumania

Article 1. Rumania is a socialist republic.

The Socialist Republic of Rumania is a sovereign, independent and unitary state of the working people of the towns and villages. Its territory is inalienable and indivisible.

Article 2. The whole power in the Socialist Republic of Rumania belongs to the people, free and masters of their destiny.

People's power is based on the worker-peasant alliance. In close union, the working class—the leading class of society—the peasantry, the intelligentsia and the other categories of working people, regardless of nationality, build the socialist system, creating the conditions for transition to communism.

Article 3. In the Socialist Republic of Rumania, the leading political force of the whole of society is the Rumanian Communist Party.

Article 4. The sovereign holder of power, the people exercise this power through the Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils, bodies elected by universal, equal, direct and secret vote.

The Grand National Assembly and the People's Councils are the basis of the whole system of state bodies.

The Grand National Assembly is the supreme body of state power, under whose conduct and control all the other state bodies carry on their activities.

Article 5. The national economy of Rumania is a socialist economy, based on the socialist ownership of the means of production.

In the Socialist Republic of Rumania, man's exploitation by man has been abolished for ever and the socialist principle of distribution according to the quantity and quality of work is implemented.

Work is a duty of honour for each citizen of the country.

Article 6. Socialist ownership of the means of production is either state property—goods belonging to the whole people, or co-operative property—goods belonging to each co-operative organization.

Article 7. Cases in the first instance at the people's courts, the regional courts and the military courts are tried with the participation of people's jurors, unless otherwise provided for by law.

Article 101. Judges and people's jurors are elected in accordance with the procedure established by law.

Article 102. In the Socialist Republic of Rumania judicial procedure is in the Rumanian language and, in the regions and districts inhabited by a population of another nationality than Rumanian, the use of the mother tongue of that population is assured.

The parties who do not speak the language in which the trial is held, are given the possibility of becoming acquainted through an interpreter with the files and the right to speak in court and to sum up in the mother tongue.

Article 103. Trials are held in public sessions, unless otherwise provided for by law.

Article 104. In their judicial activity the judges and the people's jurors are independent and only subject to the law.

The Organs of the Procurator's Office

Article 105. The Procurator's Office of the Socialist Republic of Rumania exercises the supervision of the observance of the law by the ministries and the other central bodies of the state administration, the local bodies of the state administration, the penal prosecution organs and the courts as well as by the officials and other citizens.

Article 106. The Procurator's Office is conducted by the Procurator General. The organs of the Procurator's Office are the Procurator General's Office, the Procurator's regional, district and city offices and the Procurator's military office.

The organs of the Procurator's Office are hierarchically subordinated.

Article 107. The Procurator General is elected by the Grand National Assembly for the duration of the legislature in its first session and functions up to the election of the new Procurator General in the first session of the following legislature.

The procurators are appointed by the Procurator General.

Article 108. The Procurator General is responsible to the Grand National Assembly for the activity of the Procurator's Office, and between sessions to the State Council.

The Insignia of the Socialist Republic of Rumania

Article 109. The emblem of the Socialist Republic of Rumania represents wooded mountains over which the sun is rising. In the left part of the emblem there is an oil derrick. The emblem is surrounded by a wreath of wheat ears. The emblem is surmounted by a five-pointed star. At the base of the emblem the sheaves are bound with a tricolour ribbon bearing the words "Republica Socialistă Română".

Article 110. The State Seal bears the country's emblem, around which are the words "REPUBLICA SOCIALISTĂ ROMÂNIA."

Article 111. The flag of the Socialist Republic of Rumania bears the colours red, yellow and blue, placed vertically, with the blue stripe next to the flagstaff. The emblem of the Socialist Republic of Rumania is placed in the centre.

Article 112. The Anthem of the Socialist Republic of Rumania is approved by the Grand National Assembly.

Final Provisions

Article 113. The present Constitution comes into force on the date of its adoption.

Article 114. The Constitution of September 24, 1952 and any provisions of laws, decrees and other normative acts that are contrary to the provisions of the present Constitution are abrogated on the same date.

SPAIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Spain, in south-west Europe, forms more than four-fifths of the Iberian peninsula. It is bounded to the north by France and to the west by Portugal. To the east is the Mediterranean and, twenty miles to the south, Africa. The climate is less temperate than in most of western Europe, with hot summers and, in the hilly interior, cold winters. The language is Spanish. Roman Catholicism is the established religion. The flag carries three horizontal bands of red, yellow and red. The capital is Madrid.

Recent History

General Franco has ruled Spain as Chief of State and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces since 1939. In 1951, Spain moved towards joining the Western alliance by entering defence talks with the U.S.A. The two countries subsequently agreed to the building of military bases on Spanish soil. In 1955, Spain was admitted to the United Nations and in 1962 applied for Associate Membership of the European Economic Community. In 1963 Spain granted local autonomy to the African provinces of Rio Muni and Fernando Poo (Spanish Guinea).

Government

The Law of Succession drawn up in 1947 defines Spain as traditionally a monarchy and states that General Franco will be succeeded by a king. Legislation is initiated by the Council of Ministers headed by General Franco, who, as Head of State, has the power of veto. The Council of State, a partly elected, partly nominated body, is the supreme consultative organ advising the Head of State on all matters within his competence. The Cortes, also partly elected and partly nominated, discusses and proposes legislation.

Defence

Spain maintains an army, navy and air force. Military service is compulsory and lasts two years. The defence pact between the United States and Spain provides a network of air and naval bases under Spanish sovereignty and used by the armed forces of both sides. A Ten-Year Naval Construction Programme totalling £414 million has been drafted. Seventeen per cent of the budget is allocated to defence.

Economic Affairs

Spain is mainly an agricultural country but much of the land is arid and of little value. The most important products are olives, olive oil, cereals, grapes, fortified and unfortified wines, citrus and other fruit, and vegetables. There are valuable deposits of iron, coal and other minerals, while oil has been discovered in North Spain. Textiles are important, manufacture being concentrated in and around Barcelona. A Four-Year Plan 1964-67, envisaging the expenditure of more than 300,000 million pesetas, aims to increase the national income by 6 per cent. It provides for the creation of new industries, better transport, agrarian reform, regional development and increased productivity. In 1964 the joint Portuguese-Spanish Douro River Hydro-Electric Project was inaugurated when the Aldeadávila Dam, the most powerful in Western Europe, came into operation. Tourism is an important source of income, and remittances from Spaniards working abroad are also valuable.

Transport and Communications

There are some 13,000 kilometres of railways and 133,000 kilometres of roads; a great deal of work is being done on road improvements and in 1964 the first stretch of motorway was opened. IBERIA, the Spanish airline, maintains external and internal services. The merchant fleet consists of more than 1,500 vessels of 2,132,002 gross tons.

Social Welfare

Social insurance contributions are paid by employers and employees for family benefits and health services.

Education

From the age of six to fourteen education is compulsory and free. Secondary education is optional; more than half of it is given by religious orders, the rest being divided between state schools and private schools. There are 15 universities.

Tourism

Tourism makes an important contribution to the country's economy. Spanish resorts have become increasingly popular with foreigners, 14 million visiting Spain in 1964. The Costa Brava, the Costa del Sol, the Balearic Islands and the Canary Islands all attract many visitors. Others tour the old towns of Spain—Seville, Cordoba, Granada, Toledo—and the modern cities of Madrid and Barcelona. Receipts from tourism totalled $939 million in 1964, and expenditure was $66 million.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Spain: Algeria, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Luxembourg, Morocco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Sierra Leone, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Uganda, Uruguay, U.K., U.S.A.

Sport

Bullfighting maintains its traditional popularity but football is now the favourite sport in Spain.

THE CONSTITUTION

THERE is no written Constitution of the Spanish State, whose legal foundation is formed by a number of fundamental laws and charters. These are the Fuero de los Españoles (Spaniards' Charter), the Fuero del Trabajo (Labour Charter), the Ley Constitutiva de las Cortes (Parliament Law), the Ley de Sucesión (Law of Succession), the Ley de Referendum Nacional (National Referendum Law) and the Ley de los Principios Fundamentales del Movimiento Nacional.

HEAD OF THE STATE

Spain is legally a Monarchy, but the actual and present Head of State is the Caudillo, Generalísimo Francisco Franco Bahamonde. As Head of State and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces he has assumed absolute authority and is "responsible to God and to the nation". By virtue of legislation reorganising the Spanish Government, published in the Official Bulletin of August 9th, 1939, he participates directly in the Government as President of the Council of Ministers and heads the Supreme Council of Defence, which co-ordinates the Ministers for the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. He has power to dictate law-decrees in case of emergency without consulting the Cortes, and to nominate his successor.

THE SPANIARDS' CHARTER

As early as 1937, the political parties fighting on the National side were unified by decree into a single movement which adopted the name of Falange Española Tradicionalista y de las Juntas de Ofensiva Nacional-Sindicalista (F.E.T. y de las J.O.N.S.) and set out to provide a social organisation for Spain on corporative or "national-sindicalist" lines. The aims of the party were summarised in the Spaniards' Charter, published in 1937.

(1) The Spanish State proclaims as the main principle of its acts, respect for the dignity, integrity and liberty of the individual, acknowledging man as the bearer of eternal values and member of a national community, endowed with duties and rights, the exercise of which guarantees the common good.

CHAPTER I

(2) Spaniards owe faithful service to their Motherland, loyalty to the Head of the State and obedience to the laws

(3) The Law protects equally the rights of all Spaniards without class distinction or discrimination between persons.

(4) Spaniards are entitled to respect concerning their personal or family honour. Whoever insults them, regardless of his social status, will incur liability.

(5) All Spaniards have a right to receive knowledge and education and a duty to acquire them, either at home or in private or public centres, according to their free choice. The State will ensure that no talent is wasted for want of financial means.

(6) The Catholic Religion, being the religion of the State, will enjoy official protection.

No one will be penalised for his religious beliefs or for the private practice of his faith. No external ceremonies or manifestations other than those of the Catholic Religion will be allowed.

(7) Service to the Motherland in a military capacity confers an honourable status on Spanish citizens.

All Spaniards must accept military service when called up, according to the law.

(8) By means of laws, and always in a general manner, personal contribution can be asked for, in case of national interest or public necessity.

(9) Every citizen must contribute to the public expenditure according to his means. No one can be compelled to pay taxes which are not established in accordance with the appropriate law voted by the Cortes.

(10) All Spaniards have the right to undertake public functions of political representative character, through the family, the Municipality and the Syndicate, without this preventing their being elected to other legally established representative bodies.

(11) All Spaniards may hold public positions and offices according to their merit and capacity.

(12) Every Spaniard is allowed to express his opinions freely so long as they are not directed against the fundamental principles of the State.

(13) Inside the national territory the State guarantees the liberty and secrecy of correspondence.

(14) Spaniards have the right to set up residence freely inside the national territory. (By virtue of Art. 35 suspended for 2 years, May 1962)

SPAIN—(THE CONSTITUTION)

(15) No one may enter the home of a Spaniard or carry out any search in it without his consent, unless empowered with a warrant from the competent Authority, and in the cases and manner established by the laws.

(16) Spaniards may meet and associate freely for lawful purposes and according to the rules established by the laws.

The State may create and maintain organisations which it considers necessary to the fulfilment of its purposes. The established rules, which will take the form of Law, will co-ordinate the operation of this right with the one acknowledged in the preceding paragraph.

(17) Spaniards are entitled to legal security. All the organs of the State will operate according to a pre-established social order of rules which cannot be arbitrarily interpreted or altered.

(18) No Spaniard may be detained except for reasons and in the manner prescribed by the Laws.

After a time-limit of seventy-two hours, any detained person must be set free or handed over to the judicial Authority.

(19) No one may be sentenced otherwise than by virtue of a Law existing prior to the offence and by decision of the competent Tribunal after the hearing and defence of the person concerned.

(20) No Spaniard may be deprived of his nationality except for the crime of treason, defined in the penal laws, for enrolling in the army or for accepting public office in a foreign country in defiance of the express prohibition of the Head of the State.

(21) Spaniards may address individual petitions to the Head of the State, to the Cortes and to the Authorities.

Corporations, civil servants and members of the armed forces and Institutes can only exercise this right in accordance with the regulations governing their callings.

CHAPTER II

(22) The State acknowledges and protects the family as a natural and fundamental institution of society, with rights and duties having precedence and superiority over all positive human laws.

Marriage can be only one and indissoluble.

The State will give special protection to large families

(23) Fathers are under obligation to feed, bring up and educate their children. The State can suspend or deprive of their paternal authority those who do not exercise it in a worthy manner and transfer the guardianship and upbringing of minors to those who can legally take charge of them

CHAPTER III

(24) All Spaniards have the right to work and the duty to contribute to some useful social activity.

(25) Work, because of its essentially human nature, cannot be relegated to the material concept of trading, nor be the object of any transaction incompatible with the dignity of the person involved. Work constitutes in itself an honourable attribute and sufficient qualification to claim protection and assistance from the State.

(26) The State acknowledges that any Enterprise is a collective contribution of skill, man-power, and capital in its various forms, and declares therefore the right of these elements to share in the benefits.

The State will take care that relations between them are kept under the strictest impartiality in a social order which subordinates financial values to those of human quality, to the interest of the State and to the requirements of the common good.

(27) All workers will be protected by the State in their right to a just and sufficient remuneration, allowing them and their families, at least, a degree of welfare which will enable them to lead a worthy and moral life.

(28) The Spanish State guarantees to the workers the security of aid in case of misfortune and acknowledges their right to assistance in the case of old age, death, sickness, maternity, accident at work, invalidity, unavoidable suspension of work and other risks which come under the heading of social security.

(29) The State will maintain public assistance institutions, and protect and give support to those created by the Church, the Corporations and private persons.

(30) Private property, as a natural means of fulfilling individual, family or social purposes is recognised and protected by the State.

All forms of property are subordinated to the necessities of the State and of the common good.

Riches must not remain inactive, nor be dissipated unworthily, nor be used for illicit purposes.

(31) The State will facilitate for all Spaniards access to the kinds of property most intimately connected with the human person: home, land, working equipment and goods in everyday use

(32) In no case may the penalty of confiscation of property be imposed

No one may be expropriated except in case of public necessity or social interest, and provided that the appropriate compensation has been paid in accordance with the provisions of the Laws.

(33) The exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter cannot be allowed to threaten the spiritual, national and social unity of Spain.

(34) The Cortes shall vote the necessary laws for the exercise of the rights acknowledged in this Charter.

(35) The operation of the articles 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 18 can be temporarily suspended by the Government, totally or partially, by virtue of a Decree-Law which will determine the limit, extent and duration of the measure.

(36) Any violation against any of the rights proclaimed in this Charter will be examined by the laws, which will determine what action can be taken in their defence before the appropriate judicial organ.

Given in the Pardo on the seventeenth of July, nineteen forty-five.

THE LAW OF SUCCESSION

In a broadcast to the nation on March 31st, 1947, General Franco outlined the Law of Succession that was later submitted and approved by the Cortes (on June 7th) and by the electorate in a National Referendum (on July 6th, 1947).

This law states that Spain, as a political union, forms a Catholic and Social State, and is by tradition a monarchy. The Head of the State is the Caudillo, Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Don Francisco Franco.

A Regency Council will assume power on the vacancy of the Head of the State, its rulings needing a majority vote of two-thirds to be valid.

The Head of State may at any time nominate to the Cortes his successor, who will bear the title of King or Regent. (The Head of the State may revoke a nomination previously put forward by himself and approved by the Cortes.) If the death or declared incapacity of the Head of the State occurs before his successor has been nominated, the Regency Council shall convoke the Government and the Council of the Realm within three days, and they shall agree by at least a two-thirds majority on the nomination of the King—or if no man is acceptable a Regent shall be agreed and appointed.

In order to be the Head of the State, King, or Regent,

SPAIN—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

the nominee must be a Spaniard, a man over thirty, a Catholic, and swear to obey the fundamental laws of the nation which are the "Spaniards' Charter", the Labour Charter, the Constitutional Law of the Cortes, the Law of Referendum, and the present Law of Succession. He must also be loyal to the principles of the Movimiento Nacional. (Modifications of this law require a national referendum as well as the agreement of the Cortes.) The monarchy having been re-established, the order of succession shall be by primogeniture.

Should the incapacity of the Head of the State be recognised by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the Government it is to be communicated to the Council of the Realm, who are to act in accordance with this Law of Succession.

THE COUNCIL OF THE REALM

The Council of the Realm assists the Head of State in those tasks of government that are exclusively his. He takes the advice of the Council when a law approved by the Cortes has to be reconsidered by them, with regard to declarations of peace or war and on the question of the nomination of a successor.

The Council is presided over by the President of the Cortes, and consists also of the senior dignitary of the Church with a seat in the Cortes, the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, the Presidents of the Council of State, the Supreme Court of Justice and the Institute of Spain, four Councillors elected by each of the following groups in the Cortes: the Syndicates, Local Government, the University Rectors and the Professional Colleges, and three Councillors appointed by the Head of State.

THE REGENCY COUNCIL

The Regency Council would consist of the President of the Cortes (who would preside), the senior dignitary of the Church and the senior Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces.

THE COUNCIL OF STATE

The Council of State is the highest consultative body in matters of government and administration, and takes precedence, after the Council of Ministers, over all other bodies.

It consists of a President, a Secretary-General, an undefined number of permanent Councillors appointed by the Head of State and the following eight ex-officio Councillors: the Primate of Spain, the Vice-Secretary-General of the Falange, the Combined Chief of Staffs, the Solicitor-General, the Director-General of Litigation, the Rector of the University of Madrid, the Director of the Institute of Political Studies and a National Delegate of the Syndicates.

THE CORTES ESPAÑOLAS (Parliament)

By the Law of July 17th and the Decrees of October 15th, 1942, establishing the new Cortes, the chief mission of the Cortes is the preparation and elaboration of the laws without prejudice to the powers exercised by the Chief of State. The 535 members of the Cortes are called "procuradores", and are partly ex-officio members and partly so by appointment, together with some elected members.

Members must be Spanish, have attained their majority, be in full use of all civil rights with no political disability. Nominations by the Head of the State can be revoked; the remainder hold office for three years and may be re-elected. The President, two Vice-Presidents, and four Secretaries are appointed by the Head of the State, as also are the Committees, the latter with the approval of the Government as well.

Laws falling under the usual headings, and any others, as also motions and agreements not having the force of law, are submitted to a full session of the Cortes. Committees deliberate on anything not included in the foregoing, draft laws, and submit proposals. In war or emergencies the Government may act through decree-laws to be ratified by the Cortes later. The full Cortes or the Committees consider the ratification of treaties on matters within their competence. There is no provision for introducing new laws through individual members, and no law is promulgated without the approval of the Head of the State, to whom the President of the Cortes submits the draft laws approved by the Cortes.

SWEDEN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Sweden lies in north-west Europe, occupying half the Scandinavian peninsula. It is bordered by Finland to the north-east and Norway to the north-west and west. The Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Bothnia are to the east, the Skagerrak and Kattegat to the south-west. Winters are cold and summers mild. Average summer temperature in Stockholm is 16 °C (61 °F) and winter temperature -2 °C (29 °F). The language is Swedish. The predominant faith is Lutheran Protestantism. The flag is light blue with a yellow cross. The capital is Stockholm.

Recent History

Sweden remained neutral in the Second World War and has not joined any post-war military alliance. It has played a leading part in the United Nations and is a member of the European Free Trade Association, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, the Council of Europe and many other international organisations. The Prime Minister, Mr. Erlander, was appointed in 1946 and the Social Democrats have been in power since 1932, except for the period 1939-1945 when there was a coalition government.

Government

Sweden is a constitutional monarchy. The King acts through a Council of State (Statsrådet), responsible to the Diet (Riksdag) or parliament. The Diet consists of two chambers elected by proportional representation. The First Chamber (Första Kammaren) has 151 members who are elected for 8 years by the County Councils (landstingen) and the Councils of six large towns (stadsfullmäktige). The Second Chamber (Andra Kammaren) has 233 members who are elected for four years by universal suffrage. The country is divided into 24 counties and Stockholm.

Defence

A Supreme Commander, under the King is in charge of the three services, assisted by a Defence Staff. The Defence Forces comprise regular and short-term servicemen, liability to serve extending from the age of 18 to 47 for a minimum of ten months. Total mobilised strength is about 700,000. A permanent force of 1,600 men at the disposal of the United Nations was established in 1964.

Economic Affairs

About 6 per cent of the population are employed in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. Agriculture is mainly in the southern region, the chief crops being oats, wheat, rye, barley and potatoes. Dairy produce accounts for 50 per cent of farming output. Half the country is covered by forests, providing timber, pitch, fuel and tar, and supplies for the paper and rayon industries. Sweden is rich in mineral resources. There are large deposits of iron ore, also lead, zinc, sulphur, manganese and low-grade uranium ore. Forty per cent of the population are employed in mining, manufacturing and construction. Industrial products include machinery, vehicles, electronics, telecommunications, and shipping. Swedish furniture, porcelain and glass have an international reputation. Labour relations are among the most stable in the world.

Transport and Communications

Sweden has an excellent railway system. Of the 8,120 miles of nationalised railways, more than 50 per cent is electrified. Swedish State Railways operate ferry services to Denmark and the German Democratic Republic (East Germany). Roads extend for 59,000 miles (driving is to be transferred from the left to the right-hand side of the road in 1967). The ocean-going fleet totals 4,290,000 gross tons. The Swedish Airlines own a three-sevenths share in the Scandinavian consortium SAS (Scandinavian Airlines System).

Social Welfare

There is a highly advanced system of social security schemes covering old age and family pensions, sickness, unemployment and disability benefits. Expenditure on the social services absorbs a considerable part of the national income.

Education

Education is compulsory and free for nine years in comprehensive schools, which are supported locally and by the state. There are numerous secondary and special schools, five state universities and three technical universities.

Tourism

Sweden offers a variety of landscape from the mountains of the Midnight Sun north of the Arctic Circle to the white sand beaches of the south. There are many lakes and forests. Stockholm, a beautifully situated capital, is famous for modern architecture.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Sweden: Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Netherlands, Nicaragua, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, San Marino, Spain, South Africa, Switzerland, Tanzania, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, U.K., U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Sport

The most popular sports are football, gymnastics, skiing, athletics and tennis. Swimming, sailing, golfing, hunting, and mountaineering also have a following.

SWEDEN—(THE CONSTITUTION)

THE CONSTITUTION

THE Constitution of the Kingdom of Sweden dates from 1809. Sweden is an hereditary monarchy, the Government, however, operates on a democratic and parliamentary basis. There are four fundamental laws: the Instrument of Government, the Act of Succession, the Riksdag Act, the Freedom of the Press Act

In accordance with the balance of power established by the Constitution of 1809, the executive authority is in the hands of the King in Council, or the Government, the legislative authority is vested in the King and Riksdag (Parliament), both having an absolute veto, while the right to impose taxes is the exclusive prerogative of the Riksdag. The judicial authority is vested in independent courts, but appeal in the final instance may be lodged with the two Supreme Courts, which decide in the name of the King. The day-to-day administration is not carried out by the Ministries, headed by a member of the Government, but by independent Administrative Boards, working under the supervision of the King-in-Council.

As the Riksdag has the right, through one of its Committees, to examine the records of the Cabinet and to impeach its members, it exercises a certain control over the government of the country. The King, who must be a member of the Swedish State Church (Lutheran), conducts foreign policy on the advice of the Government. On matters of foreign policy of any importance, a delegation appointed by the Riksdag has to be consulted. It is called the "Utrikesnämnden", or the Advisory Council on Foreign Affairs, before which must be laid all available documents and information relating to the case. Further, all foreign agreements of importance are now submitted to the Riksdag for ratification.

Legislative measures of any importance always emanate from the Government. A bill becomes law when, after having passed through both Chambers, it receives the Royal assent. The right of amendment is used in both Chambers in regard to Government proposals as well as to private members' bills.

With regard to taxation and questions concerning the Budget generally, the Riksdag alone has the power of decision, although the King in Council has the right of initiative. If the two Chambers of the Riksdag cannot agree concerning a financial question, it is decided by a majority of votes given in a joint division. In this way the more numerous Second (Lower) Chamber is ensured a certain preponderance in financial questions. The estimates are split up into numerous items, which are voted on separately. By this means, and through the control of its auditors, the Riksdag has gained a great influence in the sphere of administration. Other institutions whereby the Riksdag exercises control over the administration are the "Justitieombudsman" and the "Militieombudsman," officials appointed by the Riksdag and before whom citizens may lay complaints of unjust treatment by civil or military officials. Two important financial institutions, the Bank of Sweden and the National Debt Office, are also under the immediate control of the Riksdag.

In August 1922 a new piece of constitutional machinery, the Advisory Referendum, was specially introduced with a view to its application on the question of the total prohibition of the liquor traffic. In 1954 a Bill was introduced by the Government to enable a minority of Riksdag members to initiate such a Referendum. This Bill is now under reconsideration.

THE RIKSDAG

The Riksdag is divided into two chambers, which in all questions have equal competence and authority. The First (Upper) Chamber has 151 members, who are elected by the County Councils (Landsingen), and in cities which are not represented in the County Councils, by the City Councils. Members are elected for a period of 8 years. There are 19 electoral areas, divided into 8 groups of which 1 each year elects members for the succeeding period of 8 years. Men or women of not less than 23 years of age and entitled to vote in municipal elections are eligible for election. The elections are conducted on a system of proportional representation. The Second (Lower) Chamber is composed of 233 members, who are elected for a period of 4 years, on universal suffrage of men and women who have reached the age of 21. All men and women who are entitled to a vote have the right to stand for election, but only in their own constituency (there are 28), for the Second Chamber. Here, too, the elections are conducted on a system of proportional representation.

The Chambers are presided over by Speakers, who are chosen by the Chambers themselves. There are one Speaker and two Deputy Speakers in each Chamber, who are chosen by consent, so that all the leading parties are represented by at least one Speaker (in all, six Speakerships are distributed among four parties).

THE COMMITTEE SYSTEM

In accordance with old tradition the work of the Swedish Riksdag is, to a great extent, carried on in a non-partisan atmosphere. This is largely the result of the thorough attention given to all questions by numerous standing committees elected on a basis of proportional representation. Besides the "Utrikesnämnden" mentioned above (the members of which also form the Standing Committee on Foreign Affairs), and Special Committees, there are Standing Committees to deal with Foreign Affairs (Utrikesutskottet, 16 members), the Constitution (Konstitutionsutskottet, 26 members), Supply (Statsutskottet, 30 members), Ways and Means (Bevillningsutskottet, 20 members), the Banking (Bankoutskottet, 16 members), Legislation (Lagutskottet, 3 each of 16 members), Agriculture (Jordbruksutskottet, 20 members), and Miscellaneous Affairs (24 members). The number of members is in every case half from each Chamber.

The Constitution Committee has to examine the minutes of the Cabinet and to deal with or to initiate proposals concerning alterations of the fundamental law and of laws regulating local government. The Supply Committee, which deals with the majority of financial questions, has, through this function, become the most important and most influential of the Committees.

The Committees play an important part in the Swedish Riksdag, owing, among other things, to the fact that the members of both Chambers work together side by side—a feature peculiar to the Swedish Parliament. If the Chambers come to different decisions on any subject which has to be dealt with by an ordinary Committee, this body must, if possible, put forward proposals for a compromise. In order that a bill may be finally carried, it is necessary to have an identical decision from both Chambers (except on financial questions, see above).

POLITICAL PARTIES

Socialdemokratiska Arbetarepartiet (Social Democratic Labour Party): Sveavägen 68, Stockholm. The Social Democratic labour movement dates back to the 'eighties. The party has 850,000 members and 192 out of the 384 members in the Riksdag (1964). Its programme is one of socialist economic reform and support of the United Nations. Chair. T. ERLANDER, Second Chamber; Sec. STEN ANDERSSON.

Folkpartiet (The Liberal Party). Ad. Fredriks Kyrkogata 12, Stockholm. The Liberal Party as a country-wide organisation was constituted in 1902. Chair. Prof. B. ÖHLIN; Chair. in First Chamber BIRGER LUNDSTRÖM; in Second Chamber B. ÖHLIN; Political Sec. CYRIL OLSSON; Organising Sec. JENS ADOLFSSON.

Centerpartiet (The Centre Party): Bergsgatan 7B, Stockholm. Constituted in 1922, through the coalition of two smaller parties formed in 1913 and 1915 respectively. It is an association, mainly of agriculturists, whose aim is to work for the social, economic and political welfare of the farmers. Chair. GUNNAR HEDLUND, Sec. GUSTAV JONNERGÅRD.

Högerpartiet (Conservative Party): Stockholm, Karduansmakaregatan 9 The Party was constituted in 1904, but derives its origin from conservative tendencies during the latter part of the 19th century. The chief points in its programme are strong national defence, and in home affairs social and economic progress on traditional Swedish lines. Chair. YNGVE HOLMBERG.

Sveriges Kommunistiska Partii (Communist Party): Kungsgatan 84, Stockholm. The party was formed in 1917 as Left Social Democratic Party of Sweden, affiliated to the Communist International 1919. At the Congress in March 1921 it was renamed the Communist Party. The policy of the Communist Party is based on the principles of Marxism-Leninism; Chair. CARL-HENRIK HERMANSSON.

Medborgarling Samling (Citizens' Front). c/o Sydsvenska Dagbladet Snällposten, Box 260, Malmö 1. Formed to fight the election of 1964 and to foster a unified non-socialist opposition front. Campaigning only in Malmö, Helsingborg, Lund and Landskrona.

Kristlig Demokratisk Samling (Christian Democratic Union). c/o Dagen, Box 3232, Stockholm 3. Formed in 1964 to promote emphasis on Christian values in modern life, the party contested most seats in September 1964; Chair. BIRGER EKSTEDT.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

In Sweden the judiciary and the executive are separate. Judges are appointed by the Government and cannot be removed except by judicial sentence.

There are two state officers with some control over the judicial system as well as the administrative authorities. The Justitiekansler (Chancellor of Justice) and the Justitieombudsman supervise the general administration and the courts of law. The Justitiekansler performs his functions on behalf of the Government. The Justitieombudsman is appointed by and acts on behalf of Parliament. There is also a Militieombudsman, appointed by Parliament, with powers in military matters.

COURTS OF FIRST INSTANCE

Rådhusrätt (Borough Court). The Court of First Instance in towns. The Borough Court is, in civil cases, usually conducted by three lawyers, of whom one is often the Mayor. (In minor cases there is sometimes only one member.) In criminal cases the court consists of one judge and seven to nine jurors (in less serious cases only three). In larger towns the court is often in divisions.

Häradsrätt (District Court). The Court of First Instance in the country. Small towns with no court of their own come under the District Court. The District Court is composed of one judge and seven to nine jurors (in some criminal cases only three), who are chosen by the District Court for a period of six years. These jurors take part in decisions with the judge. The vote of the judge is decisive, except in the case of a unanimous contrary vote of the jurors.

APPEAL COURTS

Hovrätt (Court of Appeal). The Court of Second Instance, consisting of a president, judges of appeal and assessors. The work is apportioned between various divisions, each of which has four members. There are six Courts of Appeal:

Svea Hovrätt in Stockholm; Pres. S. PETRÉN.

SWITZERLAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Switzerland is a mountainous state in central Europe bounded to the north by Germany, to the east by Austria, to the south by Italy, and to the west by France. The climate is generally temperate, although wide and sudden variations in weather frequently occur due to differences of altitude, aspect and gradient. The snow line varies from about 2,500 to 3,200 metres. There are four official languages—German, French, Italian and Romansh spoken by 72.1, 20.3, 5.9 and 1 per cent of the population respectively. About 54 per cent are Protestant and 42 per cent Roman Catholic. The flag consists of a white cross on a red background. The capital is Berne.

Recent History

Switzerland was neutral in both wars and has long been the headquarters of many international organisations. Switzerland has not become a member of the United Nations but maintains a Permanent Observer at the H.Q. in New York. She belongs to the European Free Trade Association (EFTA) and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). In December 1961 she applied for Associate Membership of the European Economic Community, but the application has not proceeded further (March 1966). In 1963 Switzerland became a full member of the Council of Europe.

Government

The Swiss Confederation has a republican federal constitution. Parliament consists of two chambers of equal status—the Council of States and the National Council. There is no female suffrage in national elections and in most cantonal elections. The 22 cantons enjoy much local authority, being served through cantonal councils and councils of government.

Defence

The Confederation belongs to no foreign defence organisations. Military service is compulsory, and liability extends from the 20th to the end of the 60th year.

Economic Affairs

Switzerland's chief natural resource is water power, which is utilised by over 300 hydro-electric plants. The country excels in precision-engineering, notably in the construction of clocks and watches. Machine manufacture occupies 26 per cent of the industrial labour force. Public works, building and industry depend on a large foreign labour force, totalling 721,000 workers. Agriculture is carried on mainly in the valleys, stock-raising being the principal activity. The chief crops are wheat and potatoes. Tourism is a most valuable source of income both summer and winter.

Transport and Communications

The Swiss Federal Railways (2,256 miles) are wholly electrified and among the most efficient in the world. Eight small private railways cover chiefly mountain routes. There are 10,413 miles of main roads. The Great St. Bernard road tunnel, under the Alps, was opened in March 1964. A small ocean-going merchant fleet is based on the Rhine port of Basle. Swissair is the national air line and Zürich and Geneva are the principal airports.

Social Welfare

All Swiss citizens are entitled to insurance against illness by the Federal Insurance Law of 1911. This insurance is not yet universally compulsory. Unemployment insurance is subsidised by the Confederation, but varies in different cantons. There is a compulsory system of old age, widows', widowers' and invalids' pensions.

Education

Education is under cantonal and communal control, and has been compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 14 since 1874. Secondary education for children of 12 to 15 is widespread. There are numerous private schools and many foreign children receive part of their education in Switzerland. There are seven universities and two technical universities.

Tourism

Switzerland is the classic land of tourism and the number of visitors continues to grow. In 1963 almost six million foreigners visited the country. The principal attractions are the lakes and lake resorts and the mountains. Walking, mountaineering and winter sports are the chief pastimes. Receipts from tourism totalled $487 million in 1964, and expenditure was $187 million.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Switzerland. Algeria, Australia, Japan, Malaysia, Morocco, New Zealand, South Africa, Tunisia, Turkey, all Western European countries and all American countries.

Sport

Skating, skating, and football are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), Easter Monday, Ascension Day, Whit Monday, December 25 (Christmas Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The basic unit of currency is the Swiss Franc, which is divided into 100 centimes.

Coins: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 centimes; 1, 2, 5 francs.

Notes: 10, 20, 50, 100, 500, 1,000 francs.

Exchange rate: 12 13 francs = £1 sterling
4 33 francs = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

MUCH of what is now Switzerland once formed part of the Holy Roman Empire, but it was primarily against the oppression of local overlords, among whom were the powerful Hapsburg family, that in 1291 the communities of Uri, Schwyz, and Lower Unterwalden joined in an "everlasting league" of defence. In 1353 the confederation comprised eight cantons, and by 1513 thirteen. Throughout this period an increasing number of these cantons obtained charters which made them virtually free communities, directly responsible to the Emperor, and they finally achieved formal independence from the Empire at the close of the Thirty Years war, as the result of French influence.

French revolutionary ideas began to spread to Switzerland in 1789; by 1798 the French had intervened, revolutionised the country, and occupied the Swiss territory. So far there had been only a loose defensive alliance of cantons, but the French unified the country under the title of the Helvetic Republic, and imposed a written constitution. The new régime was bitterly resented, and the country was disunited. Later, when it was in France's interests to have a settled and friendly Switzerland, Napoleon withdrew the occupation forces, and by the 1803 Act of Mediation granted a new Constitution with the approval of most Swiss.

In 1815 the Congress of Vienna recognised the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland, and three new cantons were admitted into the Confederation, bringing the total number to twenty-two. Since then the boundaries have remained almost unchanged.

After the Act of Mediation followed an unsettled period of adjustment to their newly-achieved unity, culminating in the Federal Constitution of 1848—the first Constitution to be formulated entirely without foreign influence. This was succeeded by the Constitution of 1874 which, with modifications, is in force today, and completes the development of Switzerland from a group of cantons linked by a simple defensive alliance, to a unified Federal State.

The twenty-two federated Cantons (often referred to as the twenty-five States, because three of the Cantons are sub-divided), have sovereign authority over their own life save where the detailed constitutional pact has expressly limited them, and all undelegated powers are theirs. Cantonal feeling still makes for marked disapproval of any increase in Federal authority, which has been greatly extended since 1874 in the economic and social spheres of legislation.

Principally, the Federal authority is responsible for legislation on civil, penal and commercial law, marriage, residence and settlement, export and import duties, defence, railroads and important roads and bridges, social insurance, and international affairs. Administration is largely in the hands of the Cantons, partly in the mixed management of Federal authorities and Cantons, and some is entirely in the hands of the Confederal authority. The Cantons derive their revenue from direct taxation. The Federal authority draws its revenue mainly from indirect taxation. The setting up of permanent Federal direct taxation is a very controversial subject, but at present the Federal authority derives some income from direct taxes under a temporary system based on the war emergency powers of the executive.

FOUR MAIN INSTITUTIONS

The life of the Federal authority revolves round four institutions: a Bicameral Legislature, the Federal Assembly, the Executive, the Federal Council; the Federal Court and the Federal Insurance Court; and the Direct Popular Vote of the People.

The Assembly is composed of a Council of States representing the Cantons, each of which has, equally, its two representatives elected for varying periods at the discretion of each Canton; and the National Council, the Lower House, composed of 200 paid members elected (since 1918) by proportional representation, by males of twenty and over, for a four-year period. In December 1958 a law giving the vote to women in Federal matters was passed by the National Council and the Council of States, but the motion was defeated in a national referendum of electors held in February 1959. Nevertheless, Canton Vaud decided to give the vote to women in Cantonal affairs. Neuchâtel and Geneva Cantons have since enfranchised women.

The Councils are co-equal in authority: by simple machinery both agree, as constitutionally required, on legislation prepared for their consideration by a Committee system. In Joint Session (as the Federal Assembly) these Councils elect, after each general election, the Federal Council of seven, the directive and executive authority of the Confederation. Of this the members are customarily re-elected so long as they will serve, and one is each year designated by the Assembly as Chairman or President and another as Vice-President, who customarily becomes next year's President. The President is rather the servant than the master of the Council, which is responsible for every action to the legislature. A Civil Service, recruited upon proven merit, which includes the employees of the State Railways, serves the Federal authority. The Chancellor, appointed by the Assembly every four years, is the Federal stenographic and publication agent.

REFERENDUM AND INITIATIVE

A Referendum is obligatory for constitutional amendments passed by the Assembly; and for their ratification a majority of the voters and the Cantons must assent. Since 1874 a number of amendments have been thus accepted. There may be an initiative petition for constitutional amendments offered by at least 50,000 voters; here again acceptance is dependent upon a majority of voters and Cantons. Of sixty-seven offered between 1874 and 1958, seven were accepted. Lastly, there is the Optional or Facultative Referendum for federal legislation—and since 1921 for International Treaties included for a period exceeding 15 years—at the request of 30,000 voters or eight Cantons. Between 1874 and the end of 1958, of 708 laws passed by the Assembly, sixty-three were submitted, of which thirty-eight were rejected. Between 40 per cent and 70 per cent of the electorate participates in the referenda poll, though in the poll defeating the so-called Capital Levy initiative in 1922, 86 per cent voted.

THE REFERENDUM

The Referendum or Direct Popular Vote of the People forms an important part of the Swiss Constitution. It is obligatory for constitutional amendments passed by the Assembly.

THE CANTONS

There are twenty-two cantons, three being subdivided into half-cantons; each canton and half-canton has a body elected by universal suffrage—der Grosse Rat or Kantonsrat—which exercises the functions of a parliament. Membership of the cantonal government varies from five to eleven, and the terms of office from one to five years. The Referendum is used in all but three of the cantonal governments; all laws and concordats or agreements with the other cantons, important financial matters, and revisions of the Constitution, must be submitted to the popular vote. In Appenzell, Glarus and Unterwalden assemblies of all male citizens, known as Landsgemeinden, exercise their powers direct. The cantons are: Zürich, Bern (Berne), Luzern (Lucerne), Uri, Schwyz, Upper and Lower Unterwalden, Glarus (Glaris), Zug (Zoug), Fribourg (Freiburg), Solothurn (Soleure), Basel (Bâle—town and country), Schaffhausen (Schaffhouse), Appenzell, St. Gallen (St. Gall), Graubünden (Grisons), Aargau (Argovie), Thurgau (Thurgovie), Ticino (Tessin), Vaud (Waadt), Valais (Wallis), Neuchâtel (Neuenburg), Genève (Genf).

(The name of the canton is given in French, German or Italian, according to the language spoken there; alternative names are in brackets.)

SWITZERLAND—(POLITICAL PARTIES)

POLITICAL PARTIES

Radikal-Demokratische Partei (Freisinnig-demokratische Partei (Radical-Democratic Party): led the movement which gave rise to the Federative State and the Constitution of 1848, and soon became the dominant group in the Federal Assembly. Up to 1919, when Proportional Representation was introduced, it always had an absolute majority, and is still one of the three largest groups in Parliament. It stands for the principle of a strong Federal power, while respecting the legitimate rights of the Cantons and all the minorities; Liberal in tendency.

President: NELLO CELIO; Secretary: H. R. LEUBENBERGER, Bundesplatz 2, Berne; Leader of Parliamentary Group: E. STUDER (Burgdorf).

Konservativ-christlichsoziale Volkspartei der Schweiz (Swiss Conservative Party): Postfach 1759, Berne 3001; formed 1912 by those parties which had, since 1848, opposed centralisation plans, and the Kulturkampf of the Radical Majority Party. The bases of its policy are a Christian outlook on world affairs, federalism and Christian social reform by means of professional associations. It is, as its name shows, no sectarian party: Catholics and Protestants adhere to it. It is composed of peasants, Christian workers and middle-class professional people. It forms the most numerous parliamentary group in the Council of the States and in the Vereinigter Bundesversammlung.

President: Dr. ETTORRE TENCHIO (Chur); Secretary: Dr. MARTIN ROSENBERG, Sulgenheimweg 3, Berne, Leader of Parliamentary Group: Dr. KURT FUGLER, National Counsellor (Saint-Gall).

Sozialdemokratische Partei der Schweiz (Socialist Party): f. 1870; bases its policy on democratic socialism and collaborates with all political parties sharing the same principles. Its influence dates mainly from the introduction of Proportional Representation in 1919.

Chairman: FRITZ GRÜTTER (Berne); Secretaries: RICHARD MÜLLER, JEAN RIESEN, MASCHA OETTLI, Eigerplatz 5, Berne, Leader of Parliamentary Group:

MATHIAS EGGENBERGER, National Counsellor (St Gall).

Bauern, Gewerbe und Bürger Partei (Peasants, Artisans and Middle Class Party) seceded from the Radical Party in 1919. It is chiefly distinguishable from it by more strongly marked agrarian and conservative social tendencies. It must be considered as a governmental party.

President: WALTER SIEGENTHALER, Secretary: E. BLASER, Optingenstrasse 1, Berne; Leader of Parliamentary Group: O. HESS, National Counsellor (Hauslen-Roggwil, Thurgau).

Union libérale-démocratique suisse-Liberal-demokratische Union der Schweiz (Liberal-Democratic Party): is recruited from those elements in the Protestant cantons which supported the governments overthrown by the Revolution of 1847. Its evolution has been more rapid than that of the Conservative Party, since it has not been hampered by religious questions. It maintains an almost constant opposition to centralising and étatist tendencies.

President: PETER DÜRENMATT, National Counsellor (Basle); Leader of Parliamentary Group: GASTON CLOTTU (Neuchâtel), Secretary: G. DUPLAIN, Hochfeldstr. 63, Berne.

Landesring der Unabhängigen (Independent Party): f. 1936; oppositional movement advocating the application of liberal and social principles to politics.

President: RUDOLF SUTER, Nationalrat, Forchstrasse 436, Zollikon; Secretary: J. HOHL, Grossrat, Mellingerstrasse 41, Baden; Office: Badenerstrasse 125, Zürich 26, Leader of Parliamentary Group: W. VONTOBEL, Nationalrat, Zürich.

Partei der Arbeit (Workers' Party): f. in 1944 by members of the Communist Party and left-wing Socialists. It aims at co-ordinating all left-wing elements in order to re-organise Switzerland on a Socialist basis.

General Secretary: EDGAR WOOG, Zweierstr. 188, Zürich.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Switzerland has possessed a common Civil Code since 1912, but the Penal Code was only unified in 1942. Under the Code capital punishment was abolished by the few Cantons which still retained it. The individual Cantons continue to elect and maintain their own magistracy, and retain certain variations in procedure. The following describes the Penal and Civil Procedure in the Canton of Zürich, but is similar to procedure in the more important Cantons.

CIVIL LAW

(a) District Courts (Bezirksgerichte).

Presidents or Vice-Presidents, who generally have a university degree in law, are competent as sole judges (Einzelrichter) if the value of the case is between 100 and 1,000 frs. (values below 100 frs. are decided without appeal by the judges of peace, who need not be lawyers—normally there is one for each commune). The Presidents or Vice-Presidents also deal with specified claims in bankruptcy proceedings without any limitation of the importance of the case; they are also competent to deal in summary and ex-parte proceedings.

The District Courts consist of three or five members. They settle civil matters between 1,000 frs. and 2,000 frs. value, and decide most other civil matters in the first instance if the plaintiff or both parties do not ask for an exception (see below for commercial matters and cases of over frs. 4,000 value).

(b) Appeal Court (Obergericht).

Each Canton has an Appeal Court, which in Zürich consists of different specialised benches (Kammern) of three or five members.

The Appeal Court decides cases of more than 2,000 frs. value. If both parties agree, cases of more than 4,000 frs. value may be brought directly before the Appeal Court to avoid District Courts.

A sub-branch of the Appeal Court is the Commercial Court. It consists of two members of the Appeal Court and three or five qualified merchants chosen by the President for each case from a list of fifty names. They decide cases of more than 4,000 frs. value if of a commercial character, when either both parties or the defendant are registered merchants. Further, this Court decides some special matters like patents and trade marks.

(c) Cassation Court

This is a special Cantonal Court principally deciding questions of procedure, or reviewing opinions clearly contrary to law and remanding such cases to the Appeal Court.

(d) Federal Court

In matters of Federal Law the Federal Court gives final decisions in cases of more than 8,000 frs. value, or upon request of both parties it sits as a court of exclusive jurisdiction in cases of more than 20,000 frs. value. It consists of five members (two benches).

PENAL LAW

Matters of Penal Law are decided partly by the same courts as matters of Civil Law.

In the Canton of Zürich, the more important cases are tried by the Jury Court (Schwurgericht) when the accused pleads "not guilty", by the Appeal Court when the plea is "guilty". The Jury Court consists of three judges, of whom at least the President is a member of the Appeal Court, and a jury of twelve members. The jury considers its verdict in secret session. If the decision is "guilty" the three judges must pass a sentence based on the jury verdict, and no explanation of this verdict is given.

Less important cases are tried by the District Courts, or their Presidents, in the first instance, and by the Appeal Court in the second instance. In certain minor cases, no appeal is possible.

The Public Attorney has the right to support the written accusation before any court. He is bound to assist only in important cases when the accused pleads "not guilty".

Witnesses and experts are examined by the Public Attorney and sign written statements, which are joined to the written accusation of the Public Attorney. The defence is allowed to question them; they are seldom called again. As a rule, they appear in person only before Jury Courts and make their deposition a second time.

The Federal Court only acts as instance of cassation in matters of Federal Law which do not include the proceeding or the appreciation of facts or proofs. It does also sit as a court of exclusive jurisdiction in certain important cases (see below).

THE FEDERAL TRIBUNAL

President: FRITZ HÄBERLIN.

Vice-President: ANDRÉ PANCHAUD.

The Federal Tribunal (or Tribunal fédéral), consisting of 26 members, sits at Lausanne. There are 11-13 supplementary judges. Both judges and supplementary judges are appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years, and may be re-elected. The President and Vice-President are elected for two years and, as such, are not eligible for re-election.

The Tribunal exercises final jurisdiction in suits between the Confederation and Cantons, corporations and individuals (see above), and between Cantons. It is the Court of Appeal against decisions of certain federal authorities, or Cantonal authorities applying federal law. It also tries individuals for offences against the Confederation, and decides complaints concerning violation of the Constitution. The Tribunal consists of the following sections:

- (a) Court of Public and Administrative Law (La Cour de Droit Public et de Droit Administratif).
- (b) Two Civil Courts (Deux Cours Civiles).
- (c) Bankruptcy Court (La Chambre des Poursuites et des Faillites).
- (d) Court of Penal Cassation (La Cour de Cassation Pénale).
- (e) Court of Arraignment (La Chambre d'Accusation).
- (f) Criminal Court (La Chambre Criminelle).
- (g) The Federal Penal Court (La Cour Pénale Fédérale).

FEDERAL TRIBUNAL OF INSURANCE

President: HANS WÜTHRICH.

Vice-President: PIETRO MONA.

The Tribunal was founded in 1918 and consists of five members. It sits at Lucerne.

TURKEY

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Republic of Turkey links Europe and Asia at the Straits of the Bosphorus between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. Most of Turkey lies in Asia, the vast Anatolian peninsula being bordered to the east by the U.S.S.R. and Iran and to the south by Iraq and Syria. The small European part of the country abuts on Greece and Bulgaria. In the Asian interior the climate is one of great extremes. On the Mediterranean coast it is more equable with mild winters and warm summers. The language is Turkish, Kurdish and Arabic being spoken along the frontiers of Iraq and Syria. Islam is the religion of 98.2 per cent of the population. The flag consists of a white crescent and star on a red background. The capital is Ankara.

Recent History

During the post-war years Turkey has aligned herself firmly with the West, joining the Council of Europe, NATO and CENTO (Central Treaty Organisation). Turkish troops fought with great courage in the Korean war. In 1960 the government was overthrown by a coup d'état and the administration taken over by a military junta. The Prime Minister, the Foreign Minister and the Minister of Finance were found guilty of violating the Constitution and were executed. In 1961 a new constitution was adopted and the restoration of civil power began. In September 1963 Turkey concluded an Agreement of Association with the European Economic Community (the Common Market). In 1964 the Cyprus crisis encouraged a reassessment of foreign policies. Elections in 1965 returned a Justice Party Government led by Süleyman Demirel.

Government

Turkey is a Democratic Republic, with elections by universal suffrage held normally every four years. The President, as Head of State, is elected by the Grand National Assembly for seven years. The President appoints the Prime Minister, giving full consideration to the Party with the majority. The Prime Minister appoints the Council of Ministers. The President has the power of veto but can be over-ruled by a majority decision of the Assembly.

Defence

Military service in the army lasts for two years and for three years in the navy. Armed Forces number about 370,000 and total mobilisation could produce an estimated two million.

Economic Affairs

Turkey is predominantly an agricultural country but much of the land is mountainous and uncultivable. Wheat is the chief grain crop. Barley, rye, oats and rice, figs and nuts are also grown. Turkey is the world's second largest producer of sultana raisins. Excellent tobacco is grown on the Aegean coast and in the Marmara-Thrace region. Cotton is grown in the rich Cilician Plain (Çukurova). There are deposits of iron ore, coal, chrome and copper. Oil wells in the south-east produce 400,000 tons of crude oil a year. The chief industries are iron and steel, textiles, sugar and cement.

Transport and Communications

The length of railway tracks is 8,000 kilometres. A rail link with Iran is under construction with CENTO funds. All-weather roads cover 42,000 kilometres. The Turkish State Seaways, a state corporation, operates passenger and cargo lines with a fleet of 66 ships of 314,000 tons. Turkish Airlines have an internal air service and flights to Athens, Beirut, London, Frankfurt, Munich and Rome.

Social Welfare

Social insurance for wage-earners is provided by the Workers' Social Institution of the Ministry of Labour.

Education

There is compulsory free education between the ages of 7 and 12. Secondary education lasts six years and is given free in state schools. There are seven universities.

Tourism

The ancient city of Istanbul (Constantinople) on the Bosphorus with its vast historic mosques is the chief tourist attraction of Turkey. Visitors also go to see Izmir on the Aegean and the old towns of Konya and Bursa. Turkey has many ancient sites including Troy (near Çanakkale) and Boğazköy, the ancient Hittite capital. Tourism is being stimulated by the Government, and in 1963 much of the eastern part of the country was opened to tourists for the first time since the war.

Visas are not required by nationals of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, German Federal Republic, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Monaco, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom and Commonwealth, and United States.

Sport

Wrestling is a much practised sport and football is the most popular team game.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), April 23 (National Sovereignty Day), May 1 (Spring Day), May 19 (Youth and Sports Day), May 27 (Revolution Day), August 30 (Victory Day), October 29-30 (Republic Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The monetary unit is the Turkish Pound (£T), divided into 100 kuruş.

Notes: £T 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 10, 5, 2.5.

Coins: £T 10, 2.5, 1; Kuruş 50, 25, 10, 5, 2.5, 1.

THE CONSTITUTION

PREAMBLE

Having enjoyed freedom, and fought for her rights and liberties throughout her history, and having achieved the Revolution of May 27th, 1960, by exercising her right to resist the oppression of a political power which had deteriorated into a state of illegitimacy through behaviour and actions contrary to the rule of law and the Constitution, the Turkish Nation, prompted and inspired by the spirit of Turkish nationalism, which unites all individuals, be it in fate, pride or distress, in a common bond as an indivisible whole around national consciousness and aspirations, and which has as its aim always to exalt our nation in a spirit of national unity as a respected member of the community of the world of nations enjoying equal rights and privileges;

With full dedication to the principle of peace at home, peace in the world and with full dedication to the spirit of national independence and sovereignty and to the reforms of Atatürk;

Guided by the desire to establish a democratic rule of law based on juridical and social foundations, which will ensure and guarantee human rights and liberties, national solidarity, social justice, and the welfare and prosperity of the individual and society;

Now, therefore, the Turkish Nation hereby enacts and proclaims this Constitution drafted by the Constituent Assembly of the Turkish Republic, and entrusts it to the vigilance of her sons and daughters who are devoted to the concept of freedom, justice and integrity, with the conviction that its basic guarantee lies in the hearts and minds of her citizens.

PART ONE

Articles 1-9

The Turkish Republic is a nationalistic, democratic, secular and social State governed by the rule of law, based on human rights.

The Turkish State is an indivisible whole comprising the territory and people. Its official language is Turkish. Its capital is the city of Ankara.

Sovereignty is vested in the nation without reservation and condition. Legislative power is vested in the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

This power shall not be delegated.

The executive function shall be carried out by the President of the Republic and the Council of Ministers within the framework of law.

Judicial power shall be exercised by independent courts on behalf of the Turkish Nation.

Laws shall not be in conflict with the Constitution.

The provision of the Constitution establishing the form of the State as a republic shall not be amended.

PART TWO

Articles 10-62

Every individual is entitled, in virtue of his existence as a human being, to fundamental rights and freedoms, which cannot be usurped, transferred or relinquished.

All individuals are equal before the law irrespective of language, race, sex, political opinion, philosophical views, or religion or religious sect.

Status of aliens, personal immunities, freedom of communication, travel, residence, thought, belief, press and publications.

Right to controvert and rebut, to congregate, demonstrate and form associations.

Protection of individual rights.

PART THREE

Articles 63-66 Grand National Assembly

The Grand National Assembly of Turkey is composed of the National Assembly and the Senate of the Republic.

The two bodies meet in joint session in such instances as are provided in the Constitution.

TURKEY—(THE CONSTITUTION)

The Grand National Assembly is empowered to enact, amend and repeal laws, to debate and adopt the bills on the State budget and final accounts, to pass resolutions in regard to minting currency, proclaiming pardons and amnesties, and to the carrying out of definitive death sentences passed by courts.

Articles 67-69. National Assembly

The National Assembly is composed of 450 deputies elected by direct general ballot. Election qualifications: elections shall be held every four years. The Assembly may hold new elections before the end of the four-year period.

Articles 70-73. The Senate

The Senate of the Republic is composed of 150 members elected by general ballot and 15 members appointed by the President of the Republic. Election qualifications: term of office is six years, one-third of members shall be rotated every two years.

Articles 74-94. Elections, Members, Debates, Laws, Expenditure

Articles 95-101. The President of the Republic

The President of the Turkish Republic shall be elected for a term of seven years from among those members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly who have completed their fortieth year and received higher education; election shall be by secret ballot, and by a two-thirds majority of the plenary session. In case this majority is not obtained in the first two ballots, an absolute majority shall suffice.

The President is not eligible for re-election.

The President elect shall dissociate himself from his party, and his status as a regular member of the Grand National Assembly shall be terminated.

The President of the Republic is the head of the State. In this capacity he shall represent the Turkish Republic and the integrity of the Turkish Nation.

The President of the Republic shall preside over the Council of Ministers whenever he deems it necessary, shall dispatch the representatives of the Turkish State to foreign states, shall receive the representatives of foreign states, shall ratify and promulgate international conventions and treaties and may commute or pardon on grounds of chronic illness, infirmity or old age the sentences of convicted individuals.

The President of the Republic shall not be accountable for his actions connected with his duties.

All decrees emanating from the President of the Republic shall be signed by the Prime Minister, and the relevant Ministers. The Prime Minister and the Ministers concerned shall be responsible for the enforcement of these decrees.

The President of the Republic may be impeached for high treason upon the proposal of one-third of the plenary session of the Turkish Grand National Assembly, and conviction of high treason shall require the vote of at least a two-thirds majority of the joint plenary session of both legislative bodies.

Articles 102-109 The Council of Ministers

The Council of Ministers shall consist of the Prime Minister and the Ministers.

The Prime Minister shall be designated by the President of the Republic from among the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

The Ministers shall be nominated by the Prime Minister, and appointed by the President of the Republic from among the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly, or from among those qualified for election as deputies.

As head of the Council of Ministers, the Prime Minister promotes co-operation among the Ministries, and supervises the implementation of the Government's general policy. The members of the Council of Ministers are jointly and equally responsible for the manner in which this policy is implemented.

Each Minister shall be further responsible for the operations in his field of authority and for the acts and activities of his subordinates. The Ministers are subject to the same immunities and liabilities as the members of the Turkish Grand National Assembly.

Articles 110-111. National Defence

The office of the Commander-in-Chief is integrated in spirit in the Turkish Grand National Assembly and is represented by the President of the Republic.

The Council of Ministers shall be responsible to the Turkish Grand National Assembly for ensuring national security and preparing the armed forces for war.

The Chief of the General Staff is the Commander of the armed forces.

The Chief of the General Staff shall be appointed by the President of the Republic upon his nomination by the Council of Ministers, and his duties and powers shall be regulated by law. The Chief of the General Staff is responsible to the Prime Minister in the exercise of his duties and powers.

The National Security Council shall consist of the Ministers as provided by law, the Chief of the General Staff, and representatives of the armed forces.

The President of the Republic shall preside over the National Security Council, and in his absence this function shall be discharged by the Prime Minister.

Articles 112-125. Administration

Articles 126-131. Economic and Fiscal Provisions

The budget, accounts, development projects, natural resources.

Articles 132-136. The Judiciary

Judges shall be independent in the discharge of their duties. They shall pass judgment in accordance with the Constitution, law, justice and their personal convictions.

No organ, office, agency or individual may give orders or instructions to courts or judges in connection with the discharge of their judicial duty, send them circulars or make recommendations or suggestions.

No questions may be raised, debates held, or statements issued in legislative bodies in connection with the discharge of judicial power concerning a case on trial. Legislative, executive organs, and the administration are under obligation to comply with ruling of the courts. Such organs and the administration shall in no manner whatsoever alter court rulings or delay their execution.

Article 137. The Public Prosecutor

Article 138. Military Trial

Article 139. Court of Cassation

The Court of Cassation is the court of the last instance for reviewing the decisions and verdicts rendered by courts of law. It has original and final jurisdiction in specific cases defined by law.

Article 140. Council of State

The Council of State is an administrative court of the first instance in matters not referred by law to other administrative courts, and an administrative court of the last instance in general.

The Council of State shall hear and settle administrative disputes and suits, shall express opinions on draft laws submitted by the Council of Ministers, shall examine draft regulations, specifications and contracts of concessions, and shall discharge such other duties as prescribed by law.

Article 141. Military Court of Cassation

The Military Court of Cassation is a court of the last instance to review decisions and verdicts rendered by military courts. Furthermore, it shall try specific cases as a court of the first and last instance involving military matters as prescribed by law.

POLITICAL PARTIES

Political party activity, which was banned after the revolution of May 1960, was once more permitted in January, 1961

Justice Party (A.P.): Ankara; f. 1961; Leader SÜLEYMAN DEMİREL; Sec.-Gen. SİNASI OSMAN; inherited much support from the former Democratic Party; supports private enterprise.

Republican People's Party (C.H.P.): Ankara; f. 1923 by Kemal Atatürk; Leader İSMET İNÖNÜ; Sec.-Gen. İSMAIL AKSAL. For many years the Republican People's Party was the only party in Turkey. It favours a considerable degree of State enterprise along with continuing private enterprise.

National Party (M.P.): Ankara; f. 1962; Leader OSMAN BÖLÜKBAŞI. A faction of the Republican National Peasants' Party with one seat in the Senate. Traditional and religious in character.

New Turkey Party (Y.T.P.): Ankara; f. 1961; Leader FAHRETTİN KERİM GÖKAY.

Turkish Workers' Party (T.I.P.): Ankara; left-wing, two seats in the Senate in 1964; Leader MEHMET ALİ AYBAR; Sec.-Gen. RIZA KUAS.

Republican National Peasants' Party (C.K.M.P.): Ankara; f. 1948; Leader Col. ALPASLAN TÜRKES. Traditional and religious in character.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Until the foundation of the new Turkish Republic, a large part of the Turkish civil law—the laws affecting the family, inheritance, property, obligations, etc.—was based on the Koran, and this holy law was administered by special religious (Sharia) courts. The legal reform of 1926 was not only a process of secularisation, but also a root-and-branch change of the legal system. The Swiss Civil Code and the Code of Obligation, the Italian Penal Code, and the Neuchâtel (Cantonal) Code of Civil Procedure were adopted and modified to fit Turkish customs and traditions.

Court of Cassation: The court of the last instance for reviewing the decisions and verdicts rendered by courts of law. It has original and final jurisdiction in specific cases defined by law. Members are elected by the Supreme Council of Judges.

Council of State: An administrative court of the first instance in matters not referred by law to other administrative courts, and an administrative court of the last instance in general. Hears and settles administrative disputes and expresses opinions on draft laws submitted by the Council of Ministers.

Military Court of Cassation: A court of the last instance to review decisions and verdicts rendered by military courts.

Court of Jurisdictional Disputes: Settles disputes among civil, administrative and military courts arising from disagreements on jurisdictional matters and verdicts

Supreme Council of Judges: Consists of eighteen regular and five alternate members. Decides all personnel matters relating to judges.

Constitutional Court: Consists of fifteen regular and five alternate members. Reviews the constitutionality of laws passed by the Turkish Grand National Assembly. Sits as a High Council empowered to try senior members of state. The rulings of the Constitutional Court are final. Decisions of the Court are published immediately in the Official Gazette, and shall be binding on the legislative, executive, and judicial organs of the State.

Public Prosecutor: The law shall make provision for the tenure of public prosecutors and attorneys of the Council of State and their functions.

The Chief Prosecutor of the Republic, the Chief Attorney of the Council of State and the Chief Prosecutor of the Military Court of Cassation are subject to the provisions applicable to judges of higher courts.

Military Trial: Military trials conducted by military and disciplinary courts. These courts are entitled to try the military offences of military personnel and those offences committed against military personnel or in military areas, or offences connected with military service and duties. Military courts may try non-military persons only for military offences prescribed by special laws.

Independence of Courts: Judges shall be independent in the discharge of their duties. They shall pass judgment in accordance with the Constitution, law, justice and their personal convictions. No organ, office, agency or individual may give orders or instructions to courts or judges in connection with the discharge of their judicial duty, send them circulars, or make recommendations or suggestions.

No questions may be raised, debates held, or statements issued in legislative bodies in connection with the discharge of judicial power concerning a case on trial. Legislative, executive organs, and the administration are under obligation to comply with ruling of the courts. Such organs and the administration shall in no manner whatsoever alter court rulings or delay their execution.

RELIGION

MUSLIMS

Diyanet İşleri Relsi (Head of the Muslim Faith in Turkey): TEVFIK GERÇEKER.

Over 98 per cent of the Turkish people are Muslims, mainly of the Sunni rite. Under the Republic, from 1923 onwards, action was taken to reduce the influence of religion on state affairs e.g., its association with the schools was curtailed, mosques and churches were sometimes closed and facilities denied to their adherents, both Muslim and Christian. After 1950 there was a change, and religious life was to a certain extent revived. The 1960 revolution is trying to bring about a return to the more secular republic of Atatürk.

NON-MUSLIMS

Mainly Greek Orthodox, Armenian Christians and Jews.

The total length of the railways operated within the national frontiers is 8,008 km. A five-year plan for modernising the railway system came into force in January 1963.

Extensive dieselisation is to take place. The line from Haydarpaşa to Arıfıyca is to be doubled and electrified.

A recent Central Treaty Organisation agreement between Turkey and Iran provides for the linking of the two railway networks by the construction of a railroad from Muş to Tabriz, via Tatvan, Van and Kotor. Ninety-eight km. of track from Muş to Tabriz have been completed. Work continues (1966) on the remaining 120 km. of track from Van to Kotor at the frontier and should be completed in 1968

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

The Soviet Union extends for over 6,000 miles from the Baltic to the Pacific Ocean, and for 3,000 miles from north to south. It is the largest country in the world. Its western frontier, running from the Arctic Ocean in the north to the Black Sea in the south, is bordered by Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania. The southern frontier, running from west to east, is bordered by Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, China, Mongolia and Korea. The climate of this area is continental and has extreme variations. In winter, temperatures can fall to -94 F (-70 C) in north-east Siberia, and in summer it can reach 122 F (50 C) in Central Asia, part of which is desert. 120 languages are spoken in the U.S.S.R.; Russian, the most widespread, is spoken by 130 million people. There is no state-recognised religion, but the Constitution guarantees freedom of worship. The Russian Orthodox faith is the traditional belief of Russians and there are other Christian and also Jewish and Muslim communities. The flag is red with a gold hammer and sickle surmounted by a gold star in the upper left part. The capital is Moscow.

Recent History

The Soviet Union suffered great losses of men and material in the Second World War. After the Potsdam Agreement, signed between the Western Allies and the Soviet Union in 1945, Eastern Europe became a Soviet sphere of influence. Governments based on the Soviet pattern came to power in Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia. Under Stalin's leadership the country pursued a centralised form of government at home, but after Stalin's death in 1953 there followed a period of gradual liberalisation. The economy was decentralised and freer expression allowed.

Since the Second World War the Soviet economy has been rebuilt, living standards have improved and the country has become a leading scientific and nuclear power. In 1957 the U.S.S.R. launched the world's first space satellite following it in 1961 with the first manned space flight. In 1963 the first space flight by a woman was achieved by a Soviet astronaut, and in 1964 the manoeuvrable satellite Voskhod-1 was successfully flown with three cosmonauts aboard. In 1965 Voskhod-2 was flown with two cosmonauts and one of them was the first to leave the satellite and go into space. In 1966 Luna-9 made the first successful soft landing on the Moon.

In 1964 Nikita Khrushchev was replaced as Chairman of the Council of Ministers by A. N. Kosygin and as Secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee by L. I. Brezhnev.

Government

The Soviet Union consists of 15 Union Republics which include within their boundaries 20 Autonomous Republics, 8 Autonomous Regions, 10 National Districts, 9 Areas and 105 Regions. The Union's highest organ of state power is the Supreme Soviet, composed of the Council of the Union and the Council of Nationalities. The two Chambers have equal rights and may both initiate legislation. The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet is elected by a session of both Chambers and carries out state duties between sessions of the Supreme Soviet. All citizens over 18 have the vote. The highest executive organ is the Council of Ministers appointed by the Supreme Soviet. Each Republic and Autonomous Republic has its own Supreme Soviet and Council of Ministers. The Communist Party, with twelve million members, plays a leading rôle in government and is a substantial policy-making body. The supreme organ of the Party is Congress which lays down policy and elects the Central Committee. Between Congresses the Central Committee directs Party work, elects the Party Presidium and meets periodically to discuss ad hoc policy and to vote on any matter disputed in the Presidium. The Party works in close conjunction with the Government at all levels. Each Republic has its own Party, Presidium and Central Committee.

Defence

The Soviet Union is a nuclear power armed with long-range rockets and is a member of The Warsaw Pact Alliance. Armed Forces strength in November 1965 was estimated at 3,150,000, comprising Army 2,000,000, Navy 450,000, Air Force 510,000, Para-military forces 230,000. Military service is compulsory and lasts a minimum of one year. In the 1965 budget a reduction of 500 million roubles was made in defence expenditure.

Economic Affairs

The economy is centrally planned, based on public ownership and fits into the framework of a development plan. The country is divided into economic regions, each substantially responsible for its own activities. The Supreme Council for the National Economy is the central co-ordinating body. Heavy industry accounts for more than two-thirds of total industrial production. There are extensive deposits of iron ore, oil, peat, natural gas and coal. Production of non-ferrous metals includes aluminium, nickel, manganese, lead, copper and zinc. More than 500 million tons of coal are mined annually. The coal basins of the Donets near the Black Sea, Kuznetsk in Siberia and Karaganda in Kazakhstan are the main sources. Annual oil production chiefly from the Caucasian Republic of Azerbaijan, the Western Urals and the Volga region.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

exceeds 240 million tons. The country is the second greatest producer of electrical power. One half of the total land area is forest, two-thirds of it in Siberia and the Far East. Timber production is over 270 million cubic metres annually. The textile and consumer goods industry have been greatly increased in recent years. The Soviet Union has large-scale mechanised agriculture with two main types of farm. The collective farms work slightly more than half of the cultivable land and distribute profits to members. The state farms are owned and operated by the state, the employees receiving a wage. There are about 37,600 collective farms working on an area of approximately 242 million hectares and 10,000 state farms with a working area of 283 million hectares. The development of the Central Asian Virgin Lands has significantly increased production. The chief grain crops are wheat, rye, oats and maize. Other crops are sugar beet, hemp, cotton and oil seeds. Trade inside the U.S.S.R. is conducted by state trading establishments, consumers' co-operatives and collective farm markets. Foreign trade is a State monopoly and carried out mainly with the countries of Eastern Europe through the Council for Mutual Economic Aid (COMECON).

Transport and Communications

Railway tracks cover 80,438 miles and carry most goods and passenger traffic. There are 91,340 miles of inland waterways and 827,663 miles of roads. Canals navigable by large vessels link the White Sea with the Baltic through the river Volga and the rivers Moscow and Don with the Caspian, Azov and Black Seas. The Soviet fleet of ocean vessels totals over eight million tons. There are 27 major ports, the most important being Leningrad, Arkhangelsk, Riga, Murmansk, Odessa, Baku and Vladivostok. Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, maintains internal and external services.

Social Welfare

The Social Insurance Fund is administered by the Trade Unions and financed by industry. The unions also provide holiday camps and sanatoria and charge only nominal fees. Apart from a complete range of social security benefits, half pay pensions are paid to retired men at 60 and women at 55. Medical treatment is free.

Education

There is compulsory free education for eight years. Young workers can continue their studies for three years by attending night school or day-release classes. Specialized secondary and higher schools give both practical and theoretical training. The total number of students in 1964-65 was 68.4 million, with 46.7 million in 218,364 secondary schools, 1.6 million in technical schools, 3.3 million in secondary specialized schools and 3.6 million in universities and colleges. Boarding schools, first set up in 1956, are being increased in number. There are 42 universities.

Tourism

National tourism is organised by the Trade Unions. The state organisation Intourist assists foreign tourists in the U.S.S.R. and Soviet tourists going abroad. Favourite visiting places are Moscow, Kiev, Leningrad, Odessa, the Black Sea and Baltic resorts, the Urals and Altai mountains, and the ancient cities of Samarkand and Bukhara in central Asia.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter the U.S.S.R.: Bulgaria, China (People's Republic), Czechoslovakia, Germany (Democratic Republic), Iran, Korea (People's Republic), Mongolia, Poland, Rumania, Vietnam (Democratic Republic).

Sport

Physical culture and sport are cultivated on a mass scale. There are more than 175,000 organisations with a total membership of about 40 million. General guidance is given by the Union of Sports Societies, the Trade Unions and the Young Communists' League. Soviet sportsmen won 11 gold medals at the 1964 Winter Olympic Games and 30 gold medals at the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo. Football and ice hockey are the most popular games.

Public Holidays

The chief public holidays are: January 1 (New Year's Day), March 8 (International Women's Day), May 1 and 2 (May Day Celebrations), May 9 (Victory Day), November 7 and 8 (October Revolution), December 5 (Soviet Constitution Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The monetary unit is the Rouble divided into 100 Kopecks.

Notes: Roubles 100, 50, 25, 10, 5, 3, 1.

Coins: Roubles 1; Kopecks 50, 20, 15, 10, 5, 3, 2, 1.

Exchange rate: 2.52 Roubles = £1 sterling
90 Kopecks = $1 U.S.

THE CONSTITUTION

THE UNION

THE first Constitution of the Soviet State was the Constitution of the R.S.F.S.R. adopted by the V All-Russia Congress of Soviets in July, 1918. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was formally proclaimed at the X Congress of Soviets in Moscow in December, 1922, and in January, 1924, the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. was inaugurated. The acting Constitution was submitted by the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. to the All-Union Congress of Soviets on December 5th, 1936, and approved by that body. Since then the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. has approved a number of amendments to the Constitution.

The U.S.S.R. is a socialist state of workers and peasants. Its political foundations are the Soviets of Workers' Deputies—the organs of power of the working people in the cities and villages. Its economic foundation is a "socialist system of economy and the socialist ownership of the instruments and means of production". Socialist property in the U.S.S.R. exists in the form of State property (belonging to the whole people) or in the form of co-operative and collective property (property of co-operative societies and of collective farms). There is provision for private ownership of personal property and "the small private economy of individual peasants and handicraftsmen based on their own labour and precluding the exploitation of the labour of others". Article 12 of the Constitution declares the principle applied in the U.S.S.R. to be that of socialism: "from each according to his ability, to each according to his work".

The U.S.S.R. is a federal state, formed on the basis of a voluntary union of the following Soviet Socialist Republics, possessing equal rights: the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic, the Ukrainian, Byelorussian, Uzbek, Kazakh, Georgian, Azerbaijanian, Lithuanian, Moldavian, Latvian, Kirghiz, Tadzhik, Armenian, Turkmen and Estonian Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Union, as represented by its higher organs of administration, has charge of international relations, questions of war and peace, admission of new States into the U.S.S.R., and control over the observance of the Constitution. It also confirms the alteration of boundaries between the Union Republics, the formation of new Autonomous Republics and Autonomous Regions within the Union Republics (see below).

Also within its jurisdiction is the organisation of defence, the organisation of foreign trade on a basis of State monopoly, the safeguarding of the security of the U.S.S.R., the approval of the consolidated State Budget, the administration of the banks, and transport and communications, the direction of the monetary and credit systems, the organisation of State insurance, the contracting and granting of loans, the determination of the basic principles of land tenure and of the basic principles in the spheres of education and of public health, the organisation of a uniform system of national-economic statistics, and the issuing of all-Union acts of amnesty. In the field of legislation it determines the principles of labour legislation, of legislation concerning the judicial system and judicial procedure, concerning Union citizenship and the rights of foreigners, and concerning marriage and the family.

THE SUPREME SOVIET OF THE U.S.S.R.

The Supreme Soviet is the highest organ of State power in the U.S.S.R. It alone exercises legislative power in the Union. It consists of two Chambers: the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities. The Soviet of the Union is elected by all the citizens of the U.S.S.R. on the basis of one deputy for every 300,000 of the population, and is elected for a term of four years. The Soviet of Nationalities is elected by the citizens voting by Union Republics, Autonomous Republics, Autonomous Regions, and National Areas on the basis of 25 deputies from each Union Republic, 11 deputies from each Autonomous Republic, 5 deputies from each Autonomous Region, and 1 deputy from each National Area. The Soviet of the Union has at present 791 members and the Soviet of Nationalities 652 members.

Chambers of the Supreme Soviet. The two Chambers have equal rights, and both have the right to initiate legislation. A law is considered adopted if passed by simple majority of both Chambers. Each Chamber elects a number of standing committees, viz.: Soviet of the Union: Budget, Mandate, Legislation and Foreign Affairs; Soviet of Nationalities: Budget, Mandate, Legislation, Economic and Foreign Affairs. The Commissions meet between sessions of the Supreme Soviet, report to sessions and make recommendations to the Presidium.

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet is elected at a joint sitting of the two Chambers. It consists of a Chairman, 15 Vice-Chairmen (one for each of the Union Republics), a Secretary, and 16 members. It is accountable to the Supreme Soviet for all its activities.

The Presidium convenes the sessions of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., issues decrees, interprets the laws of the U.S.S.R. in operation, dissolves the Supreme Soviet in the event of disagreement between the two Chambers, conducts nation-wide polls on its own initiative or on the request of one of the Union Republics, annuls decisions of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. or of the Union Republics if they do not conform to law, institutes and awards decorations and titles of honour, exercises the right of pardon, institutes military titles, diplomatic ranks, and other special titles, appoints and removes the high command of the armed forces, orders general or partial mobilisation, ratifies and denounces international treaties, appoints and recalls plenipotentiary representatives to foreign states, receives letters of credence and recall of diplomatic representatives accredited to it by foreign states, proclaims martial law in separate localities or throughout the U.S.S.R.

A Supreme Soviet Deputy cannot be put on trial or arrested without the approval of the Supreme Soviet or of the Presidium, between sessions. There are provisions for the premature recall of any deputy by a majority decision of his electors if he has broken the trust of his constituents or whose behaviour has not been worthy of the high calling of his office. In the intervals between sessions of the Supreme Soviet, the Presidium releases and appoints Ministers on the recommendation of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers and subject to subsequent confirmation by the Supreme Soviet, and proclaims a state of war in the event of military attack on the U.S.S.R. or when necessary to fulfil treaty obligations concerning mutual defence against aggression.

THE COUNCIL OF MINISTERS OF THE U.S.S.R.

The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. is the highest executive and administrative organ of State power. It is appointed by the Supreme Soviet and includes the following officials: the Chairman of the Council of Ministers, the Vice-Chairmen of the Council of Ministers, the Ministers of the U.S.S.R., the Chairmen of State Commissions and Committees, the Chairman of the Board of the State Bank, the Head of the Central Statistical Administration and the Chairmen of the Councils of Ministers of Union Republics.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS—(THE CONSTITUTION)

Ministries may be All-Union or Union-Republican. The former deal with matters that concern the U.S.S.R. as a whole. They direct branches of the national economy that are of All-Union importance and call for central administration covering the whole territory of the U.S.S.R. (e.g. railways) Union-Republic ministries direct those branches of the national economy and of State administration of all-Union importance which are best directed from the centre through corresponding ministries in each of the Union Republics (e.g. higher education, defence, health).

The Council of Ministers is responsible to the Supreme Soviet, or, in the intervals between sessions, to the Presidium.

It issues decrees and orders, binding throughout the U.S.S.R., in pursuance of the laws in operation, and verifies their execution. The Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. has the right, in respect of those branches of administration and economy which come within the jurisdiction of the U.S.S.R., to suspend decisions of the Councils of Ministers of Union Republics and to annul orders and instructions of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.

THE UNION REPUBLICS

The sovereignty of the 15 Union Republics is restricted only within the above-mentioned limits. Each Republic has its own Constitution, which takes into account the specific features of the Republic, but is drawn up in conformity with that of the Union. Each Republic has the right of free secession from the Union, and its territories may not be altered without its consent. It has the right to enter into direct relations with foreign states and to conclude agreements and to exchange diplomatic and consular representatives with them (The Byelorussian and Ukrainian S.S.R.s are members of the United Nations and its subsidiary organisations). It also has its own military formations. The laws of the U.S.S.R. have the same force within the territory of every Union Republic, and in the event of divergence between the law of a Union Republic and a law of the Union, the Union law prevails. Uniform Union citizenship is established for citizens of the U.S.S.R.

The Supreme Soviet of the Union Republic is the highest organ in a Union Republic. It is elected by the citizens of the Republic for a term of four years, on a basis of representation established by the Constitution of the Union Republic, and is the sole legislative organ of the Republic. It elects a Presidium and forms a Council of Ministers. This consists of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Union Republic; First Deputy Chairmen of the Council of Ministers; Deputy Chairmen of the Council of Ministers; Chairman of the State Planning Commission; Chairmen of the State Committees of the Council of Ministers of the Union Republic.

The Councils of Ministers of Union Republics have the right to suspend resolutions and decrees of the Council of Ministers of Autonomous Republics within their jurisdiction, to set aside decisions and decrees of the executive committees of Soviets of Workers' Deputies of territories, regions and autonomous regions.

The Ministries of Union Republics may be Union-Republican or Republican. Union-Republican ministries manage the branch of State administration entrusted to them, and are subordinate both to the Council of Ministers of the Union Republic and to the corresponding Union-Republican ministry of the U.S.S.R. Republican ministries manage the branch of State administration entrusted to them, and are subordinate directly to the Council of Ministers of the Union Republic.

THE AUTONOMOUS REPUBLICS

There are 20 Autonomous Republics each forming a constituent part of a Union Republic and through it of the Soviet Union. (See table of Autonomous Republics in the Statistical Survey.) Each Autonomous Republic has its own Constitution drawn up in conformity with the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. and of the Union Republic of which it forms part.

The Autonomous Republics have self-government in domestic affairs, enact laws applicable to their territories, have their own Supreme Soviets and Councils of Ministers and direct representation to the All-Union Supreme Soviet.

The frontiers of the Autonomous Republics are determined by the Supreme Soviet of its Union Republic.

THE AUTONOMOUS REGIONS

There are eight Autonomous Regions distinguished by racial and linguistic features (See table of Autonomous Regions in the Statistical Survey.) The Autonomous Regions exist side by side with the ordinary administrative regions of a Union Republic but enjoy additional rights. The Soviet of Workers' Deputies of an Autonomous Region adopts statutes taking into account the Region's special features. The Supreme Soviet of its Union Republic approves the statutes.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The organs of state power in Territories, Regions, Districts, Areas, Towns and Villages are the Soviets of Workers' Deputies.

THE U.S.S.R. ELECTORAL SYSTEM

Members of all Soviets of Workers' Deputies, of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., and the Supreme Soviets of the Union Republics and the Autonomous Republics are elected on the basis of universal, equal, and direct suffrage by secret ballot. All citizens of eighteen years of age and over have the right to vote, with the exception of the insane and persons deprived of electoral rights by sentence of court. Candidates are nominated in electoral districts. The right to nominate candidates is granted to public organisations and societies of the working people, Communist Party organisations, trade unions, co-operative societies, youth organisations, and cultural societies.

Every citizen of the U.S.S.R., who has reached the age of twenty-three is eligible for election to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R.

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES

Citizens of the U.S.S.R. are guaranteed the following fundamental rights: the right to guaranteed employment, ensured by the socialist organisation of the national economy and the abolition of unemployment, the right to rest and leisure, ensured by the standard working day of seven hours (six and even four hours for some professions), the institution of annual holidays with pay, and the provision of a wide network of sanatoria, rest-homes and clubs for the working people; the right to maintenance in old age and in the case of sickness or disability, ensured by social insurance at State expense, free medical service and a wide network of health resorts at the disposal of the workers; the right to free education, ensured by universal,

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS—(THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

compulsory elementary and eight-grade secondary education; equal rights for women and men, ensured by affording women equally with men the right to work, rest and leisure, social insurance and education, women benefiting from State protection for the interests of mother and child, pregnancy leave with pay, and the provision of maternity homes, nurseries and kindergartens; equality of rights for all citizens, irrespective of nationality or race, ensured by legal penalty for restriction of these rights and for propagation of race-hatred; freedom of religious worship and freedom of anti-religious propaganda; freedom of speech, of the press, of assembly, and of demonstrations; the right to unite in public organisations, trade unions, co-operative, youth, sport, and defence organisations, cultural, technical and scientific societies, and in the Communist Party, as the core of all organisations of the working people; inviolability of person except by due process of law.

The right of asylum is granted to foreign citizens persecuted for defending the interests of the working people, for their scientific activities or for their struggle for national liberation.

It is proclaimed the duty of every citizen to observe the Constitution and the law, to maintain labour discipline, honestly to perform public duties, to respect the rules of socialist intercourse, to safeguard public, socialist property, and to defend the U.S.S.R. against foreign aggression. Universal military service is obligatory.

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION

The Constitution may be amended only by decision of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R., adopted by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the votes cast in each of its Chambers.

THE COMMUNIST PARTY

The Communist Party was founded in 1903 by V. I. Lenin following a split in the Russian Social Democratic Labour Party at its London Congress into Bolsheviks (Majority) and Mensheviks (Minority). After the October Socialist Revolution (1917) it became the Russian Communist Party. In 1925 following the creation of the U.S.S.R., the All-Union Communist Party of Bolsheviks was formed, uniting various Communist Parties of the Republics of the U.S.S.R. Since 1952 this has been called the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

The supreme organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is the Party Congress which is convened by the Central Committee at least every four years. Congress elects the Central Committee which is in charge of Party work between Congresses. The Central Committee elects the All-Union Presidium and Secretariat and the Bureau of the Central Committee for the R.S.F.S.R. (the largest of the U.S.S.R.'s 15 Union Republics).

Party organisation throughout the Soviet Union follows the country's territorial divisions in the Republics. Each Territory, Region and District has a Party Committee representing all its Branches. The Branch is the basic unit, usually embracing all the Party members in a factory, farm or other sizeable institution or group of institutions. The branch might comprise all the members of a profession (e.g. writers) in a territory. Each Branch has a committee to lead its work and large Branches usually have full-time secretaries.

Party members are accepted on an individual basis only. Membership is confined to working people accepting the Programme and Charter of the Party, paying Party dues and working in one of the Party organisations. A period of candidature is demanded before admission. In 1965 there were more than 12 million members and candidate members.

The Presidium

Members: LEONID BREZHNEV, ALEXEI KOSYGIN, ANASTAS MIKOYAN, NIKOLAI PODGORNYY, DMITRI POLYANSKY, NIKOLAI SHVERNIK, MIKHAIL SISLOV, GENNADY VORONOV, ANDREI KIRILENKO, KIRILL MAZUROV, ALEXANDR SHELEPIN, PYOTR SHELEST.

These Courts are elected by the Soviets of Working People's Deputies for a term of five years. They hear cases of crimes against the State, disputes between state and public organisations and appeals from People's Courts.

PEOPLE'S COURTS

In every town and district are courts elected by the citizens of the district for a term of five years. These Courts hear most of the civil and criminal cases in the U.S.S.R., and they are the basic link in the legal system of the U.S.S.R. Judgment in all the courts is carried out by a board including a judge and 2 people's assessors who have all the rights of a judge.

OFFICE OF THE PROCURATOR GENERAL

Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.: R. A. RUDENKO.

Supervision over the execution of the laws by all Ministries and institutions under them, by official persons, and by all citizens of the U.S.S.R., is exercised by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. He is appointed by the Supreme Soviet for a term of seven years. Procurators-General of the Union Republics, Autonomous Republics, and Autonomous Regions are appointed by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. for a term of five years. Area, district, and city procurators are appointed by the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R. for a term of five years. The Procurators' offices perform their functions independently of any local organs, and are subordinate solely to the Procurator-General of the U.S.S.R.

RELIGION

The Council for Religious Affairs: attached to the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R.; Chair. VLADIMIR KUROYEDOV.

Article 124 of the Fundamental Law (Constitution) of the U.S.S.R. says: "In order to ensure to citizens freedom of conscience, the Church in the U.S.S.R. is separated from the State, and the school from the Church. Freedom of religious worship and freedom of anti-religious propaganda are recognised for all citizens."

A religious sect is recognised when it consists of twenty or more adherents over the age of eighteen. Places of worship, seminaries and other requirements are provided and maintained by the voluntary contributions of the adherents themselves. A considerable number of new churches of various faiths have been built since the end of the war, and there are a number of religious seminaries for the training of priests in the varied religions practised in the U.S.S.R.

The existing religious cults are: The Russian Orthodox Church, the Georgian Orthodox Church, the Armenian Gregorian Church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the U.S.S.R. Council of Evangelical Christian Baptists, the Protestant Church, the Belokrinitsky Concord Church of the Old Faith, the Beglopovtshi Church of the Old Faith, the Bezpopovtshi Church of the Old Faith, the Methodist Church, the Reformed Church, the Molokani communities, the Moslem Religious Board of the European part of the U.S.S.R. and Siberia, the Moslem Religious Board of Central Asia and Kazakhstan, the Moslem Religious Board of North Caucasus and Dagestan, the Moslem Religious Board of Transcaucasia, the Jewish Religious Community and the Religious Board of the Buddhists of the U.S.S.R.

THE RUSSIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

The Russian Orthodox Church is the biggest single body among the religious cults, and the Moscow Patriarchate publishes its own monthly magazine.

Patriarch: ALEXIUS OF MOSCOW AND ALL-RUSSIA (elected 1945).

Holy Synod consists of eight members, five of whom are permanent—the Metropolitans of Krutitsky and Kolomna (PITIRIM), Kiev and Galica (IOANN) and Leningrad and Ladoga (PIMEN); The Chairman of the Department for Foreign Ecclesiastic Relations of the Patriarchy: Metropolitan NIKODIM and the Patriarchal Administrator: Archbishop KIPRIAN.

The Church is divided into 73 bishoprics, whose boundaries correspond to those of the territories and republics of the U.S.S.R. It also has three exarchates: West European, Middle European and American. It maintains a spiritual mission in Palestine and representatives in Austria and Hungary. There is a representative of the Alexandrian Orthodox Church in Odessa, and of the Antioch and Bulgarian Orthodox Churches in Moscow. The Church has approximately 20,000 parishes and a score of monasteries and convents. There are also two theological academies (the Moscow and Leningrad Academies) and five theological seminaries in Moscow, Leningrad, Lutsik, Minsk and Odessa.

THE GEORGIAN ORTHODOX CHURCH

Patriarch-Catholicos of All Georgia: EFREM II, Tbilisi, Georgian S.S.R.

MOSLEMS

Moslems make up the second largest religious community in the U.S.S.R. The majority are Sunnites with a small number of Shiites, mostly in Azerbaijan. They are divided into four boards, according to the geographical and historical conditions and the existence of different sects. The four Boards are located at Tashkent (Uzbek S.S.R.), Ufa (Bashkir A.S.S.R.), Baku (Azerbaijan S.S.R.) and Buinaksk (Daghestan A.S.S.R.). A theological school is maintained in Bukhara.

Chairman of the Moslem Board of Central Asia and Kazakhstan (the biggest single grouping of Moslems, with headquarters in Tashkent): MUFTI ZIYAUDDIN BABAKHANOV.

Chairman of Moslem Board of European Part of the U.S.S.R. and Siberia: MUFTI SHAKIR HIYALITDINOV.

Chairmen of Moslem Board for Transcaucasia: SHEIKH-UL-ISLAM KHAKIM ZADE SHEIKH MOVSUM SHEIKH ALI-OGLY.

Chairman of Moslem Board for North Caucasus and Dagestan: MUFTI MOHAMMED KHADJI KURBANOV.

ROMAN CATHOLICS

The Church has a large following in Lithuania, Latvia and W. Byelorussia and Ukraine. Archbishops: Riga (Latvia), Kaunas (Lithuania), Lvov (Ukraine).

ARMENIAN GREGORIAN CHURCH

Religious centre of the Armenian Gregorian Church in the U.S.S.R.—headed by the Supreme Patriarch VAZGEN I, Catholicos of All Armenians—is the ancient city of Echmiadzin. The Church has 26 bishoprics (20 outside the U.S.S.R.).

OLD BELIEVERS (THE OLD FAITH)

Divided into three branches: the Belokrinitsky Concord, under the Archbishop of Moscow and All-Russia, the Bezpopovtshi, and the Beglopovtshi.

EVANGELICAL CHRISTIAN BAPTIST CHURCH

There are religious communities in many regions of the Soviet Union and a religious centre in Moscow.

President: J. ZHIDKOV; P.O. Box 520, Moscow.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH

An episcopal church, with its greatest following in Latvia and Estonia.

Primate of Estonia: Archbishop KIIVIT.

Primate of Latvia: Archbishop TURIS.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

There are religious communities in a number of regions of the Soviet Union.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS—(RELIGION, THE PRESS)

JEWISH RELIGION

There is no united centre, but many communities exist in Moscow, Kiev, and other parts of the Ukrainian and Byelorussian Republics, particularly in Lvov and Minsk, as well as in the Jewish Autonomous Region (R S F S R), which has a preponderance of Jewish settlers

Rabbi of Moscow Central Synagogue: Rev. YEHUDA LEIB LEVINE

BUDDHISM

Is most widespread in the Buryat Autonomous Republic, where the Buddhist Religious Board has its seat, the Tuva Autonomous Republic and the Irkutsk and Chita Regions.

THE PRESS

The Press in the Soviet Union is not owned by private individuals. Various public or collective organisations, at different levels, own and publish newspapers and periodicals. They include the Communist Party, the central and local Soviets (district, city and rural councils), trade unions, co-operatives, ministries, planning organisations, cultural bodies, educational institutions, learned institutions of all kinds, and, finally, factories and collective farms

Ministry of Agriculture: Moscow; Minister V. V. MATSKEVICH.

Soviet agriculture is divided into two main groups:

Kolkhozi (Collective Farms), administered and worked by the participating farmers. The produce is sold to the State and on the Kolkhoznie Rynki (Collective Farm Markets). Profits are shared amongst the collective farmers who also have small individual plots of land for their own private use. There are 37,618 collective farms in the U.S.S.R. (1965).

Sovkhozi (State Farms): are the property of the State. The farmers are employees of the State and are paid wages. There are some 10,075 state farms (1965).

All-Union Corporation "Soyuzselkhoztekhnika" of the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers: a government body which supplies equipment to collective and state farms; Chair. A. A. EZHEVSKY.

INDUSTRY

Ministries of the U.S.S.R. exercise control of different branches of industry and are supervised by the U.S.S.R. Council of Ministers. State Planning committees of the U.S.S.R. and of the Union Republics are engaged in planning of industrial production in the country as a whole and Union Republics respectively.

TRADE UNIONS

CENTRAL ORGANISATION

The All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions: Leninski Prospekt 42, Moscow V-119; Chair. V. V. GRISHIN.

There are 22 trade unions in the U.S.S.R. with a membership of over 73 million (December 1964). One of their functions is to increase production and they take part in industrial management by forming Standing Production Conferences in enterprises. They also administer the state social insurance scheme which in 1964 amounted to 9,900 million roubles, operate sanatoria and holiday homes and develop physical culture and sport.

All the workers in one industry or institution belong to the same union however many different crafts they may follow.

The highest organ of the trade unions is Congress which is held about every four years. The most recent (the 13th) was in October–November 1963. Between Congresses union affairs are managed by the All-Union Central Council which is elected by Congress; publs. Trud (daily), Sovietshie Profsoyuzy (fortnightly), Okhrana Truda i Sotsialnoe Strakhovanie (monthly).

TRANSPORT

RAILWAYS

Ministry of Railways: Moscow, Novo-Basmanaya 2; Minister BORIS PAVLOVICH BESHCHEV. Administers the railways through 25 railway boards located in the important towns.

The railway network totals 129,300 km. (80,343 miles) of 1,524 mm. (5 ft.) gauge. By 1965 22,500 km. (13,981 miles) of line were electrified and 71,800 km. (44,504 miles) were ready for diesel traction. Electrical and diesel traction carry 79 per cent of all freight. Electrification has been completed on the 5,500-km. (3,438 miles) line between Moscow and Baikal, on the 3,400 km. (2,125 miles) between Leningrad, Moscow and Leningrad and on the 1,800 km. (1,125 miles) between Moscow, Gorky and Sverdlovsk. The total freight turnover of the U.S.S.R. amounted to 1,854,100 million ton-km in 1964 and passenger turnover 195,100 million passenger-kilometres.

ROADS

Main highways connect Moscow with Kiev, the Crimea, Leningrad, Minsk, Riga and Warsaw, the Caucasus, Kazakhstan, Alma-Ata, Frunze and Tashkent, and with parts of Siberia.

The total length of roads is 1,332,000 km (827,663 miles), of which 330,000 km (205,050 miles) are hard-surfaced

INLAND WATERWAYS

Each Republic controls its own waterways: total length about 91,300 miles (140,700 km). River transport has always been of great importance to the U.S.S.R., and in those areas where railway lines are few it is essential. The main inland waterway systems are those of the Volga, Dnieper, Don, Ob, Yenisei, Lena, Amur and Amu-Darya. The Volga and its tributaries is the largest system and carries nearly half the cargoes; it is linked by canals to the Don and the Black Sea, the Baltic and the White Sea. The main terminal ports on the Volga-Don system are Astrakhan, Rostov, Moscow, Perm and Leningrad; the main transfer ports are Volgograd, Saratov, Kuibyshev, Kazan, Gorky and Yaroslavl.

River-ports in Siberia improved under the 1951-55 Plan included Omsk, Novosibirsk and Irkutsk. Kotlas and Pechora, in North Russia, have also been improved

THE UNITED KINGDOM

GREAT BRITAIN

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Great Britain is the largest of the islands forming the United Kingdom. It comprises England, Scotland to the north and Wales to the west. It is separated from the coast of western Europe by the English Channel to the south and by the North Sea to the east. The northern and western shores are washed by the Atlantic Ocean. Ireland lies to the west across the Irish Sea. Climate is temperate and variable. The language is English but Welsh is spoken fairly extensively in Wales. The Church of England is the established church in England. Other large Christian denominations are Roman Catholicism, Methodism, Presbyterianism, Congregationalism and the Baptists. There are about half a million Jews. The flag, known as the Union Jack, is a superimposition of the red cross of Saint George of England, the white saltire of Saint Andrew of Scotland and the red saltire of Saint Patrick of Ireland, all on a blue background. The capital is London.

Recent History

Since the war Britain has granted independence to most of her former territories overseas. India, Malaysia, Pakistan, Ghana, Nigeria, Tanzania, Cyprus, Jamaica, Trinidad and others are now members of the Commonwealth, an association of nations sharing common aims and interests. In 1960 Britain took a leading part in forming the European Free Trade Association. From 1961 until early in 1963 Britain negotiated unsuccessfully to join the European Economic Community. In August 1963 Britain and the United States negotiated a nuclear test ban treaty with the Soviet Union to which many other countries have added their signatures. In October, 1964, after 13 years of Conservative rule, a Labour Government was returned.

Great Britain's trade deficit, which has been marked since the beginning of 1964, has been countered by a policy of economic austerity within the country, the imposition of a 15 per cent import surcharge (now reduced to 10 per cent), and large borrowings from abroad.

In November 1965, the British colony of Rhodesia declared independence unilaterally. Economic sanctions have been applied against Rhodesia by almost all the countries of the world, and by January 1966 a complete ban on trade between Britain and Rhodesia had been imposed.

Government

Great Britain is a constitutional monarchy. The Sovereign is the Head of the State and the monarchy is hereditary. The Sovereign summons and dissolves Parliament and gives the Royal Assent to bills which have passed through both Houses of Parliament. Her formal consent is necessary before a treaty is signed, a cabinet formed or war declared. Parliament consists of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. The Commons are elected for a five-year term through direct suffrage by all citizens of 21 years and over. The House of Lords is composed of hereditary Peers of the Realm and Life Peers and Peeresses created by the Sovereign for outstanding public service. Legislation may be initiated in either House but it usually originates in the Commons. Each bill has three readings in the Commons and it is then passed to the House of Lords who may return it to the Commons with amendments or suggestions. The House of Lords cannot prevent any bill from becoming law once it has been passed by the Commons. Executive power is vested in the Cabinet headed by the Prime Minister who is appointed by the Sovereign.

Defence

Britain is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) and maintains a regular army. The total strength of the Armed Forces is 440,000 (Army 208,000, Navy 100,000, Air Force 132,000, Women's Services 17,000). There is no compulsory military service. Britain possesses a nuclear deterrent. Defence estimates for 1966 total £2,120 million.

Economic Affairs

Britain is one of the world's leading industrial and exporting countries. Chief industries are iron and steel, engineering, chemicals, electronics, motor vehicles, aircraft, textiles, clothes and other consumer goods. Its coal mines yield about 200 million tons annually. The coal, gas, electricity and atomic energy industries are nationalised as are the railways and the two largest airlines.

Although Britain's agriculture and trawler-fishing are highly mechanised, half of the country's food supplies and most of its raw materials are imported. Britain maintains a large passenger, cargo and oil tanker merchant fleet.

A national economic development plan, published in September 1965, envisages an increase of twenty-five per cent in output by 1970.

Transport and Communications

Most British railways are more than a hundred years old, covering some 18,000 miles. They are state owned, and many branch lines are being closed down as a result of extensive reorganisation. Most main lines have been converted from steam to diesel or electric trains. London's Underground is the oldest in the world and carries two million passengers daily. Total road mileage is about 200,000 miles and more trunk motorways are being constructed. Waterways extend for 2,500 miles providing navigation for small craft. There are about 300 ports of which London, Liverpool, Southampton, the Tyne ports, Glasgow and Hull are the largest. London is linked to most large cities by airways. A Transport Advisory Council was established in February 1965 to advise the Government on the planning and co-ordination of all forms of transport.

U.K. (GREAT BRITAIN)—(INTRODUCTORY SURVEY)

Social Welfare

Britain has a highly-developed system of social welfare. Social Insurance is universal and compulsory. Contributions are paid by employers and employees towards family allowances, maternity grants, sickness, unemployment and injury benefits, retirement pensions and death grants. These contributions also help to finance the National Health Service which provides free medical care and welfare services.

Education

Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 5 and 15 and is given free of charge in State schools. State grants and scholarships help to meet the expenses of university study. Higher education, particularly technological study is being rapidly advanced. There are in Great Britain 31,454 schools of all kinds and 33 universities. Two new universities were opened in 1965.

Tourism

Tourism plays a significant part in the economy. In 1964, 1,949,500 visitors came to Britain. The chief attractions are the country's history and traditions and the beauty of the countryside.

Receipts from tourism totalled $532 million in 1964, and expenditure was $731 million.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter the United Kingdom: Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany (Federal Republic), Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Kuwait, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Monaco, Morocco, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, San Marino, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey and all American countries

Sport

Many kinds of sport are popular in Britain. Football (Association and Rugby) is played everywhere. Cricket is regarded as England's national game, though it is played much less in Scotland and Wales. Other popular recreations are golf, tennis, athletics, fishing, boating, swimming, horse racing and motor racing. A Sports Council was formed early in 1965 to advise the government on training and facilities for sport.

Public Holidays

The chief Public or Bank Holidays are: Good Friday, Easter Monday, Whit Monday, August Bank Holiday, December 25 (Christmas Day), December 26 (Boxing Day). (January 1, New Year's Day, is a holiday only in Scotland).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is in force.

Weight:

1 pound (lb.) = 16 ounces (oz.) = 0.4536 kilogram

14 pounds = 1 stone = 6.35 kilograms

112 pounds = 1 hundredweight (cwt.) = 50.8 kilograms

20 hundredweights = 1 ton = 1,016 kilograms.

Length:

1 yard (yd.) = 3 feet (ft.) = 36 inches (in.) = 0.9144 metre

1,760 yards = 1 mile = 1,609 kilometres.

Capacity:

1 gallon = 4 quarts = 8 pints = 4.546 litres.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The basic unit is the Pound Sterling (£), divided into 20 shillings each of twelve pence.

Notes: £10, £5, £1, 10 shillings (10/-).

Coins: Half Crown (two shillings and sixpence: 2/6d.),

Florin (two shillings: 2/-), Shilling (1/-), Sixpence (6d.),

Threepence (3d.), Penny (1d.), Halfpenny (½d.).

Exchange rate: £1 = $2.80 U.S.

THE CROWN AND THE CONSTITUTION

THE United Kingdom is a Constitutional Monarchy. In the ninth century, when England was first united under a Saxon King, the Monarchy was the only central power and the Constitution did not exist. To-day, the Sovereign acts on the advice of her Ministers which she cannot, constitutionally, ignore, power, which has been at various times and in varying degrees in the hands of kings, feudal barons, ministers, councils and parliaments, or of particular groups or sections of society, is vested in the people as a whole: and the Sovereign is an essential part of the machinery of government which has gradually been devised to give expression to the popular will.

Both the powers of the Government and the functions of the Sovereign are determined by the Constitution, by the body of fundamental principles on which the State is governed and the methods, institutions and procedures which give them effect. But the United Kingdom has no written Constitution. There is no document, no one law or statute, to which reference can be made. The Constitution is organic; it is an accumulation of convention, precedent and tradition which, although continually changing as the times change, is at any one moment binding and exact.

Some of the principles and many of the practices are secured by Statute, some are avowed by Declaration or Manifesto and many are incorporated in the Common Law, the Reform Bill of 1832 dramatically broadened the basis of representative government and prepared the way for further changes; the Bill of Rights of 1689 ended the long era of rivalry between Crown and Parliament and began the story of their co-operation; and Magna Carta, in 1215, began the process by which the law of the land acquired a status of its own, independent of King and Parliament and, as Professor G. M. Trevelyan has put it, "gave expression to the spirit of individual liberty as it has ever since been understood in England." But the Constitution is above all based on usage. It has been, and will continue to be, moulded and modified to match changing customs and to meet successive situations. Any one Parliament could, if it chose, revise or repeal every law and disown every convention that has constitutional significance. It could destroy the whole fabric of political and social existence, including its own; because, according to the Constitution, Parliament, which represents the people, is supreme. The work of one Parliament is not binding on its successors, except in so far as changes must be made by constitutional means. Parliament cannot disown the law, but it can change it.

This evolutionary Constitution has come into being only because the United Kingdom emerged and consolidated over long years when change was slow; and because she escaped any violent revolution. New countries, which grow up in the conditions of the twentieth century, when education, science and outside influences can change the face of political life inside a generation, and older countries which have suffered violence, have little time to allow constitutions to evolve. It is perhaps paradoxical that the United Kingdom, who has no written constitution herself, should provide a model for so many new constitutions in such various lands. In some respects the modern constitution makers have the best of several worlds: they can apply their own skill and judgment, unhindered by preceding legislation; and they can draw on the experience of a long past and see its results.

It would be impossible to enumerate the principles which are extant in the British Constitution. It would also be misleading, because declarations of general principles are quite out of character. In constitutional as in legal practice, the way has been to admit the general principle in quite practical terms related to specific practical problems: the Habeas Corpus Act, which establishes the principle of no imprisonment without trial, makes no mention of the principle itself but lays down in most concrete terms the punishments that shall be inflicted on a judge, or other law officer, if he fails to issue the Writ (commanding the prisoner to be brought before the court) when applied for. The principles of the Constitution and constitutional practice are in fact inherent in the Common Law on the one hand and in the structure, functions and procedures of the various instruments of government on the other: of the Crown, of Parliament, of the Privy Council, of the Government and the Cabinet and of the Government Departments.

THE SOVEREIGN

The Queen's title in the United Kingdom is "Elizabeth II, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of Her other Realms and Territories Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith". The title varies slightly for different parts of the Commonwealth. Except in India, Pakistan, Ghana, Malaysia, Cyprus, Kenya, Uganda, Nigeria, Tanzania, Zambia and Singapore, the Queen is represented in each full member country of the Commonwealth by a Governor-General whom she appoints on the advice of the Ministers of the country concerned. He may be a national of that country, or of any other Commonwealth country, and he fulfils the same constitutional position, according to the constitution, laws and customs of the country in which he serves, as the Queen fills in the United Kingdom. If the Queen visits a Commonwealth country she can of course take over the functions of the Governor-General.

The monarchy is hereditary, descending to the sons of the Sovereign in order of seniority or, if there are no sons, to the daughters.

Her constitutional position as head of the state, quite apart from her position as Head of the Commonwealth, demands of the Queen that she keep herself informed on all aspects of the life of her subjects, that she maintain absolute impartiality and that she should personally visit the different parts of her realm as often as it is possible for her to do so, but she has also quite specific functions, all exercised on ministerial advice: she summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament; she must give Royal Assent to a Bill which has passed through both Houses of Parliament, before it becomes law; she is head of the judiciary (although the judiciary is now quite independent of the executive); she appoints all important state officials, including judges, officers of the forces and representatives abroad, and she confers honours and awards. Her formal consent is necessary before a Minister can take up office or a Cabinet be formed; and before a Treaty may be concluded, war declared or peace made. These are some of the more essential functions. But the Queen has also endless residuary responsibilities, such as the guardianship of infants and persons of unsound mind, the creation of corporations, granting of printing rights for the Bible and Prayer Book and for state documents; and her signature and consent are necessary to many important state papers. Constitutional government cannot in fact be carried on without her, so much so that provision has been made by Act of Parliament for the appointment of a Regent should the Sovereign be incapacitated or under age and for Counsellors of State to act in the temporary absence of the Queen.

U.K. (GREAT BRITAIN)—(THE CROWN AND THE CONSTITUTION)

PARLIAMENT

The Queen in Parliament—the House of Commons and the House of Lords—is the supreme legislative authority in the United Kingdom. Under the Parliament Act of 1911 the maximum life of one Parliament was fixed at five years; if, that is, Parliament has not meanwhile been dissolved for any other reason, such as the fall of the government in power, then a general election is at the end of five years necessary by law. During its lifetime, the power of Parliament is theoretically absolute, it can make or unmake any law. In practice, of course, it must take account of the electorate. Parliament is prorogued at intervals during its life, which therefore consists of a number of sessions; by present custom, a session has normally 160 sitting days and is divided into five periods from November (when the session is opened) until Christmas (about 30 days), from January till Easter (50), from Easter till Whitsun (30), from Whitsun until the end of July (40) and 10 days in October.

The House of Commons. The House of Commons has 630 members, each elected for one geographical constituency. The Speaker, who is elected by the members immediately a new parliament meets, presides. Members of Parliament may be elected either at a general election or at a by-election (held in the event of the death, resignation, or expulsion of the sitting member) and in either case hold their seats during the life of the existing parliament. All British subjects over 21 (and subjects of any Commonwealth country and of the Irish Republic who are resident in the United Kingdom) have the vote unless legally barred (e.g. for insanity). Anyone who has the vote may stand as a candidate for election except clergymen of the Church of England, the established Churches of Scotland and Northern Ireland and the Roman Catholic Church, and certain officers of the Crown; Civil Servants must resign from the Service if they wish to stand as a Member of Parliament.

The House of Lords. There are about 900 peers who have the right to a seat in the House of Lords, including Princes of the Royal Blood (who, by tradition, take no part in the proceedings); hereditary peers of England and of the United Kingdom (peerages created since the Act of Union of England and Scotland of 1707 are all peerages of the United Kingdom); several Lords of Appeal in Ordinary (appointed for life to carry out the judicial duties of the House); Scottish peers, created life peers and life peeresses; and the two archbishops and the twenty-four senior bishops of the Church of England. All except the spiritual, judicial and life peerages are hereditary. The Lord Chancellor is the Speaker of the House. The 1963 Peerage Act made three main amendments to the Constitution: (1) An hereditary peerage may be disclaimed by the holder for the duration of his lifetime. The peerage can be reclaimed at his death by his heir, but he himself cannot reclaim it. (2) All Scottish peers, instead of only sixteen representatives, and (3) peeresses in their own right, may take their seat in the House of Lords.

The Party System. Members of Parliament whose views coincide form groups which agree in each case to support the policies put forward by their chosen leaders, and to present a common front on all important issues both in Parliament and to the electorate. This system evolved during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and is now essential to the working of the British Constitution.

Under the party system, the Queen sends for the leader of the party which wins the majority of seats (although not necessarily of votes) at a general election and asks him to form a Government. The party which wins the second largest number of seats forms the Opposition, which has quite specific functions. Members of other minority parties and independents may support the Government or Opposition as they choose. Each party has its own Whips, officials whose duty it is to arrange, in consultation with the Whips of other parties, matters of procedure and organisation, to see to it that Members attend debates and to muster for their party its maximum voting strength, and each has its own national and local organisations outside Parliament.

Parliamentary Procedure. Parliamentary procedure, like the Constitution itself, is determined by rules, customs, forms and practices which have accumulated over many centuries. The Speaker is responsible for their application, and generally for controlling the course of business and debates in the house.

It is the duty of Parliament to make the laws which govern the life of the community, to appropriate the necessary funds for the various services of state and to criticise and control the Government. Parliament is also consulted before the ratification of certain international treaties and agreements.

Legislation may with some exceptions be initiated in either House and on either side of the House. In practice, most Public Bills are introduced into the House of Commons by the Government in power (the chief exceptions are Private Members' Bills) as the result of Cabinet decisions. Each Bill which is passed by the Commons at its third reading is sent to the House of Lords, who either accept it or return it to the Commons with suggested amendments. The Lords cannot in any instance prevent Bills passed by the Commons from becoming law: over Money Bills or Bills affecting the duration of Parliament they have no power at all, and by the Parliament Act of 1949 any other Bill passed by the Commons in two successive sessions may be presented for Royal Assent without the consent of the Lords provided one year has elapsed between the date of the second reading in the Commons and the date of its final passing. In practice, the House of Lords is extremely unlikely to push things thus far, and its main function is to scrutinise the work of the Commons, to caution and suggest. Bills of a non-controversial kind are sometimes introduced initially in the House of Lords.

THE PRIVY COUNCIL

The power of the Privy Council has declined with the development of the Cabinet and its main function to-day is to give effect to decisions made elsewhere. There are at present over 300 Privy Counsellors, including Cabinet Ministers (who are automatically created Privy Counsellors), and people who have reached eminence in some branch of public affairs. Meetings are presided over by the Queen, and the responsible Minister is the Lord President of the Council, an office which since 1600 has always been held by a member of the party in power, who is usually also a leading member of the Cabinet. The Privy Council is responsible for making Orders in Council, of which there are two kinds, those made in virtue of the Royal prerogative, e.g. the ratification of treaties, and those which are authorised by Act of Parliament and are in fact a form of delegated legislation. It has also various advisory functions which cover such subjects as scientific, industrial, medical and agricultural research. An important organ of the Privy Council is the Judicial Committee.

U K. (GREAT BRITAIN)—(THE CROWN AND THE CONSTITUTION, THE GOVERNMENT)

HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

The Government is headed by the Prime Minister, who is also the leader of the Party which holds the majority in the House of Commons. It includes Ministers who are in charge of Government departments and those who hold traditional offices which involve no special departmental duties; the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Lord Chancellor, who are specially responsible for financial and economic, and legal affairs respectively, the law officers of the Crown (the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, the Lord Advocate for Scotland and the Solicitor-General for Scotland), the Ministers of State, who are usually appointed to assist Ministers in charge of departments, and Parliamentary Secretaries and Under-Secretaries.

The Cabinet. The Cabinet system developed during the eighteenth century from the informal meetings of Privy Counsellors who were also ministers and who formed a committee of manageable size which, it was gradually realised, could take decisions far more quickly and simply than larger bodies. The cabinet to-day has between 15-25 members at the discretion of the Prime Minister—its main duty is to formulate policy for submission to Parliament.

Ministerial responsibility. The doctrine of ministerial responsibility has also evolved gradually but was generally accepted by the middle of the last century. Each Minister must take full responsibility for the work of his own department, particularly in Parliament; if his department fails over any important matter, he will be expected to resign. Ministers also assume collective responsibility for the work of the Government and for any advice which it may offer to the Crown.

POLITICAL PARTIES

THE LABOUR PARTY

Leader: Rt. Hon. HAROLD WILSON, P.C., O.B.E., M.P.

The aims of the British Labour Party were stated in 1918 and reaffirmed and amplified in 1960.

The British Labour Party is a democratic socialist party. Its central ideal is the brotherhood of man. Its purpose is to make this ideal a reality everywhere. It rejects discrimination on grounds of race, colour or creed, stands for the right of all peoples to freedom, independence and self-government, pledges itself to support the United Nations Charter and to work for world disarmament. It affirms the duty of richer nations to assist poorer ones, stands for social justice and the creation of a socialist community with a classless society and planned economy. It stands for democracy in industry and the expansion of common ownership, the protection of all citizens from any exercise of arbitrary power. It seeks to obtain and hold power only through free democratic institutions.

Relations with the Trades Union Congress and the Co-operative movement are maintained through the National Council of Labour, representing the T.U.C. General Council, the National Executive of the Labour Party, the Parliamentary Labour Party and the Co-operative Union.

HEADQUARTERS

THE CO-OPERATIVE PARTY

The Co-operative Party is not affiliated to the Labour Party nationally, but a joint sub-committee represents the two executives to apply conditions of local affiliations. Local Co-operative Parties are eligible for affiliation to divisional Labour Parties, and are usually so affiliated.

Headquarters: 54 Victoria Street, London, S.W.1. Chair. HERBERT KEMP; Sec. H. E. CAMPBELL.

THE CONSERVATIVE AND UNIONIST PARTY

Leader: Rt. Hon. EDWARD HEATH, P.C., M.P.

The aims of the Conservative Party are to uphold religion, preserve the Constitution, and to strengthen the free association of the Commonwealth; to maintain, in collaboration with other like minded nations, defence forces adequate for the preservation of freedom and prevention of war; to work for peace by international disarmament; to provide financial and technical aid to raise the conditions of under-developed territories; to provide freedom and opportunity by supporting free enterprise and initiative against Socialist systems of state-trading and nationalisation; to improve the standards of life by economic policies which preserve full employment, promote expanding trade and production, maintain national solvency, and encourage thrift and an ever wider spread of ownership of property; to promote greater educational opportunities at all levels; to ensure that the old share in rising living standards; to promote better health by good housing and slum clearance, and a modern up-to-date hospital system.

HEADQUARTERS

The Conservative and Unionist Central Office: 32 Smith Square, London, S.W.1; f. 1870; Chair. The Rt. Hon. EDWARD DU CANN, M.P.; Deputy Chair. Sir MICHAEL FRASER, C.B.E.; Vice-Chair. Miss SUSAN WALKER, C.B.E.; GEOFFREY JOHNSON-SMITH; Treas. Lord CHELMER; Gen. Dir. Sir WILLIAM URTON, M.B.E., T.D.; Chief Organisation Officer C. F. R. BAGNALL, C.B.E.; Chief Publicity Officer GERALD O'BRIEN.

National Liberal Council: 183-4 Palace Chambers, Bridge Street, London, S.W.1. Pres. The Rt. Hon. Viscount MURSHIEL, C.H., C.M.G.; Hon. Sec. and Treas. J. CHERRY. The administrative centre of the Liberals who co-operate with the Conservative and Unionists.

THE LIBERAL PARTY

Leader: Rt. Hon. JOSEPH GRIMOND, P.C., M.P.

The preamble to the party Constitution states: "The Liberal Party exists to build a Liberal Commonwealth in which every citizen shall possess liberty, property and security, and none shall be enslaved by poverty, ignorance or unemployment. Its chief care is for the rights and opportunities of the individual, and in all spheres it sets freedom first."

HEADQUARTERS

Liberal Party Organisation: 36 Smith Street, London, S.W.1; f. 1936; Pres. Miss NANCY SEEAR (65-66); Chair. of the Executive Committee GRUFFYDD EVANS; Organising Sec. TIMOTHY BEAUMONT; Hon. Treas. JEREMY THORPE, M.P.

THE COMMUNIST PARTY

The Party Congress elects the Executive Committee, which elects the Political Committee that is responsible for conducting the day-to-day leadership of Party activity.

The object of the Party is to replace the capitalist system, by public ownership and it believes that this aim can be attained only by the will of the people, led by the organised working class.

There were 33,243 members in June 1965.

HEADQUARTERS

The Communist Party of Great Britain: 16 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.2; Exec. Cttee. Chair. FRANK STANLEY; Gen. Sec. JOHN GOLLAN; weekly: Comment; monthly: Marxism Today.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

One of the most cherished liberties of the ordinary British citizen is his freedom from arbitrary arrest and his knowledge that the law regards him as innocent unless he can be proved guilty. Arbitrary arrest and imprisonment were abolished when the famous Habeas Corpus Act was passed in 1679; under this Act in its present-day form anyone having custody of a person can be ordered to bring him before the court within forty-eight hours and to prove that he is being lawfully held in custody.

Two factors help to ensure a fair trial: the independence of judges, who are outside the control of the executive and can be removed from office only after an address from Parliament to her Majesty; and the participation of private citizens in all important criminal and some civil cases, in the form of a summoned jury of twelve persons, who judge the facts of a case. The judge decides the law. Their verdict must be unanimous, otherwise the case must be retried with another jury.

There are two sources of the law as administered in the law courts today: Statute Law, which is written law and consists mainly of Acts of Parliament, and Common Law, which originated in ancient usage and has not been formally enacted.

Scottish common and statute law differ in some respects from that current in the rest of the United Kingdom, owing to Scotland's retention of her own legal system under the Act of Union with England of 1707.

CRIMINAL COURTS

Magistrates' Courts, or Petty Sessions, the courts of lowest jurisdiction, are presided over by Justices of the Peace, who are unpaid laymen appointed by the Lord Chancellor. They have power to try all non-indictable offences, and some of the less serious indictable offences, if the accused so desires. The trial of nearly all criminal offences begins by a hearing in the Magistrates' Court. The Justices must decide whether the evidence is sufficient for the accused to be remitted for trial at the Quarter Sessions or Assizes, according to the seriousness of the offence.

Magistrates also have power to grant, renew, transfer or remove or order the forfeiture of licences for the sale of intoxicating drinks, and to control the structural design of licensed premises where intoxicating liquor is sold for consumption on the premises.

In London and in certain other large towns there are professional salaried magistrates, known as metropolitan magistrates in London and as stipendiary magistrates in the provinces, who sit alone and have the powers of two or more lay justices acting together.

Juvenile Courts, composed of specially qualified justices selected by the justices of each petty sessional division (in London, by the Lord Chancellor), have power to try most charges against children under seventeen. The general public is excluded and there are restrictions on newspaper reports of the proceedings.

Quarter Sessions. The Court of Quarter Sessions of a county is composed of the Justices of the Peace for the county with a legally qualified Chairman. Trials are usually presided over by the Chairman or someone with legal qualifications sitting with lay Justices and with a jury. In large towns a Recorder, who is a salaried barrister, sits alone with a jury.

Quarter Sessions have jurisdiction over the less serious indictable offences excluding, among others, those carrying the penalties of death or life imprisonment.

Assizes. Sessions of the Courts of Assize, which try the most serious indictable offences, are held in county towns and the larger cities three, four or five times a year and are presided over by a judge of the Queen's Bench Division (see "High Court of Justice" below) or a Commissioner of Assize, i.e. a barrister commissioned to act as a judge sitting with a jury. The Central Criminal Court in London (the Old Bailey) acts in the main as the Assize Court for London and its environs. The Crown Courts at Liverpool and Manchester act as the Assize Court for these cities and part of Lancashire.

From the Quarter Sessions or Assizes appeal lies to the Court of Criminal Appeal, which consists of the Lord Chief Justice and any Queen's Bench judges; three in session is the usual number.

The final court of appeal in the United Kingdom for both criminal and civil cases is the House of Lords, sitting as a Law Court. The only peers who have a right to take part in these sessions are the Lord Chancellor, ex-Lord Chancellors, ex-judges who are peers and nine Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, who are paid judges with life peerages.

CIVIL COURTS

County Courts. A high proportion of civil actions are tried in these courts, which are presided over by a paid judge, sitting alone. Subjects coming under the jurisdiction of County Courts include rent restrictions, certain cases under the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1954, and all civil cases where the sum in dispute is not more than £400, or where, in actions for the recovery of land, the rateable value of the land is not over £100. The jurisdiction may be increased by the consent of the parties and in certain other special cases. Some divorce cases are at present heard by County Court judges sitting as Special Commissioners.

High Court of Justice. Certain civil cases are heard in the three divisions of this court—Chancery, Queen's Bench and Probate, Divorce and Admiralty. Chancery deals with enforcement of trusts, mortgages and contracts to sell land, construction of wills, and company, bankruptcy, revenue and patent proceedings. Queen's Bench tries civil actions for damages for breach of contract or for tort. The judges of this division hear also criminal cases at Assizes (see above). The third division deals with probate of wills, matrimonial causes and shipping cases, such as disputes over collisions and claims for salvage.

The judges of these three divisions have the title of Justice of the High Court.

SCOTTISH JUDICIAL SYSTEM

CRIMINAL COURTS

Minor offences, as in the rest of the United Kingdom, are dealt with in magistrates' courts.

Sheriff Court. Most criminal actions, including all but the most serious offences, are heard in this court. Each of the twelve sheriffdoms of Scotland has a Sheriff and a number of Sheriffs-Substitute, who conduct the proceedings

High Court of Justiciary. The supreme criminal court in Scotland and all the most serious criminal cases are taken there. Appeal may be made to it from the Sheriff Court; there is, however, no further appeal to the House of Lords

The judges of this court are known as Lords Commissioners of Justiciary and are headed by the Lord Justice General. Apart from their criminal jurisdiction in this court, these same sixteen judges are also judges of the Court of Session (see below) in civil cases. The Lord Justice General is also the President of the Court of Session.

CIVIL COURTS

Sheriff Court. Tries civil as well as criminal cases, and in civil cases its jurisdiction is practically unlimited. Appeal may be made to the Court of Session

Court of Session. This is the supreme civil court in Scotland. It has an Inner House and an Outer House.

Inner House. Has two divisions of equal standing, each consisting of four judges under the presidency of the Lord President and the Lord Justice Clerk respectively, is mainly an appeal court, whence further appeal may be made to the House of Lords

Outer House. Deals with the major civil cases and all divorce actions

The judges are those of the High Court of Justiciary, sitting in a civil capacity as judges of the Court of Session.

RELIGION

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

The Church of England claims to be both Catholic and Reformed. Originating from the Celtic Mission of St. Aidan from Scotland and from the Roman Mission of St. Augustine, it finally renounced the jurisdiction of the Pope at the Reformation, while retaining the episcopal form of Church government

The Church of England is the Established Church, and as such acknowledges the authority of Parliament in matters in which secular authority is competent to exercise control. Queen Elizabeth I was declared "supreme Governor on Earth" of the Church of England, and the Sovereign is consecrated to this office at his coronation

In England there are two Provinces, Canterbury and York. The former contains 29, the latter 14, dioceses. Each Province has its ancient Houses of Convocation, the Upper House consisting of the Archbishop and Diocesan Bishops, and the Lower House of Deans of cathedrals, the two senior Archdeacons of each diocese in each Province, and the elected representatives of the clergy in each diocese. The estimated membership of the Church of England is 27,384,000 (baptised) and 2,793,191 on the electoral rolls

By the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919 (usually called the Enabling Act) the Constitution of the National Assembly of the Church of England ("Church Assembly") received statutory recognition in 1920, with power, subject to the control and authority of Parliament, of initiating legislation on all matters concerning the Church of England. Measures passed by the Assembly and approved by Parliament, are submitted for the Royal Assent, and have the force of Acts of Parliament.

The Church Assembly consists of three Houses; the House of Bishops, composed of 43 diocesan Bishops; the House of Clergy, consisting of the Lower Houses of Convocation of Canterbury and York, numbering 350 members; and the House of Laity, consisting of 342 elected diocesan representatives and 5 co-opted members

THE SCOTTISH CHURCHES

The Church of Scotland: 121 George Street, Edinburgh, The National Church of Scotland was reformed in 1560, and became Presbyterian in doctrine and constitution. In 1921 "The Church of Scotland Act" was passed, by which the articles declaring the full spiritual freedom of the Church are recognised as lawful. In May, 1925, "The Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments) Act" became law, and made over to the Church churches, manses and endowments in absolute property, vesting the future control of them in Trustees. Immediately the General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland and the United Free Church appointed a Committee to prepare a basis and plan of union, and the union of the two Churches was effected in 1929. The Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland for 1964 is the Rt. Rev. DUNCAN FRASER, D.D., PH.D.; the Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly is General Sir RICHARD NUGENT O'CONNOR, G.C.C., D.S.O., M.C., 1,268,887 members; publ. Life and Work (circ. 210,000; monthly).

Congregational Union of England and Wales: Memorial Hall, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.4; Chair. Rev. A. E. GOULD; Sec. Rev. JOHN HUNTABLE, M.A.

The Union was founded in 1831. The leading feature of Congregational policy is the autonomous character of the local church, the duty of each individual member to take part in the church's government, and its independence of all external ecclesiastical authority. Two orders only are recognised; that of the pastor or minister elected by the free vote of the members of each individual church; and deacons (laymen or women, elected by the membership of the church), who supervise its temporal affairs and assist the minister in the administration of the Lord's Supper and in such pastoral work as may be necessary.

In England and Wales there are 1,690 Congregational ministers, 2,852 churches and 202,275 members. Publ. Congregational Monthly.

There are between three and four hundred congregations included in the Assembly, some twenty of which are in the Dominions. Adult membership is estimated at 30,000. The congregations are self-governing, but for common purposes and mutual benefit they are united in District Associations and the General Assembly. Publs. The Inquirer (weekly), The Unitarian (monthly).

The Methodist Church: 1 Central Buildings, London, S.W.1. Pres. of the Conference (1964-65) Rev. A. KINGSLEY LLOYD. The Wesleyan Methodist Church was founded in 1739 as a result of the evangelical mission work conducted by Rev. JOHN WESLEY, M.A., a priest of the Church of England, and others, including his brother, Rev. Charles Wesley, M.A. The doctrinal standards are contained in certain of John Wesley's sermons and his Notes on the New Testament. It spread rapidly in the British Isles and to America. The Methodist Church in Great Britain was united in 1932 by the fusion of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Primitive Methodist Church (f. 1807) and the United Methodist Church, itself a fusion of three Methodist Churches.

The chief court of the Church is the Annual Conference, which consists of ministers and laymen. The Church throughout Great Britain is divided into 34 Districts, and these hold their Synod Meetings in September and May. The Districts are divided into Circuits, which hold a Quarterly Meeting, made up of representatives from the churches within the Circuit. There are also local church courts.

At the end of 1963 there were 710,774 members of the Methodist Church in Great Britain.

The chief Methodist press organs are the Methodist Recorder (weekly), The Methodist Magazine (monthly).

British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC): Broadcasting House, London, W.1; Chair. Lord NORMANBROOK, G.C.B.; Dir.-Gen. Sir HUGH GREENE, K.C.M.G., O.B.E.

The British Broadcasting Company, which was formed in 1922, was superseded in 1927 by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The objects of the Corporation under its Royal Charter (Cmd. 2385) include the provision of a public service of broadcasting as a means of information, education and entertainment and the development of the service in the national interest. The Governors of the BBC are appointed by Her Majesty in Council.

The Corporation's stations in the United Kingdom are operated under a licence from the Postmaster-General (Cmd. 2236), which prohibits the BBC from broadcasting commercial advertisements or sponsored programmes.

The Postmaster-General's licence is required to install and operate broadcast receiving apparatus. The annual fee for a licence covering television and sound is £5; for sound only the fee is 25/-. For the conduct of its Home Services (Sound and Television) the BBC receives from the Postmaster General the revenue from licence fees remaining after deduction of Post Office expenses.

The number of broadcast receiving licences current at the end of September 1965 was 16,185,810, including 13,448,191 for television and sound combined.

Independent Television Authority (ITA): 70 Brompton Road, Knightsbridge, London, S.W.3; Members of the Authority: The Rt. Hon. Lord HILL of LUTON, P.C. (Chair.), Sir SIDNEY CAINE, K.C.M.G. (Deputy Chair.), Mrs. MARY ADAMS, O.B.E., Dame ANNE BRYANS, D.B.E., O. ST. J., Baroness BURTON of COVENTRY, W. MACFARLANE GRAY, O.B.E., O.ST.J., J.P., Sir PATRICK HAMILTON, Bt., Prof. HUGH HUNT, M.A., Prof. Sir OWEN SAUNDERS, M.A., D.Sc., M.I.MECH.E., F.R.S., Sir VINCENT TEWSON, C.B.E., M.C., Sir BEN BOWEN THOMAS, M.A., DAVID GILLILAND, Baroness PLUMMER of TOPESFIELD; Dir.-Gen. Sir ROBERT FRASER, O.B.E.

The Independent Television Authority is a public corporation created by the Television Act of 1954.

The Act requires the Authority to plan and provide national television services. The first programmes were transmitted in London in 1955. Well over 97 per cent of the population now live within the reach of the Independent Television transmitting stations. The Authority builds, owns and operates all these stations.

The programmes transmitted by the Authority are provided by independent companies which it appoints and from which it draws its own income. The Authority's stations are linked by a network of lines which enables programmes to be exchanged between all the companies.

Independent Television draws no income from licence fees or from other public funds. Its financial resources come from the sale of advertising time by the different companies.

The 1964 Television Act gave the Authority increased powers in the control of programmes and advertising, and reallocated new programme contracts. In 1964-65 the companies produced 138 hours of programmes from a total output of 206 hours. Nearly 22,700 programmes were exported to over 70 countries.

RADIO

BBC DOMESTIC SERVICES

BBC Sound Programmes within the United Kingdom are now broadcast on three networks.

The Home Service, which represents the main stream of interests is broadcast on ten medium wavelengths and VHF and includes a number of programmes of special interest for the seven regional areas. London, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, the North, Midlands and the West of England.

The Light Programme, designed for entertainment and relaxed listening, is broadcast on one long wavelength over most of the United Kingdom re-inforced by a medium wavelength in certain urban areas. This service also uses VHF.

The Third Network, a service for specialist interest. Uses two medium wavelengths and VHF and provides the following services:

Music Programme: programmes of and about music.

Study Session: specialist programmes.

Third Programme: artistic and intellectual programmes.

Sports Service: deals with a wide variety of sporting events.

Director of Sound Broadcasting: F. GILLIARD, C.B.E.

NATIONALISED INDUSTRIES

(Information about the British Railways Board and the British Airways Corporations will be found in the section on Transport.)

NATIONAL COAL BOARD

Hobart House, Grosvenor Place, London, S.W.1.

Established under the Coal Industry Nationalisation Act of 1946. Charged with the duties of (a) working and getting the coal in Great Britain to the exclusion of any other person, (b) securing the efficient development of the coal-mining industry; (c) making supplies of coal available of such qualities and sizes, in such quantities and at such prices as may seem to them best calculated to further the public interest in all respects.

Chairman: The Rt. Hon. Lord ROBENS, P.C.

ELECTRICITY

There are two authorities responsible for the Electricity Industry, the Electricity Council and the Central Electricity Generating Board, both of which were created by the Electricity Act, 1957.

The Electricity Council: 30 Millbank, London, S.W.1; the main functions of the Council are to advise the Minister of Power on all questions affecting the Electricity Supply Industry, and to promote and assist the maintenance and development by the Generating and Area Boards of an efficient, co-ordinated and economical system of electricity supply.

Chairman: Prof. Sir RONALD EDWARDS, K.B.E., D.Sc. (ECON).

The Central Electricity Generating Board: Sudbury House, 15 Newgate Street, London, E.C.1, the Board is responsible for generating and supplying electricity in bulk to twelve Area Boards, who distribute it to their consumers. As an administrative arrangement England and Wales are divided into five Regions, four of which are sub-divided into two or three Divisions for local management and operation of the power stations.

Chairman: H. S. BROWN, C.B.E.

GAS COUNCIL

Hyde Park House, 4/5 Grosvenor Place, London, S.W.1.

Established under the Gas Act, 1948, to advise the Minister of Power on questions affecting the gas industry and to promote and assist the efficient exercise and performance by the Area Boards of their functions. The Gas Act, 1965, gave the Council enlarged powers, including the right to manufacture or acquire gas in Great Britain or elsewhere and to supply gas in bulk to Area Boards.

There are twelve Area Gas Boards, whose Chairmen are members of the Gas Council. The main function of the Boards is to develop and maintain an efficient, co-ordinated, and economical gas supply for their areas.

Chairman: Sir HENRY JONES, K.B.E., M.A., M.I.C.E., M.I.G.A.S.E., M.I.CHEM.E.

CENTRAL ORGANISATIONS

Trades Union Congress: 23-28 Great Russell Street, London, W.C.1; founded 1868 by the voluntary association of a number of trade unions for the purpose of defending trade union rights against attacks then pending. Its original membership of less than 120,000 has grown until to-day it has a membership of over 8 million, while the scope of its activity has been greatly enlarged. It not only formulates through its governing body (the General Council) the main policies of trade unionism, but takes part in consultations with other leading economic and industrial bodies, and with Government departments, on topics affecting the lives of wage-earners and salaried employees. It maintains contact with the Labour Party by means of the National Council of Labour, on which the General Council, the Executives of the Labour Party, and of the Parliamentary Labour Party and the Co-operative Union, have representation.

U.K. (GREAT BRITAIN)—(TRADE AND INDUSTRY)

The T.U.C. is affiliated to the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions and nominates the British Workers' Representative to the International Labour Organization.

Its General Council is elected annually by ballot of the delegates attending Congress, exercising voting power on the basis of the membership of their unions.

SHIPPING

PORTS

There are about 300 ports in the United Kingdom of which London, Liverpool, Southampton, the Tyne ports, Glasgow, Hull, Belfast, Swansea, Bristol and Middlesbrough are the largest (in terms of the tonnage of shipping cleared). London is administered by the Port of London Authority, Liverpool by the Mersey Docks and Harbours Board, Belfast by the Belfast Harbour Commission and Glasgow by the Clyde Navigation Trust. Bristol and a few smaller ports are under the control of local authorities, and there are over a hundred ports, of which Manchester is the largest, which are owned and administered by private companies.

ATOMIC ENERGY

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA): 11 Charles II Street, London, S.W.1; f. 1954; Chair. Sir WILLIAM PENNEY, K.B.E., F.R.S.; Deputy Chair Sir ALAN HITCHMAN, K.C.B.; Member for Reactors J. C. C. STEWART, C.B.E.; Member for Production Dr. J. M. HILL; Member for Weapons Research and Development Air Chief Marshal Sir DENIS BARNETT, G.C.B., C.B.E., D.F.C.; Member for Research Dr. F. A. VICK, O.B.E.; Sec. D. E. H. PEIRSON, C.B.E.

London: central administration, public relations and overseas collaboration.

Group Headquarters:

Reactor Group: Risley, Lancs.; Man. Dir. R. V. MOORE, C.B.E., G.C.

Production Group: Risley, Lancs.; Man. Dir. T. TUOHY. Engineering: Risley, Lancs.; Man. Dir. H. V. DISNEY, C.B.E.

Research: Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell, Berks.; Dir. Dr. R. SPENCE, C.B., F.R.S.

Weapons: Atomic Weapons Research Establishment, Aldermaston, Berks.; Dir. E. F. NEWLEY, C.B.E.

The Authority deals with every aspect of nuclear energy other than certain matters relating to nuclear weapons. It undertakes research; it is the sole importer of uranium; it sells fuel to the electricity authorities, processes the spent fuel elements, and buys back plutonium extracted from them. (Separate electricity authorities implement the civil nuclear power programme)

Atomic Energy Research Establishment: Harwell, nr. Didcot, Berks.; f. 1945; Dir. Dr. R. SPENCE, C.B., F.R.S.

The Research Group is responsible for fundamental research into all aspects of atomic energy and particularly for basic research and early development work on reactor systems for generating electricity from nuclear energy. There are six research and experimental reactors at Harwell.

Harwell Postgraduate Education Centre: f. 1963; Dir. J. F. HILL.

Calder Operation School: Calder Bridge, Cumberland; Dir. K. FROST.

Wantage Research Laboratory: Wantage, Berks.; Dir. B. S. SMITH.

Develops and advises on new uses of radioisotopes, particularly in industry, and operates the prototype commercial irradiation plant in which materials are subjected to large doses of radiation. This is mostly used for sterilising surgical equipment.

Wantage Isotope School: Wantage; f. 1951; Dir. R. A. FAIRES.

Culham Laboratory: Abingdon, Berks.; Dir. Dr. J. B. ADAMS, C.M.G., F.R.S.

Research in nuclear fusion as a source of industrial power, and in plasma physics.

Dounreay Experimental Reactor Establishment: Dounreay, Caithness, Scotland; f. 1956; Dir. R. R. MATTHEWS.

Two research reactors, the experimental fast reactor and a materials testing reactor. The fast reactor has been run at full power 60 MW(H), the biggest in the world, and has produced some electricity. It is now being used to test new fuels for a possible prototype power reactor based on this system.

Atomic Energy Establishment, Winfrith: Dorchester, Dorset; Dir. D. W. FRY.

Much of the power reactor development work is concentrated here, in both gas-cooled and water-cooled systems. There are six research reactors, including a small fast reactor, and a large prototype steam-generating heavy-water reactor of 100 MW(E) is being built. The European Nuclear Energy Agency high temperature gas-cooled reactor Dragon has been built on the same site.

Radiochemical Centre: Amersham, Bucks.; Dir. Dr. W. P. GROVE.

Produces and supplies radioisotopes.

Atomic Weapons Research Establishment: Aldermaston, Berks.; Dir. Dr. E. F. NEWLEY, C.B.E.

Development of nuclear warheads and research and development for the civil energy programme

Reactor Materials Laboratories: Culcheth, Warrington; Dir. J. M. HUTCHINSON.

Investigation of physical and chemical properties of materials used in reactors.

Reactor Fuel Element Laboratories: Springfields, Salwick, Preston; Dir. J. HARPER

Development of new types of fuel for reactors.

Reactor Engineering Laboratories: Risley, Warrington; Dir. F. I. HURLEY.

Engineering development work on reactor components and test equipment.

Reactor Development Laboratories: Windscale, Sellafield, Cumberland; Dir. K. SADDINGTON, O.B.E.

Development of the prototype Advanced Gas-cooled Reactor and associated work, including a small experimental reactor.

Capenhurst Works: Cheshire; Manager W. R. A. TAYLOR, O.B.E.

Gaseous diffusion plant for the supply of enriched uranium.

Springfields Works: Salwick, Preston; Manager Dr. H. ROGAN, O.B.E.

Windscale and Calder Works: Sellafield, Cumberland.

Operation of chemical plants for reprocessing irradiated fuels and the nuclear power station.

Chapelcross Works: Annan, Dumfriesshire; operation of nuclear power station; Manager Windscale and Calder and Chapelcross G. R. HOWELLS, M.B.E.

RESEARCH REACTORS

Harwell

"GLEEP", first British reactor; started 1947; graphite-moderated air-cooled low-energy pile; used for materials testing, research with an oscillator and on biological irradiations.

"BEPO", started 1948; graphite-moderated natural uranium reactor with a maximum heat output of 6 MW.

"LIDO" swimming-pool reactor, 100 kW, started 1956.

"DIDO" heavy-water (DDO) reactor, 13 MW, with maximum neutron flux 2×10^{14} neutrons per cm.² per second, for studies requiring high-energy flux, and for isotope production, started 1956.

U.K. (GREAT BRITAIN)—(ATOMIC ENERGY)

"PLUTO" heavy-water reactor, 10 MW (H), similar to "DIDO", for materials studies, critical 1958.

"DAPHNE" 100-watt experimental reactor, cooled and moderated with heavy water; to simulate "DIDO" and "PLUTO".

Dounreay

60-MW reactor for fast reactor breeding studies, cooled by liquid metal.

"DMTR" 12-13 MW heavy-water "PLUTO" type reactor started 1958.

Aldermaston

"HERALD" (Heterogeneous Experimental Reactor Aldermaston), started 1959; 5-MW light-water reactor.

"HORACE" 10-watt experimental reactor to obtain basic information for "HERALD".

"VERA" 100-watt reactor to use for experimental studies on fast reactor systems.

Winfrith

"ZENITH" 100-watt graphite-moderated reactor for investigating high-temperature, gas-cooled systems; started 1959.

"NERO" 100-watt graphite-moderated reactor; started 1960.

"NESTOR" 10-kW light-water reactor to provide neutrons for sub-critical assemblies; started 1961.

"DIMPLE" Deuterium-moderated pile low-energy heavy-water pile for thermal reactor studies; started Harwell, re-erected Winfrith 1961.

"HECTOR" small experimental reactor fuelled with enriched uranium aluminium alloy; oscillator reactor, to study reactivity measurements on materials and fuel elements

"ZEBRA" 100-watt experimental reactor with a flexible system designed primarily to investigate the physics of large fast reactors.

"S.G.H.W." steam-generating heavy-water moderated power reactor of 100 MW(E) under construction and expected to start up in 1967.

Windscale

"AGR" 100-MW reactor fuelled with enriched uranium oxide, cooled with carbon dioxide and moderated with graphite; to study the advanced gas-cooled power reactor system.

"HERO" small experimental reactor fuelled with enriched uranium oxide; purpose to assist "AGR".

POWER REACTORS

Calder (Calderbridge): Two stations, four reactors; station "A" completed 1956, station "B" completed 1958; power 225 MW (H) per reactor; fuelled with natural uranium, cooled with carbon dioxide and moderated with graphite.

Chapelcross (Annan): Four reactors; first reactor completed 1958, second, third and fourth 1959; power 225 MW(H) per reactor; fuel, coolant and moderator as Calder.

Berkeley: Power 275 MW(E).

Bradwell: Power 300 MW(E).

Dungeness: Power 550 MW.

Hinckley Point: Power 500 MW

Hunterston: Power 320 MW.

Sizewell: Power 580 MW.

Trawsfynydd: Power 500 MW.

POWER REACTORS UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Dungeness B: Power 1,200 MW, start-up date 1970; will use British-developed Advanced Gas-cooled Reactor System (A.G.R.).

Oldbury-on-Severn: Power 600 MW; start-up date 1966.

Wylfa, Anglesey: Power 1,180 MW; start-up date 1968/9.

Science Research Council: State House, High Holborn, London, W.C.1; f. 1965; Chair. Sir HARRY MELVILLE, K.C.B., F.R.S.

The Council was founded with the object of carrying out and encouraging research and development in science and technology; to provide and operate large-scale facilities for universities, technical colleges and other scientific institutions; to make grants for postgraduate instruction and to disseminate knowledge in science and technology.

Nuclear activities include the operation of a 7-GeV proton synchrotron NIMROD and a 50-MeV proton linear accelerator at the Rutherford High Energy Laboratory. A 4-GeV electron synchrotron is also under construction at the Daresbury Nuclear Physics Laboratory.

The Council is also responsible for the co-ordination of the scientific aspect of British participation in C.E.R.N.

Rutherford High Energy Laboratory: Chilton, Didcot, Berks.; Dir. Dr. T. G. PICKAVANCE.

Daresbury Nuclear Physics Laboratory: Nr. Warrington, Lancs.; Dir. Prof. A. W. MERRISON

Finance. In 1955 'A Programme of Nuclear Power' was presented to Parliament outlining provisional proposals for the building of nuclear power stations to give a capacity of 1,500-2,000 MW by 1965. In March 1957 this programme was expanded to provide 5,000-6,000 MW by the end of 1965. Later this date was advanced to the end of 1966. In 1960 the policy was again reviewed and a further slowing down was decided on. Orders for new stations will be placed at a rate of roughly one a year, which will give the country about 5,000 MW of capacity in 1968. A "Second Programme of Nuclear Power" was announced in 1964 for a further 5,000 MW of capacity by 1975. A decision on the type of reactor is expected in 1965.

Co-operation. The Atomic Energy Authority has collaboration agreements with Canada, Australia, Pakistan, U.S.A., U.S.S.R., Japan, France, Sweden, Greece, Switzerland, Spain, Denmark and Italy. The Authority is also collaborating with Belgo Nulcéaire, a consortium of Belgium firms, to develop a compact nuclear marine reactor. In 1964, UKAEA and the German company, Nuklear-Chemie und-Metallurgie G.m.b.H. formed the Nukleardienst (Nuclear Service) G.m.b.H., for the provision within the European community of a complete fuel service for advanced gas-cooled reactors.

Great Britain is a member of IAEA, ENEA, CERN, and CENTO. In February 1959 an agreement for exchange of information and designs was signed with EURATOM. Collaboration between twelve European countries in the development at the Atomic Energy Establishment, Winfrith, of the high-temperature, gas-cooled reactor experiment "DRAGON" was provided for in an agreement signed on March 23rd, 1959, under the auspices of the European Nuclear Energy Agency. This team is led by C. A. RENNIE (U.K.).

NORTHERN IRELAND

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Northern Ireland is situated in the north-east of Ireland and forms part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. It comprises the six Ulster counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone. The rest of the island is occupied by the Republic of Ireland. The climate is temperate with fairly heavy rainfall. The language is English. Out of a total population of 1,425,462 at the 1961 Census there were 498,031 Roman Catholics, and 898,984 Protestants. The flag is the union flag of the United Kingdom. The capital is Belfast.

Recent History

Northern Ireland's status as part of the United Kingdom has always been disputed by the Government of the Irish Republic who have called for the unification of the territory with the rest of the island. Extremists from the Republic who for years used violent methods in opposing Northern Ireland, called a halt to their campaign in 1962, and relations between the two Governments have since improved.

Government

Legislative functions are exercised by Parliament which consists of the Senate and the House of Commons. Parliament has power to legislate in its own area alone. All other affairs of state such as foreign policy and defence are reserved to the United Kingdom Parliament. Senators are elected by the Commons on a proportional representation basis. Members of the Commons are elected by direct suffrage for a five-year term by all citizens over 21 years. Any deadlock may be resolved by a joint session of both houses after a bill which has been passed twice by the Commons has been rejected by the Senate.

Northern Ireland also returns 12 members to the United Kingdom Parliament as a result of the reservation of certain fiscal and legislative powers to the United Kingdom Government. Executive power is exercised by the Governor and his Ministers.

Economic Affairs

The economy is based on agriculture and a rapidly developing range of manufacturing industries. Long-established manufactures include linen, ships, food, drink and tobacco products, and clothing. Latterly, there have been developments in artificial fibres, carpets, and electrical and aero engineering. Great Britain is the main market and many Irishmen find employment there.

Defence

All matters of defence come under the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom Parliament.

Transport and Communications

The Ulster Transport Authority provides services on 200 miles of railways and bus routes cover 2,700 miles. There are some 13,900 miles of roads of all classes. There are regular passenger and freight services from Larne and Belfast to British ports, as well as air services from Belfast airport (Aldergrove).

Social Welfare

There is a comprehensive system of social security similar to the National Insurance and National Health Service of Great Britain.

Education

Education is compulsory and free. There are 1,462 primary schools, 244 secondary schools, a university, and a university college. A second university is to be opened in the autumn of 1968.

Tourism

The Ministry of Commerce and Northern Ireland Tourist Board direct tourism. In 1965 there were over 400,000 visitors, mostly from the U.K.

Sport

Football and rugby are the most popular sports.

Public Holidays

The main public holidays are the same as for Great Britain with the addition of March 17 (St. Patrick's Day) and July 12 (Battle of the Boyne).

Weights and Measures

The Imperial System of weights and measures is in force (see under Great Britain).

THE CONSTITUTION

NORTHERN IRELAND is part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. By the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, the parliamentary counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone and the parliamentary boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry were established as a separate area of government under the Parliament of Northern Ireland.

LEGISLATURE

The Parliament of Northern Ireland has, with certain exceptions, general legislative and executive powers over the territory. It consists of the Senate, composed of two ex-officio members and 24 senators elected by the lower house, and the Commons, the 52 members of which are elected by popular vote. In consequence of the reservation of certain legislative and fiscal powers to the United Kingdom Government, Northern Ireland also returns 12 members of Parliament to Westminster. Money Bills must originate in the Commons, and may not be amended in the Senate. Any deadlock may be resolved by a decision of the houses in joint session after the Senate has rejected a Bill twice passed by the Commons.

The Governor, as the representative of the Crown, gives or withholds the Royal Assent to Bills passed by the Legislature of Northern Ireland. The Crown may also reserve Bills, and a Bill so reserved does not become law unless the Royal Assent is given within one year. The Governor also summons, prorogues and dissolves the Parliament.

EXECUTIVE

Executive powers are exercised by the Governor and the Ministers, who are responsible to the Legislature. Matters relating to the Crown, the defence of the realm, relations with foreign powers, coinage, wireless telegraphy and the Post Office, together with certain financial matters, are reserved to the Imperial Parliament.

Services transferred to the control of the Northern Ireland Parliament include law and order, local government, health services, National Insurance and allied services, education, agriculture, transport, electricity, fisheries, harbours and industrial development.

Fiscal powers are limited, the main powers of taxation, including the customs and excise duties, income tax, surtax, and any other taxes on income, capital, or profits, being reserved to and imposed by the Imperial Parliament, at the same rates as apply elsewhere in the United Kingdom. These taxes account for approximately 90 per cent of revenues raised from Northern Ireland and are collected in the United Kingdom Exchequer. A Joint Exchequer Board allocates this amount in three portions, the first two of which are retained in the United Kingdom Exchequer, namely the actual cost of certain reserved services in Northern Ireland, and a contribution to the cost of Imperial Services generally. The amount thus retained averaged about 40 per cent of the total in pre-war years, rose to 80 per cent during the war and is at present about 14 per cent. The remainder, known as the Residuary Share of Reserved Taxes, is paid to the Northern Ireland Exchequer to meet, with the proceeds of local revenues, the cost of services administered by the Northern Ireland Government. The locally administered taxes comprise Estate Duty, Stamp Duties, Motor Vehicle Duties and miscellaneous items.

Local administration is broadly that obtaining in Great Britain.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The judicial system of Northern Ireland, so far as the Supreme Court is concerned, is a miniature of the English system, deriving as it does from the Courts established in Ireland in 1877 on the model of the Supreme Court in England. It consists, as in England, of a High Court and a Court of Appeal, the High Court having an unlimited jurisdiction both in civil matters and, on Assize, in criminal matters also. A Court of Criminal Appeal was established in 1930, also on the English pattern. The county court system to some extent corresponds to its English prototype, with the important difference that in Northern Ireland a county court has, in addition to its civil jurisdiction, a criminal jurisdiction that in England is exercised at quarter sessions. County court judges and recorders of boroughs accordingly exercise all the jurisdiction which in England is divided. The courts of summary jurisdiction, again, originally followed the English system, but in 1935 an alteration was made whereby most of the judicial powers of justices of the peace were transferred to permanent paid officers, known as resident magistrates.

The Lord Chief Justice of Northern Ireland: The Rt. Hon. the Lord MACDERMOTT, M.C.

Lords Justices of Appeal: The Rt Hon Lord Justice Sir LANCELOT CURRAN; The Hon. Lord Justice Sir HERBERT McVEIGH.

Judges of the High Court: The Hon. Mr Justice SHEIL; The Hon. Mr. Justice LOWRY.

County Court Judges and Chairmen of Quarter Sessions: Judge ISAAC LITTLE, Q.C., Judge TOPPING, Q.C. (Belfast), Judge R. H. CONAGHAN, Q.C.; Judge W. JOHNSON, Q.C.; Judge W. B. MAGINESS, Q.C.

RELIGION

The organisation of the churches takes no account of the fact that Ireland is divided into two political entities—Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic; Armagh is the seat of both Catholic and Protestant Primates of All Ireland, and Belfast is the headquarters of the Presbyterians and Methodists.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Isle of Man is governed by its own laws. Tynwald is the administrative body, and consists of both branches of the Legislature, that is, the Legislative Council and the House of Keys, sitting together as one body, but voting separately on all questions except, in certain eventualities, the appointment of Boards of Tynwald. The House of Keys has 24 members chosen by adult suffrage for five years. The Legislative Council is composed of the Governor, the Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man, the two Deemsters, the Attorney-General, two members appointed by the Governor and five members elected by the House of Keys. Customs duties and income-tax come within the province of Tynwald, but since 1921 the Governor, who is Chancellor of the Exchequer, submits the budget estimates in private to the Keys and the Council separately before bringing the vote to Tynwald. The Isle of Man Act, 1958, gave the Tynwald greater control of Fiscal matters. An Executive Council of five members of the House of Keys and two of the Legislative Council was set up in 1961, to act with the Governor

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Isle of Man is, for legal purposes, an independent sovereign country under the British Crown with its own Legislature and its own Judiciary administering its own common or customary and statute law. The law of the Isle of Man is, in most essential matters, the same as the law of England and general principles of equity administered by the English Courts are followed by the Courts of the Isle of Man unless they conflict with established local precedents. Her Majesty's High Court of Justice of the Isle of Man is based upon the English system but modified and simplified to meet local conditions. Justices of the Peace are appointed by the Lord Chancellor of England usually on the nomination of the Lieutenant Governor. Members of the Legislative Council, the High Bailiff and the Mayor of Douglas, and the Chairman of the Town and Village Commissioners are ex-officio J.P.s.

First Deemster and Clerk of the Rolls: S. J. KNEALE, C.B.E.
Second Deemster: G. E. MOORE.

Judge of Appeal: R. M. BINGHAM, Q.C., M.P.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and the Commander-in-Chief of Jersey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign, the Commander of the Armed Forces of the Crown, and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown, and is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote. He has a veto on certain forms of legislation.

The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown, and is President both of the Assembly of the States (the Insular Legislature) and the Royal Court of Jersey. He has, in the States, a right of dissent and a casting vote.

The Deputy Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and, when authorised by the Bailiff to do so, may discharge any function appertaining to the office of Bailiff.

The Government of the Island is conducted by Committees appointed by the States. The States consist of 12 Senators (elected for six years, four retiring every second year), 12 Constables (triennial), and 28 Deputies (triennial), all elected under universal suffrage, by the people. The Dean of Jersey, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote. Permanent laws passed by the States require the sanction of Her Majesty in Council but Triennial Regulations do not.

The official language is French, but English is the language in daily use.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Justice is administered in Jersey by the Royal Court, which consists of the Bailiff or Deputy Bailiff and twelve Jurats. There is a Court of Appeal which consists of the Bailiff (or Deputy Bailiff) and two Judges, selected from a panel appointed by the Crown. A final appeal lies to the Privy Council in certain cases.

A Stipendiary Magistrate deals with minor civil and criminal cases.

THE CONSTITUTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Guernsey is the Personal Representative of the Sovereign and the channel of communication between Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Insular Government. He is appointed by the Crown. He is entitled to sit and speak in the Assembly of the States, but not to vote.

The Bailiff is appointed by the Crown and is President both of the Assembly of the States (the insular legislature) and of the Royal Court of Guernsey and has a casting vote.

The Government of the island is conducted by committees appointed by the States.

The States of Deliberation is composed of the following members:

- (a) The Bailiff, who is President ex-officio
- (b) Twelve Conscillers elected by the States of Election (elected for six years, six retiring every three years)
- (c) H.M. Attorney-General and H.M. Solicitor-General (Law Officers of the Crown), who have a voice but not a vote.
- (d) Thirty-three People's Deputies elected by popular franchise.
- (e) Ten Douzaine Representatives elected by their respective Parochial Douzaines.
- (f) Two Alderney Representatives elected by the States of Alderney.

The Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General are appointed by the Crown, and are entitled to sit and speak in the States, but not to vote.

Projets de Loi (Permanent Laws) require the sanction of Her Majesty in Council.

The function of the States of Election is to elect persons to the offices of Jurat and Consciller. It is composed of the following members:

- (a) The Bailiff (President ex-officio).
- (b) The 12 Jurats or "Jures-Justiciers".
- (c) The 12 Conscillers.
- (d) The 10 Rectors.
- (e) H.M. Attorney-General and H.M. Solicitor-General.
- (f) The 33 People's Deputies.
- (g) Thirty-four Douzaine Representatives.
- (h) Four Alderney representatives for the election of Conscillers only.

Meetings of the States and of the Royal Court formerly conducted in French, are now conducted in English, but the proceedings in both are begun and ended in French. English is the language in common use but the Norman patois is often heard in the country parishes.

VATICAN CITY STATE

(CITTÀ DEL VATICANO)

HISTORICAL NOTE

For a period of nearly a thousand years, dating roughly from the time of Charlemagne to the entry of the Italians into Rome at Porta Pia, Sept. 20, 1870, the Papacy held temporal possessions. During the process of unification the Kingdom of Italy gradually absorbed these possessions of the Pope, the States of the Church, which stretched from sea to sea across the middle of the peninsula, the process being completed by the entry into Rome of King Victor Emmanuel's troops in 1870. From 1860 to 1870 many attempts had been made to induce the Pope to surrender his temporal possessions; but regarding them as a sacred trust from a higher Power, to be guarded on behalf of the Church, he replied constantly "Non possumus." After the entry of the Royal Army into Rome he retired into the Vatican, whence no Pope issued thereafter until the ratification of the Lateran Treaty of February 11th, 1929. By the Law of Guarantees of May 1871, Italy attempted to stabilise the position of the Papacy, by recognizing the Pope's claim to use of the Palaces of the Lateran and the Vatican, the Papal villa of Castelgandolfo, and their "gardens and annexes," and to certain privileges customary to Sovereignty. This unilateral arrangement was not accepted by Pius IX, and his protest against it was repeated constantly by his successors. Until the ratification of the Lateran Treaty in 1929, relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal had changed little since the passing of the Law of Guarantees in 1871.

The Papal protest, in principle, apart from any consideration of material spoliation, was based on the Pontiff's claim for Sovereign liberty and independence, and for such a guarantee of them, both actual and apparent, as was necessary for the exercise by the Papacy of its spiritual mission and authority throughout the world. Of this it was deprived by the restriction of the Temporal Power. As things stood until 1929, the liberty and independence of the Pope was incomplete, and, lacking juridical guarantees, was at the mercy of the Italian Government. The passing of the years eliminated much of the original bitterness. In particular, Italians came to have a better understanding of the Papal claim and protest, and to realise that the position given to the Pope under the Law of Guarantees fell short in many respects of the full Sovereignty which it was necessary, from the Catholic standpoint, that he should exercise. The original aloofness, too, of Italian Catholics from national affairs was progressively modified.

The attitude of the Italian Government towards religion, the Church, and the Papacy, changed little by little, culminating in the Lateran Treaty of 1929.

Under the terms of the Lateran Treaty the Holy See was given full use of property rights in and exclusive power and sovereign jurisdiction over the Vatican State, the boundaries of which the Treaty determined. Besides the grounds used by the Pope since 1870, these boundaries were made to embrace certain extra-territorial possessions which formerly belonged to the Italian State, the whole area comprising about 160 acres. So that the world might know that the object in acquiring territory was not political power or royal splendour, the State was kept within these small limits at the express wish of the Pontiff. In international affairs the Vatican State stands as neutral and inviolable territory. Its subjects, who number about 300, most of them employees of the Vatican and their families, are voluntary subjects, possessing freedom to depart from the State at will. A special Vicar-General, assisted by a parish priest, has charge of its spiritual affairs. In 1929, for the first time in history, direct diplomatic relations between the Holy See and the Kingdom of Italy were established.

During the 1939-45 war the neutrality of the Pope and Vatican was respected by all combatants.

The new Italian Constitution of 1947 reaffirmed adherence to the Lateran Treaty of 1929.

The accession of John XXIII in 1958 marked a radical change in the approach of the Papacy to contemporary problems. In 1962 he convened the Second Vatican Council to promote reconciliation and unity among the Christian Churches. His teachings in the encyclicals Mater et Magistra in 1961 and Pacem in Terris in 1963 revealed a rational and humane approach to international and religious questions and aroused great interest in both East and West. Pope John's successor, Paul VI, pledged himself to continue his predecessor's work. In January 1964 he visited the Holy Land, thus becoming the first reigning Pope to do so in the history of Christianity, and in December 1964 attended the Eucharistic Congress in India. In October 1965 Pope Paul spoke at the opening session of the United Nations General Assembly in New York.

THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

The central government of the Catholic Church in Rome is vested in the Pope, who is supreme, and in the College of Cardinals. Canonically speaking, the Cardinals are never absent from his Holiness's side except by special permission. Actually many of them are engaged in pastoral work, which they carry on as Archbishops and Bishops in all parts of the world; but there are others who remain in Rome as the Pope's immediate advisers and these are styled Cardinals "in Curia." The Sacred College of Cardinals derives from its earliest days, when the city and, later, the neighbourhood, were apportioned among a number of bishops, priests and deacons. Until the reign of the present Pontiff, the number of Cardinals was limited by custom, but not by law, to seventy, though there were frequently less than that number. There are now 98 Cardinals. There are normally six Cardinal Bishops who are in charge of the seven suburban sees of Rome—Palestrina, Sabina, Porto and Santa Rufina, Albano, Velletri, Frascati and Ostia; this latter is held by the Dean of the Sacred College in addition to his own see. The majority of the Cardinal Priests hold titular churches in Rome, the origins of which go back to the earliest times. The administration of the affairs of the Church is carried out through a number of Sacred Congregations, each under the direction of a Cardinal, and through Tribunals and Offices and Commissions for special purposes. The Pope's representative in the ecclesiastical administration of the See of Rome is the Cardinal Vicar. His representative in affairs of ordinary administration, in Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs and in matters of Briefs to Princes, that is, in his communications with the Catholic and the outside world, is the Cardinal Secretary of State.

THE ROMAN CURIA

(Consisting of Sacred Congregations, Tribunals and Offices)

I. The Twelve Sacred Congregations

As reorganised by Pius X and recomposed by Benedict XV and embodied in the New Code of Canon Law the Roman Curia contains twelve Sacred Congregations:

- (1) The Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office, designed for the protection of faith and morals, for the judging of heresy, for the setting of doctrine and the use of indulgences, for dealing with impediments to marriage with non-Catholics, and here incorporating the old Congregation of the Index for the examination and prohibition of books dangerous to faith and otherwise pernicious. Prefect THE POPE; Sec. Cardinal ALFREDO OTTAVIANI; Assessor Mgr. PIETRO PARENTE, Tit. Archbishop of Ptolemais in Thcbiade.

ORGANISATION

THE ECCLESIASTICAL ORGANISATION OF THE CHURCH

The organisation of the Church consists of:

- (1) Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops in countries under the common law of the Church
- (2) Abbots and Prelates "nullius dioceseos"
- (3) Vicars Apostolic and Prefects Apostolic in countries classified as Missionary and under Propaganda, the former and a few of the latter having Episcopal rank.

Accuracy cannot be guaranteed for the following particulars. They are compiled from statistics gathered from different sources and dates. They will serve, however, as a reliable outline picture.

The total population of the world is estimated at 3,060,800,000, the Catholic population at 550,350,000, about 18 per cent.

There are 10 residential Patriarchates and 5 titular: 8 Patriarchates are of the Latin Rite—Constantinople (vacant), Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem, East Indies, West Indies, Lisbon, Venice, 7 are of the Oriental Rite—Alexandria (Coptic, Melchite), Antioch (Syrian, Maronite, Melchite), Babylon (Chaldean), Cilicia (Armenian).

There are 316 residential metropolitan archbishoprics, 42 residential archbishoprics (not metropolitan), and 1,283 residential bishoprics—a total of 1,651. In addition, there are 882 metropolitans, archbishops and bishops with titular sees, including prelates serving as nuncios, inter-nuncios, delegates or apostolic visitors, auxiliaries or coadjutors of residential bishops, prelates or abbots nullius, apostolic administrators or prelates of Eastern Rites with personal or territorial jurisdiction. There are 85 prelacies or abbacies nullius, 11 administrations, 216 vicariates, 115 prefectures and 6 missions or districts.

There are some 887 Titular Sees, archiepiscopal and episcopal, the former being occupied principally by Nuncios, Internuncios and Apostolic Delegates, the latter by Vicars Apostolic and by Bishops Coadjutor and Auxiliary

Radio Vatican was founded in 1931 and situated within the Vatican City. A new transmitting centre, inaugurated by Pius XII on October 27th, 1957, has been added and is located at Santa Maria di Galeria, about twelve miles north-west of the Vatican. Under a special treaty between the Holy See and Italy the site of this new centre, which covers about 1,037 acres, enjoys the same extra-territorial privileges as are recognised by international law to the diplomatic headquarters of foreign States

The station operates an all-day service, normally in thirty-one languages, but with facilities for broadcasting in at least twelve other languages on special occasions. Latin is also used extensively.

The purpose of the Vatican Radio is to broadcast Papal teaching, to provide information on important events in the Catholic Church, to express the Catholic point of view on such problems as touch upon religion and morality, but above all to form a continuous link between the Holy See and all Catholics scattered throughout the whole world.

There is no television service (March 1966)

YUGOSLAVIA

INTRODUCTORY SURVEY

Location, Climate, Language, Religion, Flag, Capital

Yugoslavia has a long western coastline on the Adriatic Sea. It is bounded to the north by Italy, Austria and Hungary, by Rumania and Bulgaria to the east, with Greece and Albania to the south. The climate is continental in the hilly interior and Mediterranean on the coast, with a steady rainfall throughout the year. The average summer temperature in Belgrade is 71°F (22°C), the winter average being 32°F (0°C). Serbo-Croat is the official language, but Macedonian and Slovene are spoken regionally. There is no state-recognised religion; 41 per cent of the population belong to the Orthodox Church and 31 per cent to the Roman Catholic Church. There are other Christian communities and numbers of Muslims and Jews. The flag consists of blue, white and red horizontal stripes, with a red star in the centre. The capital is Belgrade.

Recent History

Following the struggle of the Partisans against the German occupation during the Second World War, the Monarchy was abolished and a Republic set up in 1945 under the leadership of Marshal Tito. Refusing to accept Russian hegemony, Yugoslavia was expelled from the Cominform in 1948 after which she formed closer relations with the West. After the death of Stalin her connections with the U.S.S.R. slowly improved and in 1962 Marshal Tito, while retaining his independence, felt able to pay a friendly visit to Moscow. In 1963 a new Constitution was approved appointing Marshal Tito President for life.

Government

Yugoslavia is a Socialist Federal Republic comprising the Socialist Republics of Serbia, Croatia, Macedonia, Montenegro, Slovenia and Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Head of State is the President of the Republic, elected by the Federal Assembly, the supreme organ of power. The Assembly comprises the Federal Chamber, the Chamber of Nationalities, the Economic Chamber, the Chamber of Education and Culture, the Chamber of Social Welfare and Health and the Organisational-Political Chamber. Each Chamber has 120 Deputies.

Defence

The Republic has no defensive alliances. Military Service is compulsory for a minimum of eighteen months (Navy: two years). The Armed Forces consist of an army, navy and air force, with a total peace-time strength of 370,000. This is capable of being expanded to 1,250,000 in war-time.

Economic Affairs

More than half the population is employed in agriculture; the main crops are wheat, maize, sugar beet and potatoes. There are many forests, orchards and vineyards and abundant livestock. Yugoslavia exploits her deposits of coal, iron, copper, lead, zinc and bauxite. There are smaller resources of petroleum and uranium. Both heavy and light industry have been strenuously developed in the last fifteen years. Yugoslavia has an agreement of economic co-operation with Poland, and, since September 1964, has participated in some of the activities of COMECON.

Transport and Communications

Yugoslavia has 11,854 kilometres of railways. There are 5,014 kilometres of macadamized roads and 47,995 kilometres of metalled roads. The state airline, Yugoslavenski Aero Transport, provides internal and international services. The Yugoslav Shipping Line has an ocean-going fleet of 56 vessels totalling 250,000 tons (December 1964). The principal Adriatic ports are Rijeka, Split, Dubrovnik and Kotor. The Danube is the great inland waterway, the chief ports being Novosad and Belgrade. The Yugoslav-Rumanian Iron Gates power and navigation project on the Danube was inaugurated in September, 1964.

Social Welfare

The National Health Insurance System is compulsory and provides insurance against sickness, injury, industrial accidents and death. There are also state pensions for old age and widowhood.

Education

Elementary education is free and compulsory for eight years. There are six universities.

Tourism

Tourist features are the mountains, the great lakes of Scutari, Prespa and Ohrid in the south, the Adriatic resorts, of which Dubrovnik is the best known, the Federal capital of Belgrade and the Croatian capital Zagreb.

Nationals of the following countries do not require a visa to enter Yugoslavia: Algeria, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Italy, Morocco, Norway, Poland, Rumania, Sweden, Switzerland, Tanzania, Tunisia.

Sport

The main sports are football, athletics, swimming and basketball.

Public Holidays

January 1 (New Year's Day), May 1 (Labour Day), July 4 (Fighter's Day), November 7 (October Revolution Day), November 29 (Republic Day), December 22 (People's Army Day).

Weights and Measures

The Metric System is in force.

Currency and Exchange Rates

The currency unit is the dinar of 100 paras. In January 1966 the dinar was devalued, the new dinar being equal to 100 at the old rate.

Coins: 50 paras; 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50 old dinars.

Notes: 100, 500, 1,000, 5,000 old dinars, 1, 5, 10, 50 new dinars.

12.5 new dinars = $1 U.S.
